SUPT. OF STREETS HINDS.

The Board of Selectmen have shown a commendable disposition in their appointment of Engineer Hinds last Friday evening to the responsible position of Supt. of Streets to succeed Mr. Spates who resigned to accept the management of the Winchester Stone Company. The consolidation of these two offices will effect a saving to the town of $600, and is the first practical step toward carrying out the suggestions of a special committee favoring the consolidation of a number of town offices, and which met with so much opposition last year. Whether the move will be extended furth r later on remains to be seen.

Mr. Hinds as engineer for the sewer board and later including all the engineering work of the town, gained much practical knowledge in the building and care of the streets, and he feels confident he can give a good report of the results of his work. His appointment is for the unexpired term of Mr. Spates. He will be allowed an assistant engineer so that he may give the necessary time to the supervision of the streets, and if he makes good, he will undoubtedly be reappointed next spring.

Mr. Hinds' chief concern will be to secure capable lieutenants to look after the many details connected with the plant so that it may be kept in the highest state of efficiency. Indeed this is fully as important as the building of streets, for if the machinery is allowed to deteriorate then good results cannot be expected. No doubt he will surround himself with competent and trustworthy men, and when this is done his success as Supt. of Streets is assured.

There were a number of candidates for the position from out of town men, but after full consideration the Selectmen finally decided on Mr. Hinds, and we believe that no mistake has been made in selecting him.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

The Fortnighly will open its season, at its new meeting place, Calumet Hall, on Tuesday, Oct 9, with a lecture by Mr. Edward Howard Griggs on "Education for the Art of Life."

Members are requested to note the change to Tuesday, as the date of the first meeting.

TOO PREVIOUS.

Last Friday evening the 6.05 electric car toward Stoneham came to a stop on the turnout in front of the Baptist Church, the red light being set against further progress. As the car was only about five minutes late, passengers supposed the colored light was the neglect of the last car going to Arlington. Feeling that a long wait was before them, many of the passengers got off the car and walked to their homes, supposing that the other car was also waiting at the Forest street turnout. At about twenty minutes past six the down car came along. The conductor of this car was evidently too previous in not waiting for the up car, causing many people to walk home and others to wait on the turnout for nearly fifteen minutes.

UPHAM RENOMINATED.

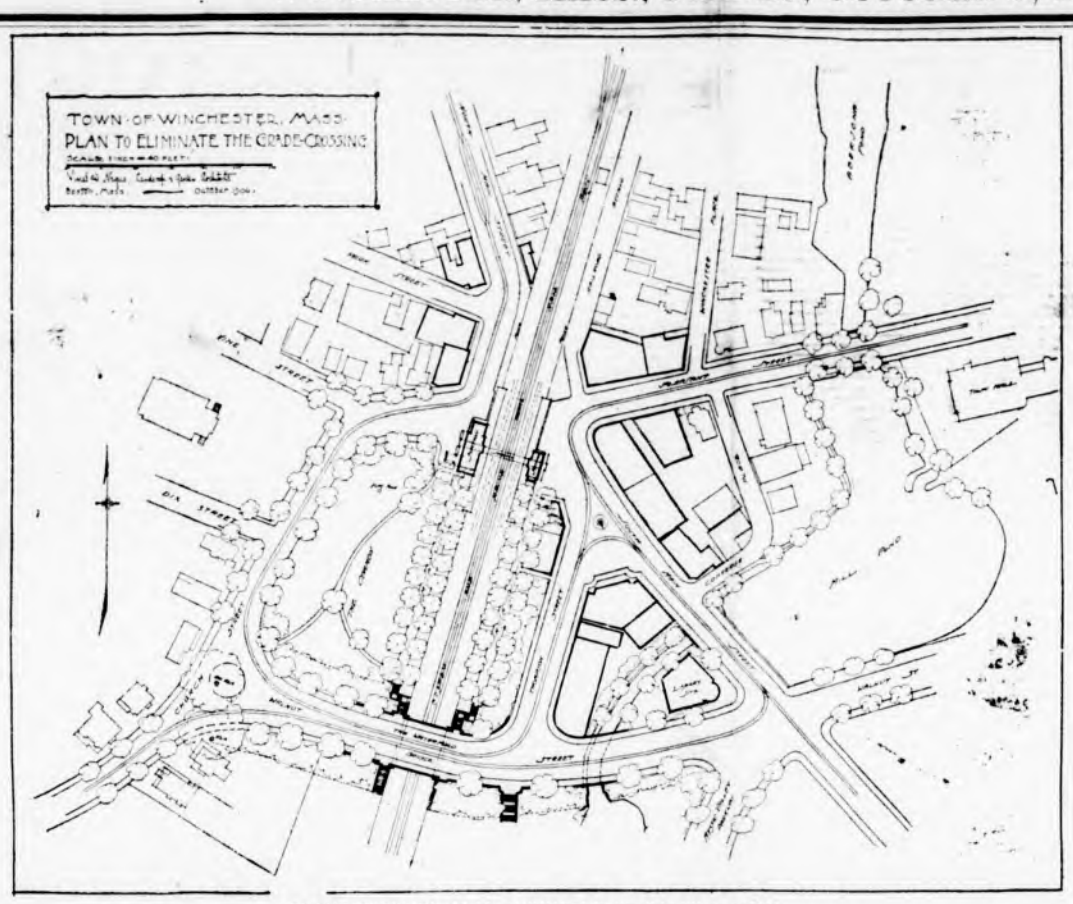

The Middlesex county Republican convention met in Odd Fellows' Hall at Lowell Tuesday.

Theodore C. Hurd of Winchester was nominated by acclamation for clerk of courts. County Treasurer Joseph O. Hayden was also renominated.

The contest for county commissioner furnished the only fight. Samuel O. Upham of Waltham, the incumbent, was placed in nomination also Leonard B. Chandler of Somerville. Upham received the nomination, getting 252 of the 336 ballots. Chandler had 84.

In the convention which followed for register of deeds, Capt. Joseph Thompson received the nomination for the North district and Edward O Childs of Newton for the South district.

GRADE CROSSING PLAN SUBMITTED BY RALPH S. VINAL

GRADE CROSSING HEARING.

Another Plan Submitted—But Little Advance Made.

Another hearing on the matter of abolishing the present grade crossing in the centre of the town was held in the Tremont Building, Boston, Wednesday forenoon. There was a fair attendance of Winchester gentlemen present, but an almost entire absence of the large property owners likely to be affected by the change, which to say the least is surprising. Chairman Wiggin of the Commission was not present, and Mr. Lord presided. When the last hearing was held in August, the statement was made by counsel for interested corporations that the indications were that the October hearing would finish up the matter. The final settlement now appears to be farther off than in August.

The entire time at the hearing was taken up to a consideration of a plan presented by Mr. Ralph S. Vinal of Glen road, of the firm of Vinal & Negus, landscape architects. As no estimate of the expense likely to be entailed by the adoption of the plan was given, Mr. Vinal was requested to have this information at the next hearing. The plan presented is similar to that prepared by Mr C. E. Redfern some two years ago with the exception that Mr. Vinal's calls for but one bridge, while that of the latter called for two.

The new plan proposes a bridge over the tracks at the station, from Walnut street to Common street. The cars from Woburn would pass along Church to Common street, thence over the bridge and Walnut street to Main street at the Unitarian Church. Returning, cars by this line would come as far up Main street as Thompson street then by way of this street to Walnut, over the bridge, Common and Church streets to Main. The Arlington cars would come to the square, then through Thompson street and over the bridge to Church street. The plan contemplates the removal of the houses on Thompson street adjoining the railroad; the vacant land remaining after widening the street to be set out with trees, the same as on Common street. Waterfield Building is to be removed, also one of the Whitney buildings. It is proposed to abandon the present station of the B. & M. and change the location to the present crossing and the erection thereon of a new station on the west side of the tracks, and a second and smaller building on the east side. A subway for foot passengers will pass under the tracks and connect with the stations. There will be a fence between the tracks to prevent people from crossing.

The assertion was made that this method of treating the abolition problem would cost only about one-half what the plan suggested by the Selectmen would.

The points brought out in favor of the Vinal & Negus plan were:

1. The work can be completed in a comparatively short time without interruption of business or traffic.
2. The cost of construction and property damage would be small.
3. The grade of the railroad track is not changed.
4. No brick or stone buildings are in any way disturbed and the only frame building of any consequence disturbed by this plan is the Waterfield building which can be moved to another location.
5. Without involving any extra outlay for the purpose the center of the town is made much more attractive than at present and a greater space is afforded for the future development of the business section.
6. The Common is not disturbed but rather improved by the slopes from the bridge giving the necessary bounding lines, and the Common is extended on the East side.

Mr. C. E. Redfern, on being requested to do so, gave an outline of his plan. The Boston & Maine Railroad did not present one, but would probably do so at the next hearing. The Chairman requested that all plans that are to be submitted should be presented at the next hearing, so that some particular one might be decided upon.

The hearing then adjourned to Nov. 17

FARMER-CAPEN.

Miss Ruth Paul Capen, daughter of the late Elmer H. Capen, former president of Tufts College, and Mr. Walter Havens Farmer of Hartford, Conn., were united in marriage on Monday evening at the Unitarian Church.

The ceremony occurred at seven-thirty, being performed by Dean Charles H. Leonard of Tufts College Divinity School assisted by Rev. William I. Lawrance, pastor of the church.

The bride was attended by Miss Rosamond E. Capen, her sister, who was the maid of honor. The five bridesmaids were the Misses, Emma Paul of Somerville, Ruth Dame and Kate Lewis of Medford, Margaret Fay of Tufts College and Alice Farmer, sister of the groom, of Hartford, Conn. Mr. Tirrell Cheeney of Chicago was the groomsman.

The wedding party entered to the strains of the wedding march, played by Mr. Charles Anthony of Tufts College. Mr. Samuel P. Capen of Clarke University gave his sister in marriage.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother in Rangeley. The ushers at both church and house were: Messrs. Field, Lebbins, Bissell and Frederic Swindell of Hartford, Conn., and Herbert Bacon and Sumner Robinson of Boston. Both the ceremony and the following reception were largely attended by friends of the couple. They will reside in Winchester upon their return from a wedding journey, and Mrs. Farmer will be at home to her friends Wednesdays in November at No. 34 Rangeley.

HOUSE ENTERED.

Some time Tuesday night sneak theives entered the house of Mr. Charles H. Chapman, corner of Highland avenue and Fells road by breaking a window in the cellar. Access was gained to the upper floors by prying open the cellar door with a spade. The house was thoroughly ransacked, and turned upside down, bureau drawers being opened with the spade. Mrs. Chapman lost a gold watch and her daughter, Miss Alice, a gold watch, three gold rings and a new coat. Also a safety razor and souvenir spoon were taken. Wednesday the coat was found in the Fells and given to the police. The police are on the trail of the thieves.

SYMMES--PRATT.

A quiet home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Pratt on Cambridge street last Wednesday evening, when their daughter, Adelaide Louise, was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Marshall Symmes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred M. Symmes. Both young people are prominently known in this town, the bride being an exceptionally accomplished pianist.

The ceremony was performed by Rev William I. Lawrance, of the Unitarian Church at eight o'clock. The services were of a simple nature and witnessed only by relatives of the bride and groom. Miss Barbara Pratt, cousin of the bride, was the little flower girl.

Upon their return from a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Symmes will reside at No. 34 Rogers avenue, West Somerville.

LADIES' FRIENDLY WINTER CALENDAR.

The Ladies' Friendly Society has issued the following calendar: Oct. 11, readings from writings of Paul Laurence Dunbar by the Rev. W. I. Lawrance and Mrs. G. H. Root; 25, benefit for Visiting Nurse Association; Nov. 8, selections from Emerson and Browning, by Miss Sarah E. Miller of Boston; 22, sewing for Christmas sale; December 13, Christmas sale; January 10, "A visit to the Indians of Sierra del Na-Yarit in Mexico," the Rev. Joel Metcalf of Taunton; 28, sewing meeting; April 11, "Jewish customs and ceremonies," Mrs. Goldstein of Roxbury; 25, cake sale.

John Sullivan of Nelson street, clerk for J. C. Adams has resigned and will accept a position with S. D. Leland in his new factory.

TWO ITALIANS ROBBED.

Two Italians reported at the police station last Friday night that they had been held up by two men on the railroad track at the rear of the Montvale Cemetery about 7 o'clock that evening and at the muzzle of a pistol robbed of their money. The Italians came out from Boston to engage work at the Winchester Brick and Rock Co. at the Highlands and not being able to see the man in charge, started down the tracks intending to go back to that city. When they had reached a point opposite the cemetery they were accosted by two men, one being a negro. One of the men pointed a pistol at them and demanded their money. One Italian gave up, he claims, $250 while the other handed over $2. Securing the money the men departed, while the two victims made their way to the station house and informed the police of the hold up. The men accompanied by officers went back to the scene of the robbery and after searching the entire neighborhood found no trace of the robbers.

MRS. GEORGE D. STEVENS KILLED.

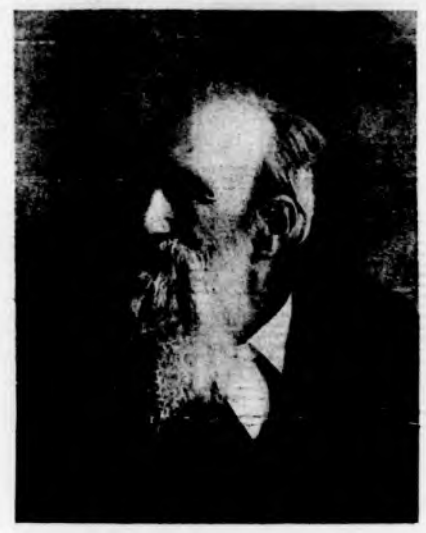

Reports this morning state that not only was Mr. George D. Stevens of Wildwood street seriously hurt in the train wreck at Lansingburg, N. Y., last evening, but that Mrs. Stevens was killed.

As yet the truth of this report has not been absolutely confirmed.

Mr. Stevens suffered a compound fracture of the ankle and a broken arm. The accident was caused by a rear end collision of two trains, a regular express and an extra military.

SAIL ON CANOPIC.

Among the passengers to sail on the ss. Canopic tomorrow will be Mrs. Samuel W. McCall and her three daughters, Ruth, Margaret and Katherine. Italy will be the first stopping place, and the party plan to spend a year in Europe.

EDWARD A. BRACKETT, WHO IS YOUNG AT 88.

88th BIRTHDAY.

Edward A. Brackett, of this town observed his 88th birthday on Monday at his home on Highland avenue. The anniversary was quietly observed although Mr. Brackett is as active and as bright as he was twenty-five years ago. For many years it has been his custom to observe the event in a quiet manner, receiving his friends and neighbors, and giving a luncheon at noon to his fellow members of the Mass. Fish and Game Commission. This year the day was passed as usual, and the noon hour saw a congenial gathering at his table for the usual luncheon. The party included, besides Mr. Bracketts' fellow commissioners, some of the former members of the board and a few personal friends. Among the guests were Prof F. W. Putnam of Harvard College, Capt. I. C. Young of Boston, Dr. George W. Field of Sharon and W. R. Collins and Walter M. Brackett of Boston, the latter being a brother of the host.

Mr. Brackett is still enjoying good health. He states that rheumatism has commenced to bother him a little, but that mentally he is still as active as ever. With his cheerful disposition and active daily exercise, he promises to continue to enjoy his annual b rthday anniversary for many more years.

He is the oldest member of the Mass. Fish and Game Commission, and the oldest member of any similar board in the United States.

Edwin A Brackett was born in Vassalboro, Me., Oct. 1, 1818. He is the son of Reuben and Elizabeth (Starkey) Brackett. His education was received in the common schools of Vassalboro and in the Friends' Academy at Providence. His early life was devoted to sculpture and painting, and he is also the author of several volumes of prose and poetry.

During the civil war he served as first lieutenant and quartermaster of the 1st Mass. cavalry, receiving his appointment from Gov. Andrew.

In June, 1869, he was appointed a member of the state commission on inland fisheries, and from 1873 to 1880 served as chairman and executive officer of the board.

On Mr. Brackett's extensive estate, Mongolian pheasants are raised for stocking the state preserves and one of the state hatcheries from which thousands of trout fry are distributed each year, is located nearby.

He has resided in this town since 1843, living in his home on Highland avenue, designed and built by himself.

REV. SIDNEY B. SNOW ORDAINED.

Sidney Bruce Snow, Harvard 1900, formerly of Boston and previously a resident of Winchester, was ordained yesterday (Sunday) to be minister of the Unitarian Church of Palo Alto, Cali. The sermon on this occasion was preached by Rev. George W. Stone, field secretary of the American Unitarian Association, and the prayer of ordination was given by the Rev. John Howland Lathrop of the First Unitarian Church at Berkeley, Cal. Dr. Karl G. Rendtorff extended the welcome in behalf of the congregation and the charge to the young minister was given by Rev. Bradford Leavitt of the First Unitarian Society in San Francisco, who extended the right hand of fellowship. President David Starr Jordan of Stanford University delivered the address of welcome and the charge of the people was given by Rev. Earl M. Wilbur, dean of the Pacific Unitarian School for the Ministry. Rev. Mr. Snow pronounced the benediction. After his college days, before beginning his studies for the ministry, Mr. Snow was a member of the Transcript staff.—[Boston Transcript.] Mr. Snow is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Snow of Ridgeway, and well known to the majority of Winchester people.

REV. C. H. JOHNSON'S TOUR IN THE SOUTH.

My trip South has been the most profitable I have ever taken. I have been most favorably impressed with the condition of the Southern Negro and see the hand of God leading him on to a most victorious destiny. No power can stop that onward march to a magnificent future.

Personal liberty and private property have been the chief causes of their present triumph over the savagery of prehistoric men. The white men who can do the most good for the Negro, who can aid him in his toilsome march to better material and intellectual conditions are the Southerners, who are his neighbors. It is one of the most encouraging signs of the time that there is growing up in the South a body of leading white men who are interested in the future interests of the Negro race.

WINCHESTER COUNTRY CLUB.

A bogy handicap match was played at the Winchester Country Club last Saturday, three quarters regular handicap, and resulted as follows:

H W Whitten	17	3 up

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Herrick have returned from Lake Sunapee.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Miss Laliah Pingree, a former resident of Winchester, and prominent in philanthropic and educational work in Boston and a member of the Boston school committee, died in that city Tuesday. Her father years ago carried on the dry goods business in the old Lyceum Building in this town, and is well remembered by the older residents.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter I. Ailman have taken rooms on Arlington street, Boston.

Mr. Royal A. Davis of Fairmount street, Woburn, the expert checker player has an apple tree in bloom. The tree is twenty-one years old and remarkably prolific, yielding a crop each year and has already borne apples this season on the identical limb which is now in blossom.

President Charles L. White of Colby college, who is to deliver the address at the 125th anniversary exercises of the Baptist Church next Sunday morning was a graduate of the Woburn High school, class of '83, and son of Mrs. White of Forest street this town.

The patent leather factory of Patrick Haley on Canal street is being painted. A new boiler room has been added to the plant.

Considerable excitement was caused in in the centre this morning when a locomotive brought a car from Woburn which was attached to the eight o'clock Boston train. The 7 38 for Boston was delayed, and as is usually done, a single car was sent down from Woburn. Considerable shifting was done, and the early Montreal express allowed to proceed ahead of the eight o'clock, causing many people to believe that some one had been killed or that there was a wreck.

Mr. John Hurley of Lake avenue died at his home last night.

Mr. A. S. F. Kirby has leased a house in Rangeley, taking possession yesterday.

A Japanese party will be given at the home of Miss Rice, 534 Washington street by the W. I. G. S. of the Second Congregational Church, Oct. 12, from 3 to 5 30 p. m. and from 7 30 to 10 p. m. Ice cream, cake and candy will be on sale. Invitation is extended to all.

HERBERT S. RILEY NOMINATED FOR SENATOR.

At the Republican Senatorial Convention held in Boston Wednesday afternoon Mr. Herbert S. Riley of Woburn was given the nomination after 36 ballots had been taken, the convention being in session until after 7 o'clock in the evening. It was the same old story with Medford—a bitter factional fight which caused that city to lose all chance of securing the nomination, the same as in years past. Mr. Riley has served with credit in the lower branch of the Legislature and his selection is an admirable one in every respect.

WHAT ELECTRICITY IS DOING.

Electricity has already been so generally adopted to take the place of daylight, that but little consideration is now given to whether the sun will shine in a building or not. In fact it no longer matters whether the sun shines at all during the day.

Women do not hesitate to go shopping on a cloudy day; they can choose their fine silks or match delicate tints as well by the glow of the arc lamp as by the rays of the sun.

So too, the electric light has proved a great innovation in photography. It is but a few years since persons wishing to have their pictures taken not only had to sit in a strained position before the camera for what seemed to be an intolerable length of time, but both the photographer and the prospective customer kept their "weather" eyes on the heavens in order to get a "sunshiny day."

Persons at work from early morning to evening either were forced to take a day off or arrange far sittings on Sunday or a Holiday, only to be otten disappointed by having their selection ot the time fall upon a cloudy day. Electricity has removed all this difficulty. Pictures now may be taken day or night, rain or shine. Sundays or Holidays. An arc lamp has been perfected which is adapted to the kind of current supplied by an electrical company and many are already in use in the territory reached by the Edison Electric Illuminating Company in Boston.

For taking pictures these arc lamps are hung at a proper height with relation to the camera and the sitter, and the bright flame is reduced in force by hanging a sack of heavy bleached sheeting about the lamp. This allows only the proper coloring and quantity of light to fall upon the negative and the person whose picture is to be taken. This is exactly the same principle that is followed by the photographer when using sunlight for his pictures.

Everyone will remember the experience in the gallery when the photographer in preparation for the picture went about the room with a long pole, poking the curtains to and fro to shut out the sun from the sky-light.

Full time negatives can be made in a fraction of a second or large groups in about four seconds by the use of the arc lamp. For printing from negatives it is no longer necessary to fill the windows of a photographic studio with unsightly frames and wait for the dallying sunlight to produce the photographs.

The arc lamp has been successfully adapted to the purpose ot the printing. The lamps is supsended inside of a hood or cabinet of octagonal or hectagonal shape, which will turn around the light. Each cabinet is fitted with frames onto which the plates and photo printing paper can be fastened and the finishing done rapidly. If the frames have been filled once, it is possible for an attendant sitting beside the cabinet to remove the completed prints and insert fresh paper about as fast as each frame can be brought into position.

This invention does away with the necessity of Sunday appointments unless the customer prefers such times as the photographs can be taken late at night as well as in the daytime. Photographic work can also be turned out more quickly and the annual Christmas-time rush need no longer be dreaded.

An extremely useful application of the arc lamp is in the making of blue prints, such as are used in factories, machine shops, etc., as it avoids the delays occasioned by lack of sufficient natural light during cloudy days and in the evenings.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

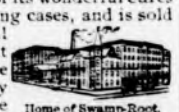

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

HOOSAC TUNNEL EXCURSION, SATURDAY, OCT. 6.

$2.00 Round Trip via Boston & Maine R. R.

On Saturday, the Boston & Maine Railroad will run one of its most delightful tall excursions. This trip is through the beautiful Hoosac Country and Deerfield Valley to North Adams, where an opportunity is presented to climb Old Greylock, or to visit the many interesting points of the Hoosac Mountains and the Taconic Range. This affords also a grand chance to see the wonderful piece of engineering, the famous Hoosac Tunnel. Should you desire, you can leave the train at Hoosac Tunnel Station and make connection with the Hoosac Tunnel & Wilmington Railroad for a trip through the most beautiful portion of the upper Deerfield Valley to Wilmington, Vt. Wilmington is a beautiful place for a day's visit, and at the old-fashioned hotel, Child's tavern, a delightful dinner can be procured. The round trip rate to Wilmington, Vt., from Hoosac Tunnel Station is 50 cents. The round trip rate for the excursion from Boston, including a stop-off at the Tunnel and a trip to North Adams, is $2.00. Tickets are on sale at Boston & Maine Railroad City Ticket Office, 322 Washington street, up to 5.00 p. m., October 5, and at Union Station until departure of train, October 6. Special train will leave Boston & Maine, North Station, at 8.30 a. m., returning, leave North Adams at 4 30 p. m., stopping at Hoosac Tunnel Station each way, or returning on regular train, October 7 or 8. Special train will stop at Waltham in both directions, but tickets will be on sale only at Boston.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The Middlesex annual convention ot the W. C. T. U. at Medford Hillside was attended by six ladies from Winchester. The Rev. C. H. Temple pastor of the Universlist Church gave a very cordial greeting to the convention and later in the day sang a song most acceptably. In addition to election of officers and delegates to the National Convention, reports were given of the departments of Work among Sailors, Temperance Work in Sunday Schools, Loyal Temperance Legion and Fairs and Open Air meetings. In each there had been some advance. Rev. W. W. Campbell spoke in the afternoon of the Hopeful side of the Temperance question.

An interestesting account of what has been done at the Ella M. Thacker tent at Fort Riley, Kansas, during the past two months appears in the Union Signal.

Early in June Chaplain John T. Axton of the 18th Infantry, anticipating the needs of the men began to plan for the establishment of a large tent which should be a general place of resort with wholesome amusement for the men when off duty. Since the government does not make provisions for the supplies needed he asked for the help and co-operation of the W. C. T. U. in the several states represented by the soldiers,—10,000 men from Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Minnesota, Iowa, Arkansas and Oklahoma The National W. C. T. U. through its president, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens approved the plan and sent substantial aid and Mrs. Ella M. Thatcher, National Supt. of work among Soldiers and Sailors, has been on on the ground, doing all in his power for the comfort and well being of the soldiers. Without her knowledge, the tent was named for Mrs. Thatcher. It has a good floor with an organ, stereopticon, graphophone, music-box and writing materials. Plenty of ice water is turnished. It is the only place in camp where the men can sit on chairs. The meetings, gospel, temperance and social are literally packed. The tent holds over 1,000 and the flaps are raised where at least 1,000 stand outside.

The Catholic chaplain from Fort Des Moines said to Mrs. Thatcher, "You will never know the good that you have done here; keeping the men from going outside the camp means so much."

The next meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be Friday, Oct. 12, at 3 p. m., in the Congregational Church vestry. Let there be a full attendance to hear what plans may be made by the State Annual Convention at Worcester for the coming year's work.

SUES B. & N. R. R.

A civil suit has been brought by Jame McLaughlin against the Boston & Northern St. R. R. for alleged damages for personal injuries received at the time the buildings were being moved from the site of the new parochial school in Woburn, early last summer, was opened in the District Court last Thursday and continued to the following day. Mr. McLaughlin was driving on Main street in Woburn when a broken trolley wire became tangled in the wheels of his carriage, overturning it and throwing him to the ground severely injuring him.

Marshall Field's executors must pay taxes on $180,000,000 while he only paid on $1,500,000 while living. The world commends loudly the business acumen which will make possible the collection of such wealth, but is strangely silent or unconcerned when it finds its idol has been cheating it all the while.

CEMENT BASES FOR WOODEN TELEGRAPH POLES.

Up to date, wooden telegraph poles remain in most countries the cheapest in first cost and in many respects as desirable as any. The question of durability, however, has been a sore point to those in charge ot equipment and maintenance. All sorts of preservative solutions and all kinds of treatment therewith—pressure, vacuum, combination of the two, etc., have been tried, but the wooden mast still remains more perishable than the iron, and its renewal means an expensive piece of work, outside of the cost of the pole itself. Happily, however, a new idea has been evolved from the depths of some one's moral consciousness or the heights of his inventive faculties, and according to which not only new wooden poles may be made more durable, but those which are already rotten at the base may be utilized to advantage and given a longer second life than the first. What is particularly gratifying to telegraph and telepnone companies is the fact that this process is not patented, and from the point of view of first cost not too burdensome.

The process consists in mounting the pole in a socket of cement beton, with which, however, it does not come in direct contact. When we say "in a socket" we err in the matter of technical accuracy; for in the later forms of mounting there is a space between the foot of the wooden pole and the top of the cement base. The pole is attached to the base by four iron splice-plates or fish-plates. The cement base stands 8 to 10 inches above the ground level, and is a prism of the same diameter as the pole which it has to carry. On account of the severe leverage tending to break it off, it is strengthened with iron in the well-known manner of Monier or Coignet. The attachment of a wooden pole to such a foot takes only about twenty minutes; and the same is true in the matter of replacing one pole by another. To put a cement base on an old pole with a rotten foot the latter is sawed off about 8 to 10 inches above the ground and without removing the wires lifted a couple feet away and leaned to one side; the old rotten foot is then removed, the hole somewhat enlarged, the ready-prepared cement stump or base is set in the hole and well rammed in and the old pole then attached to the cement base by the fish-plates, leaving say two inches between the two. The life of a pole thus mounted is reckoned at sixteeen years. As regards the resistance of the cement base to breakages--that has been settled beyond question by the simple means of attaching a rope to the top of several poles and pulling horizontally thereon until something gave way. That "something" was in every case the wooden pole, and the break took place in every instance just where it was expected, namely, right above the cement base, or rather the fish-plate.

The bases are molded in a plain prismatic box, well rammed in, and left two or three days in the mold to set; they are then firm enough to handle without danger of injury. The bases are left to dry another week after removing them from the mold.—[Scientific American.

JAYNES' TOOTH BRUSHES

are made in a large variety of shapes to suit the individual needs, because we know that a tooth-brush must fit the formation of the teeth in order to clean them thoroughly and prevent decay. Our English-made brush is made in all sizes and styles. The bristles are of the finest grades, ranging from very soft to very hard, and are securely fastened by wire.

Price, 30 cents

Jaynes' Special Hygienic Tooth-brush

is the most durable tooth-brush made. Constructed to fit the contour of the mouth, each tuft of bristles is pointed to reach between the teeth while the long bristles at the end of the brush thoroughly clean the back teeth. Holes drilled in the back of the brush ventilate and keep the bristles clean and sweet.

Price, 35 cents. Three for $1.00

If the bristles come out we will give a new brush free.

We carry all makes of tooth-brushes at prices ranging from 5c. to 47c.

The ingredients of our own preparations and all drugs and chemicals sold by us are subjected to the most thorough tests by our analytical chemist, Prof. W. L. BOSTON LETTER.

How Moran In His Fight Utilized the Reform Wave.

REAL REFORMERS AND FAKERS.

Strong Protest Among Democrats Against Moran.

The political situation on the Democratic side in Massachusetts has crystalized to such an extent that the nomination of John B. Moran as the candidate of that party for governor is now beyond question. The conservative Democrats are willing to turn over the management of the campaign to Mr. Moran and his friends and let them see what they can accomplish. The situation is a most peculiar one. A tremendously large element in the party does not desire Mr. Moran as their candidate for governor and many certainly will not vote for him.

A wave of reform has been sweeping over the country. It has become a fashion for the press to expose dishonesty in business and in political life. The people are beginning to realize that they may have good government and honest administration of large business interests if they choose to enforce their will, and measures looking towards improvement of conditions are being everywhere discussed. It is a hopeful sign, perhaps one of the most hopeful signs of our times. A few great leaders have appeared, men like Roosevelt and Folk, who have led in the fight for honest government and who have been wise enough to utilize the enthusiasm of the people for reform. All this is very encouraging and augurs well for the future of democratic institutions.

But a curious anomaly is beginning to be played. This new enthusiasm of the people for clean government is being utilized by unscrupulous men for their own purposes. The discontent with conditions as they are and the restlessness of the people under machine rule have been used by certain men now assuming importance in political life to further their own ambition. With the cry of "Down with the machine," they are attempting to smash existing political organizations and to substitute for them a machine of their own.

The Real and the False

Roosevelt and Folk are the type of the real reformers. Hearst and Moran are the type of those who masquerade as reformers in order to gain advantage for themselves.

Both Hearst and Moran have split their party in order to build up their own machines, and, knowing that they cannot carry their own party, they look about for issues which will bring them votes. The most favorable issues of the day are honest government, and some form of regulation of wealth, and these are in the main the issues that these two men pretend to stand for.

Is the movement sincere? Take, for instance, Hearst; does any one who knows the private and public life of Hearst for a moment suppose that he can represent the honest ideas of the American people? Can it be possible that a man who has derived his fortune from capitalistic enterprises, who draws a large income from them, and who uses his money as he has done, is sincere in denouncing capital?

In New York the reputable men of both parties have repudiated Hearst. In Massachusetts the Democrats whose names are most respected for honesty have repudiated Moran and his methods. It has never been charged that Mr. Moran has used money to obtain his ends. His method of procedure is quite different, though hardly likely to appeal any the more to the conscientious people of Massachusetts. Ask any man, Republican or Democrat, who knows the conditions, and he will tell you that Mr. Moran's procedure has been very much as follows:

Moran's Advertising Methods

Mr. Moran being a very clever man, and understanding thoroughly the public, and the tendency of the times, knew that the first thing necessary was to be spoken of. He came practically unknown to the office of district attorney. At the end of a short time his name was in the mouths of everyone, owing to his attack on all the large and reputable hotels in Boston. It was noted, however, by representatives of the temperance people in Massachusetts that saloons which maintained screens were left unmolested. There was no notoriety in enforcing the law against obscure saloons. Thus step No. 1, notoriety, was achieved. Step No. 2 was to give the general impression that all existing political organizations were dishonest. The district attorney therefore summoned before the grand jury, after a very cleverly advertised campaign against corruption in the legislature, every member of the general court, thereby planting in every town and hamlet in Massachusetts a feeling of distrust of their representative. The seed of distrust is sown, the matter goes no further, men have no opportunity to justify themselves, and the bad impression remains. The district attorney then summoned before the grand jury members of state committees, senators, congressmen, mayors, aldermen, with the object of giving the impression that all representatives of the people are dishonest.

This having been accomplished, he devotes himself to such matters as will strike public attention. The routine of the office is neglected and the part of the court house where the district attorney's quarters are situated becomes the centre of sensational news.

If the activity of the district attorney were directed towards the furtherance of good government, the people of Massachusetts might well rejoice, but those who are best qualified to know believe that Mr. Moran has been using his official position to the advance of personal political success.

Knows Democrats' Weaknesses

Under the guise of investigating into the public conduct of various public officials, he has managed to get a vast amount of information about men prominent in the Democratic party. It is well known that many prominent Democratic politicians are not without reproach, and that they perhaps sometimes have brought themselves within the range of the criminal law. If Mr. Moran were using this information for the purification of public life and for the punishment of criminals, the claim of his supporters that he is restoring to the grand jury one of its functions might be supported. But there is a strong suspicion among those who are best acquainted with conditions in Boston, a suspicion which more reputable Democratic leaders do not hesitate to declare openly to be a fact, that this information is being used by the district attorney as a club with which to frighten his enemies and compel them to support him.

Mr. Moran cannot carry his own party. He must, in order to be elected, win over Republican votes. Unless he has succeeded in deceiving the conscience of Massachusetts, unless he has been able to make the people at large believe in his honesty of purpose, he cannot win.

It is not too much to say that reputable and well informed people of both political parties repudiate Mr. Moran and his tactics. For the first time in the history of Massachusetts an officer of justice has misused his position. The men with whom Mr. Moran has connected himself politically do not bear an enviable reputation. Nothing could harm the commonwealth more than to have a man of Mr. Moran's character in the governor's chair.

Will Fire First Gun

The Republican state convention will be held in Boston on Oct. 5. The Republican club of Massachusetts will open the state campaign on Monday evening, Oct. 8, by a mammoth dinner and rally in Symphony hall, with United States Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, Congressman Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors, probably Congressman Charles E. Littlefield of Maine, and Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., as speakers. Provision has been made for seating 1200 people at the dining tables and the balcony will be filled by the general public.

Senator Beveridge is one of the most eloquent speakers in the country, and Congressman Burton is also a fine orator, and, as everybody knows, Mr. Littlefield is one of the ablest debaters on the Republican side in the lower house of congress. There is a tremendous interest in the campaign and it is intended to make this event the biggest and most successful of the entire canvass. Altogether, three or four thousand people will listen to these splendid speakers. The sale of tickets for the dinner is limited to members only, until Wednesday, Oct. 3, when the general public will have an opportunity to purchase them.

CUNNING ANIMALS.

Those That Feign Death For the Sake of Protection.

The habit of feigning death for the sake of protection can be observed among many of the lower animals—animals which differ widely in family, genus and species. Indeed, this habit is to be observed in creatures microscopic in size and of exceedingly low organization, as well as in those as high in the scale of animal life as man himself, for even man does not hesitate on occasions to avail himself of this natural subterfuge when he thinks it will aid in the preservation of his life.

With the aid of the microscope one can observe and study the natural history of the minute animal world, which otherwise would remain a closed and unread volume. This instrument has shown me beyond cavil that creatures as low in the scale as actinophryans, very minute, microscopic animalcules, practice death feigning when surprised by an enemy from which they cannot otherwise escape. Thus I have, says a naturalist, repeatedly seen actinophryans fold their delicate, hairlike legs or cilia and sink to the bottom of their miniature lake (a drop of water) when approached by a water louse, which preys upon them. They remain to all appearances absolutely without life until the water louse swims away, when they unfold their cilia and go back to their feeding grounds—a bit of water weed or moss or decayed wood.

EIGHT DAY CLOCKS.

The Reason They Are Not Made to Run Just a Week.

The French have a fashion of expressing an indefinite but short period of time by the phrase "about eight days." Under similar conditions we would say "about a week." The French method seems unnatural, ours natural, for a week is a distinctly recognized period. We believe there is only one way in which we use the eight day period, and that is in making clocks.

Did it ever occur to you why we have what is called an eight day clock and not one made to run exactly seven days? There is a good reason for it. A clock that is made to run eight days is pretty sure to be wound on a certain day of the week, for it would be almost impossible for any one to remember to wind it on every eighth day. Therefore the interval between windings is seven days, precisely as the maker desired and expected.

The reason is that a clock runs better when it is not allowed to run down, or even nearly so. The same plan is followed in making a watch; it will run for thirty hours, but as nearly every man winds his watch at the same hour every day or night, the spring is never fully exhausted. Regularity in winding is one of the best means of keeping a timepiece in order.

The Opal.

It was Sir Walter Scott who helped, in "Anne of Geierstein," to arouse the fears of the superstitious concerning the wearing of that very beautiful stone, the opal, and it was a German dealer in gems who fostered that fear very successfully for other ends than those of romance. He came to England years ago, we are told by a jeweler, to fill an order from one of the royal families in Germany—a wedding order, if I remember rightly. Opals were then high. He had printed the story that opals were unlucky and spread the report diligently. In a short time the price went down, and he was enabled to fill his order and make a handsome profit.—Westminster Gazette.

Jury Was Experienced.

"Flatman, I hear you were arrested the other day for insulting and browbeating a janitor. How did you come out?"

"I was tried for it and acquitted."

"On the ground that it was justifiable?"

"No; the jury couldn't be made to believe such a thing was possible."—Chicago Tribune.

All the good qualities of Ely's Cream Balm, so id, are found in Liquid Cream Balm, which is intended for use in atomizers. That it is an unfailing cure for Nasal Catarrh is proved by an ever-increasing mass of testimony. It does not dry out nor rasp the tender air-passages. It allays the inflammation and goes straight to the root of the disease. Obstinate old cases have been cured in a few weeks. A Hard Shot.

A prominent lawyer in Ohio, who was very eccentric, always rubbed his hands and went through several other movements before speaking. One day while in court a younger lawyer, after seeing him do this several times, got up and did it, too, in a very slow and deliberate manner, and, after saying what he was going to, sat down, whereupon the older man got up and said, "That young man acts like a good lawyer, but he talks like a fool."

An Odd Argument.

Here is a knotty problem suggested by Sir Henry Roscoe in his autobiography. Two men argued as to whether oil or water were the lighter. The first man contended that the oil must be lighter, as it floats upon water. And then the unscientific man triumphed with the argument that oil must be the heavier because it keeps the water down.

Libeled London.

When the most has been said against London smoke and London fog, against the dirt laden atmosphere and the noise and worry of the metropolis, it is still true that there are healthy people in the capital. London has not perhaps deserved all the hard things that have been said of it.—London Country Gentleman.

Qualified.

Baron—You have called to secure the position of porter? Applicant—Yes, sir. Baron—Was there not some one in the anteroom as you came in? Applicant—There was, sir. There was a man with a bill against you. Herr Baron, but I threw him out.—Fliegende Blatter.

Ducal Morality.

One never hears of a duke going wrong. Every one bearing any other title in the peerage may be perhaps subjected to the temptations of "the world, the flesh and the devil," but a duke never! Indeed, the old Scotsman's verdict that dukes are "verra, verra respectable people" seems one about which there can be no doubt.—London Tatler.

"You don't have to pay nothin' for lightnin'," answered Johnny.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Municipal Insurance.

The agitation for municipal insurance is becoming quite prominent at the present time and appears to be making considerable headway. Frequent increases in rates are making the cost a real hardship to merchants and owners of business property. There does not appear to be good reason for the advancement of rates as the fire losses of the companies in Massachusetts have only been about $20,000,000 while the companies have taken $68,000,000 in premiums and this naturally causes the people who pay premiums to become dissatisfied.

WATER IN THE HILL DISTRICT.

The total destruction of the Cox house in the Hill district because of there being no water, is an indication that in the near future steps will have to be taken to extend the town water to that district. The standpipe is already there, but to lay the pipe will require considerable hard digging and blasting and entail much expense. In the next few years we look to see many handsome residences there, for it is a beautiful section of the town. The people over there have been pretty patient for years, having paid their taxes and remained silent, but the onward march of building will yet give them all the benefits now enjoyed by their more fortunate townspeople.

Paying for the Neglect.

Many people were much surprised last week when they received bills from the town for cleaning their trees of the gypsy and brown tail nests last winter and spring. These people last winter contracted with parties to clean their trees for a stipulated amount, and now that they are to be called upon again to open up their purses, they are a little indignant. And so they have a right to be. If a man agrees to thoroughly clean the trees on an estate, he should be compelled, because of his neglect to properly do the work, pay for the additional work done by the Tree Warden A large part of the troubles in the moth work, broadly speaking, has come from the careless work of contractors, and in some cases, even, their almost criminal neglect. If a property owner pays out good money for the cleaning of his estate he should receive his money's worth in the services rendered and not be compelled to pay a second time.

Those who employ contractors should insist that the work be inspected by the Tree Warden or his men, before paying the bill. Unless the contractors do their work thoroughly, owners of infested estates will be compelled in justice to themselves to leave the work to the care of the town men and pay the town for the same. By doing this, there will be but one charge, instead of two.

HON. SAMUEL W McCALL WHO HAS BEEN NOMINATED CONGRESSMAN FOR THE EIGHTH TIME.

CONGRESSMAN McCALL RENOMINATED.

The Eighth District Republican Congressional convention was held at Citizens Hall, Somerville, Wednesday afternoon. Considering that there was no contest, the attendance of delegates was very large, and this can be taken as a personal tribute to the popularity of Mr. McCall. Many delegates were present who attended the convention that first nominated Mr. McCall fourteen years ago, and some of them have attended every meeting during that time. Mr. Fred H. Dallinger was chosen chairman and C. D. Rooney secretary. In a very flattering speech, Ex-Mayor Glines of Somerville nominated Mr. McCall, and Mr. Hopewell of Cambridge seconded the motion. He was then unanimously nominated by acclamation. On entering the hall Mr. McCall was given an ovation. In accepting the nomination, he referred to the work of the last Congress, and also the questions of reciprocity and revision of the tariff, and again proclaimed his well known views on these two important questions. His remarks made a favorable impression on the delegates and at the conclusion he was given generous applause. After chosing a district committee, of which Mr. C. D. Rooney was continued a member, the convention adjourned.

New Fire Engineer.

Engineer Barrett! We promise the readers of the STAR a snap shot picture of this gentleman taken the first time he appears at a fire in full uniform. It is expected, however, that he will be more prominent as the financial agent of the department than as a fighter of fires. Having a strictly business man on the Board of Engineers dates back some few years, when Mr. T. B. Cotter was appointed. He was followed by Mr. D. B. Badger, and now it is Mr. Barrett, cashier of the local National Bank. Having such a man on the Board is a good thing as it relieves the other two engineers of much responsibility and gives them more time to attend to the practical workings of the department.

A BAD ACCIDENT.

Miss Mary E. Griffin, 19 years of age, who lives over the Woburn line, on Cambridge street received a bad fracture of the thigh Wednesday afternoon by being struck by a flying stone from a blast, set off by employees of the water department, who were working on a main near the residence of C. H. Gustin, on Cambridge street.

The rock, which was said to weigh about 20 pounds, was hurled about 300 feet over a house and struck Miss Griffin, who was in the yard. After being temporarily cared for she was taken to the Mass. Gen. Hospital where she is reported doing nicely.

This is the first accident of this kind that has happened since the water works were established here. All precautions were taken as usual to protect the broken stones from flying, but this stone succeeded in getting away from under the heavy covering.

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

The Sunday afternoon service at five o'clock will be resumed next Sunday.

The first meeting of the Woman's Guild will be on Tuesday at half past two, at Mrs. Suter's, 113 Church street.

The Wednesday afternoon services will not be resumed until All Saints Day.

MUSIC AT THE UNITARIAN CHURCH

At the Unitarian Church next Sunday, the music will include the anthems—"Send out Thy light," Gounod; and "More love to Thee," Brewer.

Mr. E. M. Noyes spent Sunday at Byfield, Mass.

OBSERVATIONS.

Joint caucuses or most anything else that will wake up political interest in this town would be desirable, as it seems to be conceded that this is the deadest town politically of any place of any size in Massachusetts and has been for many years.

Our State Board of Health says that a great number of the local boards of health do not begin to look after things the way they should and that many conditions are distinctly bad and dangerous. Well, why does not the State board get after the locals and if it has not authority enough now ask for it? They could put up a report to the legislature that would quickly bring about changed conditions and what can be of more importance than this matter.

Who paid for them? The Coakley full page ads in last Sunday's papers booming Hearst! It was a most surprising performance and should be explained.

If you have any devices for increasing the security and comfort of passengers on the electric cars send them to the Railroad Commissioners as they are looking for them under a resolve of the legislature.

It has been suggested that the Boston & Northern run its cars from Woburn for Boston by way of Arlington and its cars from Stoneham by way of Medford so that neither line would cross the railroad tracks at our centre. What do you think of it?

Have you noticed how gracefully and grandly many of the school boys from out of town smoke their pipes at the games upon Manchester Field? The Winchester boys are not guilty of the habit apparently, either because their parents or the school teachers and superintendent, or perhaps the school committee look after them, or because they themselves have too much common sense.

SOME BAKERIES BAD.

The State Baard of Health in its report for August says:

During the past few months 536 bakeries and confectionery and catering establishments in 25 cities and 3 towns have been visited by agents of the Board, and the conditions under which their products are prepared have been noted. According to the conditions observed, these establishments (chiefly bakeries) may be divided into four classes, as follows:

A Worthy of especial commendation, 13.
B Satisfactory, 41.
C Not especially bad, 235.
D Distinctly bad, 247.

Many of Class D are situated in badly lighted, unventilated basements, some with water-closets either in the workroom itself or so placed as to make the air thereof distinctly foul. In one instance the bakeroom contained a bed with dirty bed clothes, filthy wearing apparel, and a dark, foul-smelling water-closet within a few feet of the oven, implements and food materials. A large portion of the establisments of this class call energetic action on the part of local authorities, and should be closed.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. EIGHTEEN DAYS IN A WELL.

The trials of "Jip," the fox terrier mascot of the Times are probably as interesting to lovers of dogs as politics to the trained politican or running bases to the base ball fans.

On Monday, September 10, Jip strayed from the sunny corner of the Times Office to pay a visit to one of his many boarding houses about the city.

Advertising failed to locate him and the children with whom he played had kept up a vigilant search but without avail. Rumors that the whining of a dog had been heard in the woods at the top of the hill near Harrison avenue brought the editor of the Times to the spot at dusk last evening. As a boy he roamed the hills in that vicinity and learned to know every spot in it.

Taking a direct course for an unused well, located 200 yards back from the top of the Harrison avenue hill, his suspicions were rewarded. The terrier Jip was huddled at the bottom, weak and emaciated but still able to recognize a friend.

The suspicion is that the dog in scurrying through the woods fell into this death trap, it being partially obscured with hazel bushes. It is about 15 feet deep at present.

Seeing the dog's plight, Mr. Haggerty began the the descent of the well. The dog was released from his prison and taken home. Jip had been shut out from the pleasures of editorial life for a period of 18 days.

His condition can be better imagined than described. There was no water in the well, only moss-covered rocks and bushes. In his efforts to liberate himself he had scraped every semblance of flesh from his legs by continual scraping and contact with the sharp stones on the sides of the well. This probably occurred during the first week of his imprisonment as all the wounds were thoroughly healed he having jumped but little the second week.

When a puppy, four months old, some boys had a tussel as to the ownership of Jip and in the melee of jerking at his legs, his rear leg was broken. It soon mended.

One year ago Jip made the acquaintance of a bu'l dog on Main street. In the vigorous shaking that followed, Jip gave up an ear, a portion of his face and tail, besides having his rear leg broken in two places and the front paw badly lacerated. Through the skillful treatment of James M. Callahan, the dog veterinary, Jip appeared, after six weeks' confinement, among old friends. He has many on Main street.

After his experience the past 18 days it is but natural to suppose that his shadow is a trifle less than formerly but with a good sun it is still visible. He holds the record for long fasting in this locality.—[Woburn Times.

WINCHESTER H. S. 0 ARLINGTON H. S. 0

The High school foot-ball team played its first game of the season last Tuesday with Arlington High on Manchester Field. The game was close fought throughout, the final score being 0 to 0.

The local High team played the best game of foot-ball, but were handicapped by the weight of their opponents, which averaged almost ten pounds heavier to a man. In the first half the High school team advanced the ball inside of Arlington's five yard line, but were held for downs; falling about a foot short of the required ten yards. In the second half, Clifford of Arlington, barely missed a field goal, the ball striking one of the uprights and rebounding back.

The High School took advantage of the new rules, making two forward passes which gained about 15 yards each.

Main, Collins and Richardson excelled for Winchester, while Taylor played the best for Arlington.

The summary:

INFORMATION WANTED.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

There is a loud whisper going around "The Plains" that Mrs. McMannus has beaten the town in the last scuffle between herself and the Selectmen in the old dispute whether the town has the right to drain any of the town bogs or streets onto the McMannus farm or not. It is tough on the name of the town to compel a woman to take up a shillelah in order to protect her rights but it seems the gallant Mrs. McManus has had to do it. The west side and Symmes corner street drains were put in at great expense without the least scrimmage with any abuttor, and why the need of a contest with Mrs. McMannus over a little drainage matter?

The Plains would like it if the weakly Selectmen's reports in the STAR would give the particulars of "the mill" at East Cambridge between Mrs. McMannus and the Selectmen as we are all in the dark as to who got the first black eye, how many rounds were fought, what was the expense to the looser and who got the gate money, also if the rest of us can now have redress if the town turns street drainage upon other farms and estates upon

CLARIGOLD MUSICALES.

The informal Sunday afternoon musicales arranged by Wm. Horatio Clarke and F. Percyval Lewis, at Mr. Clarke's Clarigold Hall on Woburn-Reading line, are attracting many music lovers from nearby towns. Each Sunday, over a hundred people thus combine a pleasant ride or walk with musical enjoyment.

Last Sunday, Sept. 30, Mr. Warren M. Draper, of Franklin Falls, N. H., performed three perforated roll selections on the Aeolian; Mrs. Parker, a Reading Church singer, contributed two vocal solos; Mrs. Annie S. Lewis, pianoforte instructor in Winchester and vicinity, gave the second half of her talk on European travel; and Mr. F. Percyval Lewis played on the pipe organ three contrasting selections by modern English composers.

The fifth musicale of this series will be given next Sunday, Oct. 7, at 3 30 p. m. Visitors welcome. Take 2 24 car via Woburn transfer to Reading line 5c, or via Stoneham and Reading transfer to Woburn line.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

At the present moment the name of Hall Caine looms large in the literary and dramatic world. During the past few years he has become one of the most popular of English novelists, and his stories have, almost without exception, been dramatized immediately upon their publication. Playgoers all have pleasant memories of The Christian, The Eternal City, the Prodigal Son and Ben, My Chree and they will therefore be glad to know that a play of no less popularity The Manxman will be given at the Castle Square Theatre next week.

It has been played by Wilson Barrett with great success both in England and America, and it tells a remarkably entertaining story of love and suffering, interspersed with no little humor among the people of The Isle of Man that Mr. Caine knows so well. In the Manxman the leading roles at the Castle Square Theatre will be played by Miss Lawton, Mr. Hansel, Mr. Waldron, Mr. Kent, Mr. Johnson and Miss Lasche.

The following week of October 15th will be devoted to Monsieur Beaucaire, and then will come Cousin Kate with the first of the Shakespearian productions, "Julius Caesar" on October 29th.

WINTER TOURNAMENT BEGINS NOV. 1st.

The bowling committee at the Calumet Club have decided upon Nov. 1st as the date of the commencement of the annual winter bowling tournament. The entries will close on Oct. 13th, and it is expected that several crack teams will be made up and entered as the interest in the game is running high.

FOUR HUNDRED AND SIX THOUSAND

Accident claims have been paid to the families or to the disabled who were fortunate enough at the time they suffered accident to be covered by an Accident Policy in The Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn.

Forty years ago the claims did not exceed one a day. This year every twenty-four hours sees from fifty-five to sixty claims paid, one every six minutes of the working day, or 16,000 a year.

Within ten years that number will have doubled, all of which goes to show the great value of Accident insurance to every man dependent upon salary or wages for a living.

Accidents were never more numerous than today. There are a good many men taking chances uninsured, and a good many who are mindful of the danger are careless of the protection

I wish I could have a ten minute interview with all such, the result would be a pleasing situation: pleasing to the uninsured, pleasing to the improperly insured and pleasing to me.

THE Automatic Road Agent

By WILLIAM WALLACE COOK

Copyright, 1906, by William Wallace Cook

I CAN never forgive Klipton for the way he deceived me in the matter of that automatic road agent. Upon its completion I was led to believe the machine was nothing more harmful than a motor cowboy, and when the mask fell my faith in my versatile friend was shaken to its very foundations.

That Klipton in a most salutary way was hoist of his own petard did much to restore the status quo ante of our cordial relations. That I myself was involved disastrously in his rescue from a scheme of comprehensive lawlessness was of small moment, considering the beneficent results of the aforesaid rescue.

Great geniuses, I suppose, spin their glittering webs in the dark. At any rate, Klipton's ingenuity when at highest pressure withdrew into some lair where it could be alone with its originator.

In the present instance the lair was the rear room of our adobe dwelling in Matanzas, N. M. From that rear room came all day long and far into the night a mellow "clink" of hammer on anvil, and against its closely curtained windows struck sporadic gleams of a portable forge.

The while he worked on in mysterious secrecy I slaved at the printer's trade to keep him in funds for material. So great was my trust in his ability that I handed over my wages every Saturday night without question. Whenever Klipton showed himself he was grimy with smoke and dust, grimy, but complacent.

"William," he remarked as we sat over one of our frugal meals, "the machine I am building is going to prove a ten strike. Money? My dear boy, we shall take in the coin hand over fist. Today you are to give them two weeks' notice at the printing office."

"Are you ready to tell me what the thing is?" I inquired.

"Not yet. In two weeks, however, it will give me great pleasure to inform you fully."

During the next fortnight Klipton surprised me by allowing me to retain my wages. On the night I severed my connection with the Matanzas Mercury he took me by the hand and led me into the room where he had been laboring for the last three months.

Before me was a skeleton motor car, small, compact—little more than wheels and platform, with the necessary box to house the machinery. But the car itself was only an insignificant part of my friend's amazing machine.

Welded to it and forming one with the vehicle was a monstrosity in the form of a steel man; not a whole man, merely the head, trunk and arms, built on a gigantic model—the half of a magog.

This latter day centaur was a hideous conception. Its vacuous face and staring eyes sent uncanny shivers creeping through my nerves, and I turned away with a gasp.

In each hand the semifigure clasped a long barreled Colt's revolver. The steel arms were jointed, and Klipton was lifting them proudly and moving them this way and that when I turned my back.

"So that is what I have been putting my wages into for the last ten weeks!" I exclaimed, perhaps a trifle bitterly. I had cajoled myself into the belief that Klipton had been solving the problem of aerial navigation, and my disappointment was keen.

"Klipton's Motor Cowboy," my friend explained triumphantly, "primarily designed to benefit the cattle industry and incidentally Marcus Klipton and his friend, William Quinn.

"When charged with electricity, this machine will think, act and do everything but talk for a period varying from twenty-four hours to a week, depending upon the amount of energy used up by the car."

"But the revolvers!" I cried.

"All cowboys have revolvers," he answered, as I thought, evasively.

"It seems poorly designed to meet the requirements of a cattle range," I ventured, mustering up courage to continue my examination of the odd contraption.

"You don't understand these things, William," said Klipton calmly.

"If you'd explain how a patent cowboy is going to make money for us hand over fist, I think I could understand that."

"You'll have a practical demonstration of that tomorrow," he returned.

Next morning Klipton shook me into wakefulness and requested me to arise and dress with as much dispatch as possible. While getting into my clothes I stole a glance into the rear room.

The motor cowboy was gone, its departure having been accomplished by means of a seven foot breach in the adobe wall. I swept Klipton with a questioning glance.

"I pushed it down to the power plant," said he, "and filled it with electricity. It's now away on trial."

"I should like to see how it stands the test," I observed.

"So you shall, William. There are two horses at the door, and when we have had our breakfast we will ride out into the country and watch operations."

"Don't you have to go with it?" I queried.

"If any one had to go with it," he responded, "the machine would not be a success. My idea as to the work to be done is imparted through a series of push buttons. There my responsibility ceases, and the machine, of its own volition, does the rest."

We rode about five miles, not toward any ranch that I had ever heard of, but directly into the rocky hills. The mystery intensified and with it my apprehension.

There was a lawless strain in Klipton's makeup, and most of his ingenious undertakings trended in that direction.

"Klip," said I severely, "if there is anything crooked about this you can count me out."

"William," he retorted, "don't read me any of your homilies. We're not going to do anything crooked. We're simply going to watch and observe what happens."

He looked about him critically. The trail threaded a rugged ravine at that point, with shadowy lurking places gashed from the slopes on left and right.

"This is the place," he proceeded. "We will climb that hill, hitch our horses over the brow of it, and then take up our stations behind convenient bowlders."

"Why the bowlders?" I asked. "Haven't we a right"—

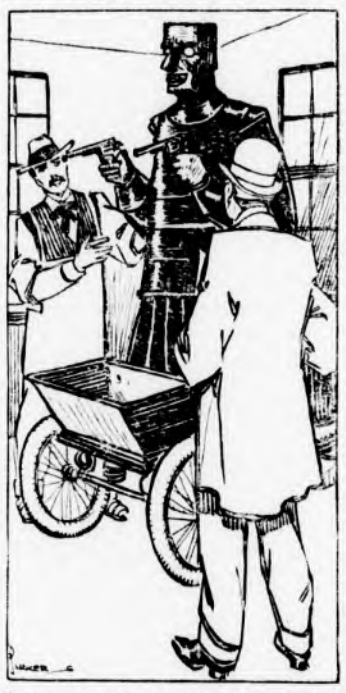

"I never saw such a fellow!" he interrupted crossly. "Consider yourself under my orders, William, or else point your cayuse for Matanzas and go back to the printing office. It looks to me as though your plebeian ideas were wedded to type sticking and twenty a week."

I accepted the rebuke meekly, and we hitched our horses on the other side of the hill and screened ourselves behind rocks commanding a view of the trail.

We had not been ten minutes in hiding when the stage from the gold camp at Pell's Notch trekked into sight on its way to the railroad at Matanzas.

"Watch," whispered Klipton, "and don't get excited."

The stage came merrily on, an express messenger on the seat with the driver. At the messenger's feet was a strong box which I knew must contain a treasure in placer gold. Between the messenger's knees was a rifle.

"IT WILL THINK, ACT AND DO EVERYTHING BUT TALK."

As I kept my wondering eyes on the vehicle the four horses attached to it suddenly went back in their traces and then shot up in the air. The driver exploded a yell, and the messenger, quick as chain lightning, brought the rifle to his shoulder.

A report followed, and a musical ring followed the report—a ring that, through some weird acoustic effect, sounded for all the world like a titillating, ironical laugh.

Swerving my eyes the other way along the trail, I beheld the so called motor cowboy planted in the path, both weapons leveled at the two on the stage. A red card lettered in white had abruptly materialized at the front of the car. "Hands Up!"

I was spellbound—too much so for recriminations. All I could do was to crouch behind my bowlder and keep my fascinated eyes on the tail below.

The automaton pulled trigger, and the messenger's hat flew off. The messenger emptied his magazine over the horses' heads, and a chorus of those eerie laughs echoed up and down the ravine.

By then the stage horses were fairly under control, and the driver elevated his hands. The messenger, who had lost a lock of hair by a second bullet, followed suit.

The "Hands Up!" card vanished, and another took its place—"Deposit Valuables In Iron Basket In Front of Car!"

"Jumpin' wildcats!" bellowed the driver. "What sort of a holdup is this anyhow? That looks like the old boy himself. Why don't you say somethin', you feller with the guns?"

A black card jumped viciously into sight—"Your money or your life! Hurry!"

This was immediately followed by the other card naming the place for the deposit of valuables and was emphasized with a third shot from one of the Colts, the bullet singing past the messenger's ear.

"Don't shoot!" cried the messenger frantically. "You're bullet proof, and I'm not, and that gives you the winning hand."

He clambered down from the stage, pulled the strong box after him, dragged it to the car and heaved it aboard. All the while Klipton's chef d'oeuvre kept him covered with one of the revolvers.

Rushing back to the stage, the messenger regained the box. Then came a blue card bearing the word "Goodby," and the steel highwayman backed slowly from the trail into a narrow defile in the hillside.

The driver's long whip flickered out over the backs of the leaders, and the stage jumped on toward Matanzas like a cannon ball. There were no passengers inside the vehicle, and the last thing I saw was the white, scared face of the messenger looking back at the scene of the automaton's exploit.

"Marcus Klipton," said I, finding tongue, now that the excitement was over, "you have betrayed my trust in you. Motor cowboy, indeed!" I added sarcastically. "Why didn't you tell me it was a motor highwayman in the first place?"

"Don't get on your high horse, William," answered Klipton. "I wanted the truth to dawn on you by degrees. I have demonstrated, I think, that Klipton's automatic road agent is an unqualified success. We can build ourselves a nice little rendezvous out here in the hills and sit in the shade and play seven up and let our indestructible highwayman transform us into millionaires."

"Be that as it may," I went on relentlessly, "in taking the loot collected by this iniquitous machine you are receiving tainted money."

"If it comes to that," he broke in, "there isn't a dollar in circulation in all this broad land that has not at some time or other been won dishonestly and passed through criminal hands."

"You will become a 'fence' for stolen property," I proceeded. "And then," I finished sternly, "suppose the automaton should kill somebody!"

"Hang it, William," cried Klipton, "you're about the worst case of discouragement an inventor ever went up against! I know when I've got a good thing, and I'm going to let my invention work and collect royalties for me. Take your own trail, and I'll take mine!"

With that he spun around and rushed down the hill in a temper. I could not bring myself to abandon him just yet and followed.

The automatic road agent moved out into the road to meet us as we advanced upon the place where it had been secreted. My friend proceeded very confidently, but came to a startled halt as one of the Colts was lifted and brought to bear on him. Simultaneously the "Hands Up!" card flashed into view.

It was more than plain that Klipton was not expecting this. The revolver cracked, and Klipton's hat was twisted half around on his head.

"What's the matter, Klip?" I shouted.

"The blamed thing must have slipped a cog or something!" he flung back at me.

Then the other card flaunted its order for him to deposit his valuables in the basket.

"Run!" I yelled. "You know what happened to that fellow they called Frankenstein. Get behind the rocks or you'll be killed!"

"It's geared for fatalities if a victim tries to run," he groaned, palpitating back and forth in the trail. "Sneak around behind it, William," he added, clutching at a straw of hope, "and push button No. 3. Hustle! The black card is up!"

I hustled, but the other revolver focused itself upon me before I had taken a dozen steps. Klipton pulled disconsolately at his red locks and jumped around in the trail like an Indian doing a war dance.

"Now you're in it, too!" he whooped. "Go up close and put your contribution in the basket. We've got to do it! After that we'll follow the car till the electricity gives out, and then we can get the stuff back."

With the frowning muzzle of the six shooter looking me squarely in the face, I laid my forty dollar donation in the iron basket and followed it with an heirloom in the shape of an old silver watch. Thereupon I was permitted to back away.

Klipton advanced with one hand in his pocket. I don't think he had any valuables about him, and I watched with intense interest to see what happened.

Of a sudden, when close to the nefarious machine, my friend hurled himself upon it, one hand reaching around toward button No. 3. There followed a sharp report which struck on my heart like a knell.

With a groan Klipton cropped across the iron basket, a melancholy tribute to his own misguided genius. I leaped forward instinctively, but before I could come anywhere near the machine it had got under headway and was moving at a moderate gait in the direction of Pell's Notch.

I made haste to recover my horse and, leading Klipton's mount behind me, started in pursuit. A clatter of hoofs drew my attention, and I discovered the sheriff and a posse of four galloping up from the rear.

They had started from Matanzas on the trail of a cattle thief and had encountered the stage two miles out. The harrowing tale of the driver and messenger had sent the officers after the singular bandit who had annexed the express company's strong box.

The sheriff, as I could see, looked upon me with more or less suspicion. I was known to be a close friend of Klipton's, and Klipton, so the sheriff had been informed, had pushed a machine answering the messenger's description to the Matanzas power house that morning.

Our pursuit did not lead us far on the Pell's Notch road. Just beyond the rocky hills the motor wheels left well defined tracks across the desert southward.

Spurring forward at top speed, we soon had the machine in sight—a slowly moving blot on the horizon. At about the same moment we discovered a trailing plume of smoke off to the west.

"The 12:20 local for Albuquerque," remarked the sheriff, and presently the train was seen writhing like a snake across the land.

The blot representing the motor car was observed to be at a standstill, presumably experiencing difficulty in getting across the rails. A long drawn out whistle from [illegible] our ears, followed by shriek after shriek of frantic warning.

The automatic road agent failed to move, and we sat our horses and gazed while the train glided into the blot, passed on for a hundred yards or so, and then slowed to a halt.

"By Jupiter," cried the sheriff, "the local has collided with the horseless wagon! It's all up with the highwayman! Spurs and quirts, boys!"

I rode on with a sickening sensation of fear for my erring and luckless friend, but the fear faded into wonder when, on reaching the spot, we failed to find Klipton anywhere in the wreck.

The automatic road agent had been knocked into a scrap heap. By some miracle of poetic justice, however, the messenger's strong box was found a dozen feet from the track uninjured.

I raked my watch out of the debris, a shapeless thing flattered to the thinness of a knife blade. I likewise recovered fifteen of my forty dollars.

Yet, despite my personal loss, I should have been a happy man as I accompanied the sheriff and his posse back to Matanzas could I have known that Klipton was safe.

My doubts concerning his fate were set at rest a week later, when I received the following from Santa Fe:

"Dear William—Am in the hospital here with a bullet in my shoulder. Dropped off the car in the hills, saw you and the sheriff trail past and thought best not to return to Matanzas. Join me at this place as soon as possible. Have developed a second idea while lying in this neat little iron pot getting over the effects of the first. It's a corker. There's a fortune in it for you as well as for your repentant friend. KLIP."

There is precious instruction to be gotten by finding we are wrong.—Carlyle.

WAYS OF THE ARAB.

When Sick, Men Get Medicine and Women Get Prayers.

"There is one peculiar distinction between Arab men and women in Algeria," writes a traveler, "and it may be considered as some proof of the degraded position of the latter. When an Arab is ill he goes to his doctor, and Arab doctors, whether deservedly or not, have a high reputation. But when an Arab woman is ill she may not consult a medico. She must go to the marabout, who is half saint and half magician. He does not retail medicines, but he utters a number of prayers, and then he writes one or more of them on a bit of paper, giving it to the patient with injunctions to chew it and swallow it. He also supplies a little holy water out of a bottle and the woman goes away fully believing that she will recover.

"It has been said that the Arabs do not respect their dead because they have no inclosed cemeteries and because they select for the graves of their nearest and dearest solitary spots removed from their places of encampment. But this practice may be explained by other causes than absence of respect or affection for their dead. The task of preparing the body for the grave is always performed by the members of the family themselves and, in accordance with the Koran, it is most carefully washed in pure water before being consigned to the ground. Then the pottery of the household is broken over the spot. In the desert or on the steppe the leaving of the body in an isolated place seems to typify naturally its presence before the infinite and the eternal.

"In joy as in grief the Arab generally conceals his feelings behind a proud reserve, but on the occasions of the periodical fantasias he throws aside the mask and reveals the true man. The dancing, gesticulating and shouting go on for hours until the delirium ends with the exhaustion of the participants. A fantasia in the desert leaves a curious impression of semiunreality on the mind, but it is the one occasion on which the stern, sad looking Arab, casting aside his hauteur, comes forth as the true son of nature."

DRINK BOILED MILK.

A Doctor Says It Will Vaccinate You Against Consumption.

"The idea of vaccination against consumption is not a new idea," said a physician. "And, furthermore, you and I have unconsciously many times perhaps vaccinated ourselves against this disease."

"I have vaccinated myself against consumption? I must have done it in my sleep, then."

"Not at all. Let me explain.

"Chauveau, Baumgarten, Grisez, Behring, Calmette, Guerin and other eminent investigators have taught us that the germs of consumption—the bacilli, the little living creatures that eat up the lungs—do not enter our lungs through the respiratory tract, but through the intestines—that is to say, we don't breathe in consumption germs; we eat them.

"In the region of the intestines, therefore, these men for some years conducted their vaccinations for consumption. They took calves, and they vaccinated these calves with milk containing dead bacilli. Afterward they gave the calves milk containing live bacilli, and, whereas this latter milk caused deadly consumption in ordinary calves, among those that had been vaccinated no evil effect whatever ensued.

"Among animals and perhaps among men milk containing dead consumption germs makes a virus which, applied to the intestines, is a sure cure for consumption.

"Therefore, when you and I drink our milk boiled (as we should always do despite the oystery taste), we are, if the milk happens to contain bacilli, actually introducing into our intestines the virus that, among animals at least, is consumption's sure preventive.

"Moral.—Drink boiled milk only."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Enthusiasm.

As you slide along past youth into middle age get a good grip on your enthusiasms. Life looks black after they are gone. It is a good thing, too, to renew your own life in an intimate interest in the life of some young friend. Few things are more helpful or more beautiful than friendship between the young and the old. They have everything to give to each other. What is most pitiful in both—youth's uncertainty and need of encouraging sympathy, age's unfulfillments and need of softening tenderness—is soothed and neutralized by a sharing of interests and affections.

London Weather.

We may as well own up to the truth that the conventional abuse of our climate and our weather has been greatly overdone. When we are inclined to envy countries whose meteorological conditions have less of the element of "glorious uncertainty" than our own, we are much too ready to overlook the immense advantage we possess in our almost absolute freedom from violent extremes.—London World.

Her Love.

"Do you call your husband Honey?"

"No, I call him Pickle."

"Good gracious, doesn't that make him mad?"

"No. He knows I detest honey, and every woman loves pickles."—Houston Post.

Oratory.

"Your son won a prize for oratory while he was in college, I believe. What is he doing now?" "He got a job in the union depot announcing the departure of the trains."—Chicago Record-Herald.

SPRINGS OF HIERAPOLIS.

Wonderful Waters That Petrify Everything They Encounter.

Hierapolis is a strange ruined city of Asia Minor. It was founded about 190 B. C. and a large part of the place has been buried by the petrifying water of hot springs. The country round Hierapolis is today infested with brigands. A traveler who visited the place under an armed guard of Turkish soldiers says: "The temperature of the springs is that of a very warm bath and while hot there is not a trace of that petrifying element which renders the waters so remarkable after they have cooled and causes them to turn to stone every object they encounter after very slight immersion. The swimming bath itself is about fifty feet to sixty feet in length and in many places from twelve to fifteen feet deep, and is today almost as it was in Roman times. The opportunity to take a natural hot bath was not lost upon the writer. The floor and sides and steps are of white marble and the depth varies to suit the convenience of the swimmer. Some great upheaval has brought down the marble columns which once decorated the sides of the bath and they lie across it in picturesque disorder, some almost intact, others broken into many fragments.

"One of the columns has so fallen across the bath that its base is exposed while its slanting top shines gleaming white beneath the water at a depth of some ten feet. On this column one can lie with one's head out of water and it is not possible to imagine a bath enjoyable under more ideal conditions. The water flows out of the basin in many little rivulets and a few hundred yards from its source begins to develop its petrifying nature. As it cools its bed becomes white with a hard, chalky substance and no living thing or plant can resist its stony grip. The grasses and leaves which fall into its deadly waters find their grave upon its surface and the flowers which dip their heads into the streams turn into petrified images of themselves, counterfeiting nature in stone, even to their slender petals.

"The fall from the top of the cliff into the valley is in some cases abrupt and steep and in others gradual. In the latter a succession of basins has been formed descending the slopes in ever diminishing size, as the waters in their descent have overflowed from one rim to another. Stalactites depend from the top of the cliff, and formations like gigantic beehives glimmer in the sun. Seen from a distance, the very waters appear to have been caught and turned to rock as they flowed and noiseless waterfalls of stone take the place of the liquid element."—Chicago News.

A Cautious Sentinel.

It was the small brother of pretty Margaret who opened the front door in response to Mr. Goodyear's ring, and his face took on a singularly alert expression as he surveyed the caller.

"No, she isn't in," said Margaret's brother. "Are—are you Mr. Hamlin?"

"No," said the young man; "I am Mr. Goodyear. Does that make any difference about her being at home?" And he looked searchingly at the boy.

"Course not," said Bobby indignantly. "I don't tell stories, nor Margaret doesn't. But if you'd been Mr. Hamlin I was to tell something about her coming home and get 10 cents if I did it right and didn't tell the wrong one. I need that money, and so, you see, I didn't want to make any mistake. Goodby."—Youth's Companion.

The Labor of Mountain Climbing.

Below is a curious calculation on the amount of energy expended by a person weighing 168 pounds in climbing a mountain peak 7,000 feet high, the time allowed for the ascent being five hours: By careful calculation it is found that the total amount of labor performed is equal to raising 1,380,000 pounds to a height of one foot or that of raising one pound to a height of 1,380,000 feet. Of this enormous amount of work 1,176,000 foot pounds are expended by the muscles of the legs in raising or lifting the body, 12,000 by the heart in circulating the blood, 30,000 by the chest in breathing and 54,000 in the various exertions of balancing the body, overcoming friction of the ground, etc.

Finish Matrimony.

All the way our driver had been very chatty. He told us how he had chosen his wife. He said: "There was some talk of her in the village. My aunt's nephew spoke to me of her, but I never saw her till the day before we were engaged. When I heard of her, I went to the puhumy—man of speech—who always arranges these things. I gave him 5 marks for her. She liked what she heard of me, and she gave him, as she was bound, a white shirt. Then I thought I would see her, so we arranged to meet at church at Unnikiemi, and we went there, and it was all right. We get on together."—"Vignettes of Finland."

Alluring.

"Yes, he's a cigar manufacturer and yet he never smokes."

"Oh, yes, he does!"

"Why, he told me some time ago that he never smoked in his life."

"That was before he began to advertise. He found his own advertisements so alluring that he just started in."

Diplomacy.

The Friend—Was Mrs. Heviwaite pleased with her portrait?

The Artist—Oh yes. I managed to make her resemble what she thinks she used to look like.—Brooklyn Life.

We are all kindled and put out. We die daily. Nature that begot us expels us, and a better and safer place is provided for us.—Seneca.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

If you believe in fortune telling anybody can fool you.

After some people have done their duty they act as if they expect people to cheer.

If you are disagreeable, people will hate you. There are no exceptions to this rule.

When a man is compelled to make an effort to be good natured, he should see a doctor at once.

Every man is occasionally against this proposition: He can't afford to, and he can't afford not to.

If the attention of those you are talking to wanders frequently, that is a sign that you are not talking well and are talking too much.

Some people think they are all right if they don't steal. But there are many other things you must do, if you want to stand well with your neighbors.—Atchison Globe.

The Indispensable "Well."

Across the club luncheon table a man looked up from his grilled sole and proclaimed that no man in England can carry on a conversation without saying "well." The usual bet was made. For a week the two friends glared at each other, knowing that "well" is the beginning of most casual sentences. You may not have noticed that. Dumbly they parted day by day, with a handshake and the word "well" frozen on their lips. After a week one of the two had to confess that the language had got the better of him. "Well," he said, "I'd rather drop a sovereign over that dinner than choke that 'well.' I can't talk without it."—London Chronicle.

In childhood be modest, in youth temperate, in manhood just and in old age prudent.—Socrates.

Mrs. T. Price Wilson is now able to walk about the house a little.

Caleb G. Mann of North Hanover has lately acquired the ruins of the old "Black Maria" which previous to 1845 was used to transport prisoners from the county jail to the state prison in Charlestown. It was a clumsy vehicle, drawn by a pair of horses and had an iron cage in which the prisoners were shut as it rolled over the road from Plymouth, through Kingston Duxbury, Pembroke, Hanover and Hingham on its way to Charlestown. When the Old Colony Railroad was built, the carriage fell into disuse and a few years ago fell into the hands of Enoch Johnson of Hanover Four Corners, who was for a time an employee in the Boston street department. He brought the remains to Hanover.

HENRY A. SPATES

MR. SPATES CHAINED.

Superintendent of Streets, H. A. Spates, on retiring from the street department on Oct. 1st, invited the men of the department to call at his rooms on Oct. 4th, which they did in large numbers. They called in a body, and on entering, Mr. John McCraven handed Mr. Spates a large and very beautiful bouquet remarking, that like the flowers, we bloom but will fade away—when you tire of our company. After thanking the men, Mr. Spates said:

Gentlemen of the Highway Department of the Town of Winchester, Mass.—

I have invited you here, this evening, to make a social call, and I assure you gentlemen it is with great pleasure that I meet and shake hands with you on this occasion.

Stop and think one minute gentlemen, would I ask you to call this evening, and would you respond, if we had not decided to drop all differences and meet as old friends, with warm hearts from one end of this gathering to the other and back again?

I have endeavored to maintain discipline as you all know. I have always given you to understand that no personal feeling would stand in the way of the town's interest. That is to say, in every case where there has been differences between us and we have separated, the man has always been welcomed back, as long as he would work for the interest of the town.

What you may have said against me, personally, has not bothered me so long as you have done your work faithfully and when the town's interests have been at stake. At times I have been nervous, irritable, and rough, but two minutes afterwards I have been sorry that it had so happened and have been glad to give the man a kind word.

We have worked side by side for the last nine and one half years and know each other quite well. In the cold, stormy nights in winter we have called each other and assembled at the stable to fight the storms and open the streets all that was possible before the people, in some cases, even knew that a storm was in progress. In the great storms of the winters of 1898 and 1899, which those of you who were with us at that time can well remember, how day after day, and night after night, we worked for eight days and not a man faltered, only those who were actually exhausted. I have told you not to lay awake watching storms in winter, to get your rest as you were the men who had to do the real hard work. I have told you that I would do the watching and see that you were called, but I have never had you called out of your beds, without first facing the storm myself.

Gentlemen, I ought to know you, and you ought to know me, by this time. We have tried hard to be faithful to the town and when a man says we have not, he either knows he is lying or else his judgment is lacking in that respect. Now why shouldn't we part with a brotherly feeling and be glad to meet each other hereafter. Certainly, gentlemen, this is my feeling and I feel sure that it is yours.

Mr. Hinds is my successor, a man whom you all know well, and I ask you, gentlemen, to maintain your discipline, give him proper support, if ever you have a grievance talk it over with him. Don't talk it outside as you only make a bad matter worse, by so doing. Be faithful to your Superintendent and you will have the confidence of the Selectmen and the whole town. I shall watch the workings of the several departments with great interest and if I see that your department is not on equal footing with others, I shall complain to the town. "God helps those who help themselves," therefore gentlemen, help yourselves by being faithful and expect the town and your superiors to do the same.

I thank you one and all, gentlemen, for calling this evening, with the friendly spirit which you show, and offer my services to you in any legitimate form.

After the farewell and talk to the men, Mr. McGowan, foreman, presented Mr. Spates with a gold watch chain and locket, in behalf of the men of the Highway department. They expressed their regrets, because Mr. Spates was going to leave them and wished him success in his new work. The locket had three horses' heads engraved on it, owing to Mr. Spates' great liking for horses.

Owing to a misunderstanding on just the date Mr. Spates was going to resign, and arrangements having been made by the men for a later date, the men were unable to carry out their plans to the full extent.

Mr. Spates responded in a fitting manner and after partaking of a collation and smoking several cigars the men retired to their homes leaving their good wishes to their old Superintendent.

WEDDED AT GLOUCESTER.

Mr. John Stephen Blank, jr., a well known young man of this town, son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Blank of Myrtle street, was married at Gloucester on Saturday evening last, to Miss Helen Batchelder Tarr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Silas S. Tarr of that city.

The ceremony and the reception which followed, were at the home of the bride's parents, 7 Summit street, the officiating clergyman being Rev. Gibbs Braislin, D. D., of the First Baptist Church, Gloucester.

The bride was handsomely gowned in liberty satin, trimmed with duchesse lace and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. She was attended by Miss Ruth Clement of Chelsea, maid of honor, who wore a dress of white figured net over white silk. The maid of honor carried pink roses. Mr. Jere A. Downs of this town was the best man.

The wedding party were preceded by two little flower girls, Miss Ruth Christine Winn and Miss Pauline Sweetser, neices of the groom and bride respectively.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Blank held a reception, Mr. and Mrs. Tarr and Mr. and Mrs. Blank, sr. assisting in receiving. The ushers for the reception were Mr. Harry T. Winn and Mr. Alfred Lombard of this town, and Mr. Wesley Monk of Watertown.

Decorations of autumn foliage, dahlias and hydrangeas, transformed the rooms for the occasion, and to these were added green and hothouse flowers.

Guests were present from Watertown, Medford, Boston and other towns and cities, while a large number of friends and relatives attended from this town.

Upon the return from their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Blank will reside on Myrtle street until the completion of their house now building on Highland avenue. They will be at home Wednesdays, January ninth and twenty-third, at No. 173 Highland avenue.

WINCHESTER TRANSFERS.

The real estate office of Geo. Adams Woods has recently made the following sales of real estate:

J. H. Wentworth has sold his new 11-room house and 13,112 feet of land on Sheffield road, to Capt. P. A. Nickerson, who bought for investment.

Maud M. Allman has sold her 11-room house and 24,000 feet of land on Fletcher street, to Wendall M. Weston, who buys for a home.

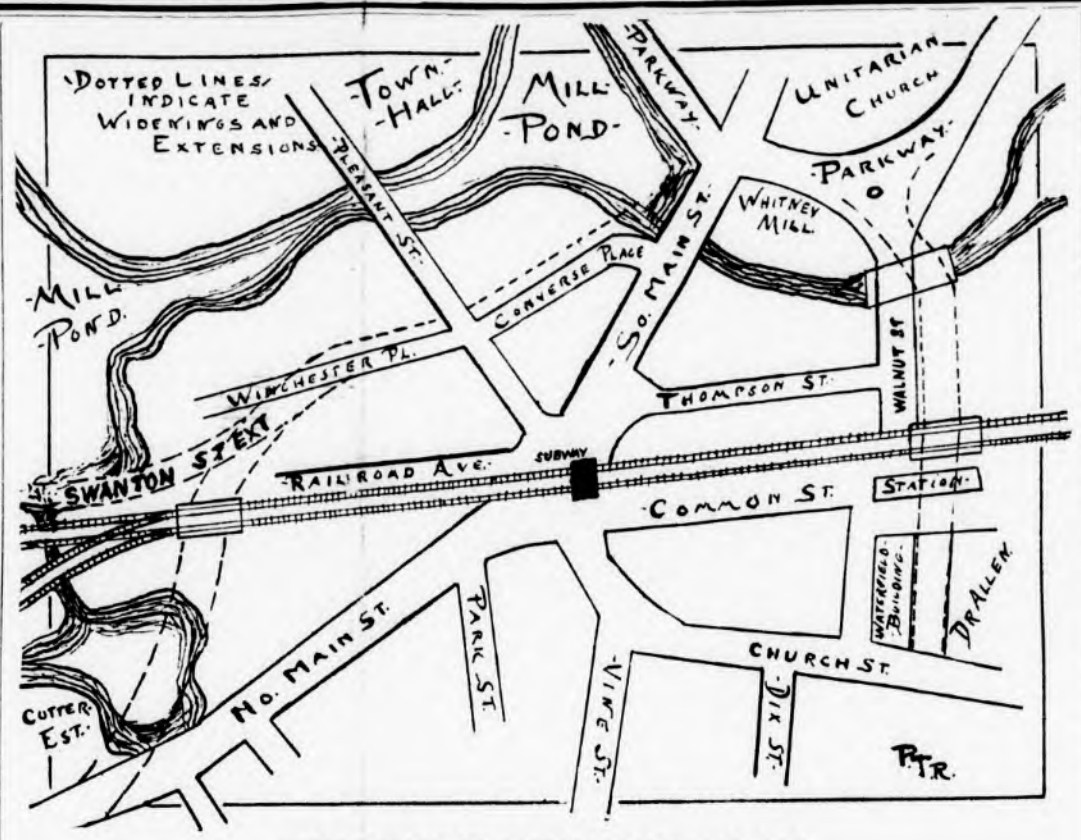

C. H. Lewis has sold his 11-room house and 8000 feet of land on Orient street to Abbie M. Nason, who buys for occupancy.

Frost Bros. have sold their nine-room house, formerly occupied by the Winchester Country Club, and 10,000 feet of land on Woodside road, to George A. Whittington, who buys for a home.

The Usher estate has sold its nine-room house and 5027 feet of land on Lloyd street to Howard C. Mason, who buys for occupancy.

L. V. Niles has sold a lot of land on the westerly side of Sheffield road containing 20,077 feet of land, to Marguerite L. Ayer, who is to build thereon. The sale of this lot completes the development of Sheffield road, which has been carried out by Capt. Nickerson.

Mrs. Freeman W. Shepherd was brought to Winchester Tuesday from Quincy, where she has been very ill at the home of her sister.

THE TWIN BRIDGES PLAN.

THE TWIN BRIDGES PLAN

For the Abolition of the Grade Crossings.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Several citizens have expressed the wish that the twin bridges plan which was offered as a solution of the grade crossing problem about two years ago, might again be brought to the front and as you have kindly offered to reprint the article, I now submit in a modified form, substantially the same plan published Dec. 9, 1904.

First:—Begin at the junction of Main street and the Parkway opposite Whitney's Machine Shop and construct a roadway of the present width of Main street across the mill pond to the intersection of Converse Place, widen Converse place to correspond with Main street, thence across Pleasant street and intersect Winchester place which will be likewise widened, thence by an ascending grade and an easy curved line to a bridge over the tracks of the B. & M. R. R., thence by a descending grade and a reverse curve to an intersection with Main street again, at a point in front of the Sullivan Cutter estate.

Second:—Begin at a point near the circle in the Parkway opposite the Unitarian Church and rise by a causeway or trestle in a curved line and easy grade parallel with Walnut street to a bridge over the B. & M. R. R., thence over the site now covered by the station to an intersection with the vacant lot leading to and entering upon Church street between Waterfield block and Dr. Allen's residence.

The former plan contemplated the taking of the old Small furniture factory and the small buildings between same and the Common and thence over the south side of the Common to Church street, but as any invasion of the Common will meet the opposition of many citizens, the above plan is offered as an alternative or substitute.

Advantages of this layout:

1st. Abolition of the grade crossings by the erection of two overhead bridges, one at the station and the other at the junction of the Woburn branch and the main line, a plan that will involve no change in the railroad roadbed nor interruption of traffic. By this proposed route all lines of highway travel will follow as directly north and south and east and west as the present street lines, therein differing radically from the ram's horn route now under consideration, which if adopted will compel all the traffic between Lowell and Boston to make a quarter of a mile detour, and which is bound to meet the determined opposition of the farmers and all the teaming interests from Woburn north saying nothing about the inconvenience to our storekeepers in serving a large number of their patrons.

2nd. Settlement of the vexed question of the widening of Main street opposite the Whitney Machine Co. premises.

3rd. Provision and preparation for the extension of an avenue to connect with Swanton street, which proposition will have to be faced sometime.

4th. The present grade of Winchester place is some 8 to 10 feet higher than the roadbed of the railroad and would aid very materially in overcoming the rise necessary to surmount the tracks by an overhead bridge.

5th. Adopt one excellent feature of the Vinal plan, namely,—Move the railroad station north to the present crossing and provide a good broad generous subway which would give pedestrians easy access to either side of the tracks, and at same time by stairways or inclines provide for entrance upon the railroad platforms on either side for north or south bound trains.

The Langley property would form an ideal site for a post office on the opposite side of the tracks from the railroad station.

6th. No more convenient or central location for a new engine house can be found than the present site as its situation on New Main street about midway between the two bridges will enable the Fire Department to respond quickly and easily to an alarm on either side of the town.

Electrics from Woburn to Medford would pass over the bridge and the new layout via Winchester place and Converse place or around Grover's corner and South Main street and return by the same route and the distance between the Unitarian Church and the Cutter estate will be found very little, if indeed it is any longer than as now via Main street.

Electrics from Stoneham to Arlington would pass down Pleasant street around Grover's corner and through South Main street to the Parkway, thence over the bridge to Church street and return by the same route.

All grades in the plan submitted will be found easy,—I think not exceeding in any instance the present grade of Main street opposite the Unitarian Church.

If for any reason the present crossings should be obstructed, an outlet could be found only at Bacon street, in the extreme southern part or at Swanton street, in the extreme northern part of the town, while with two bridges over the railroad a reasonable distance apart, if one should be closed the other would be available and could be used without inconvenience. I know it is contended on the part of some that only one crossing now exists but is it at all probable that Main street when it was laid out, was distended to double the width on the crossing, that it is at any other point? No! Church street intersects Main street on the east side of the railroad and we are clearly entitled to two bridges however much the R. R. Co. may oppose it. Mr. Wm. Walsh in the recent fatal accident was killed on the Church street crossing and not on the Main street crossing. I am informed by a prominent R. R. official not connected with the B. & M. but with another system, that the Town has the right and can claim two crossings either over or under the tracks for the two grade crossings to be abolished and citizens better think twice before surrendering their rights by accepting one bridge as a solution of the difficulty.

The land damage involved by this plan will be found trifling compared with some of the schemes that have been advanced, and while the Vinal plan now under consideration contemplates the taking of the Waterfield property and all the real estate between Thompson street and the R. R. and the Whitney estate, quite an expensive proposition if the owners valuation is any criterion, the plan above presented involves the taking of no improved real estate but provides for widenings of existing thoroughfares and extensions over vacant land only.

The contrast is marked to say the least between the elaborate plan presented by Mr. Vinal in last weeks paper and my crude sketch above, and while his is more finished, mine I believe is more practical, and if his talent could only be employed to develop its artistic features I believe the plan evolved would prove to be the best as well as the cheapest for the solution of our grade crossing problem, and one that would involve no interference or interruption of either steam, electric or highway traffic during the progress of the work.

CHANCE TO REGISTER.

The Registrars of Voters give notice that they will be in session for the purpose of registering new voters on the following dates:

At Hose House, Swanton street, Tuesday evening, Oct. 23, from 7 to 8 o'clock.

At Town Hall building, Tuesday evening, Oct. 16, from 7 to 8 o'clock. Friday evening, Oct. 19, from 7 to 8 o'clock. Friday evening, Oct. 26, from 7 to 8 o'clock. Saturday afternoon and evening Oct. 27, from 12 o'clock, noon, until 10 o'clock in the evening, which will be the last day of registration.

Every male person desiring to be registered must show a tax bill for the year 1906, or a notice from the Collector or a certificate from the Assessors, and if not assessed must bring two registered voters of the town to prove that he was a resident on the first day of May. Naturalized citizens must bring their papers with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund H. Garrett are enjoying the autumn at Dudley, Mass. The greater part of the summer has been spent by them in Peterboro and Jaffrey, N. H., where Mr. Garrett has made some charming sketches of the beautiful scenery in that vicinity.

MR. AND MRS. MOBBS OBSERVE SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. James G. Mobbs observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage on Monday evening, by a reception to about seventy-five of their friends. Their home on Railroad avenue was the scene of a very pleasant party during the hours of 8 until 10, guests being present from Winchester, Woburn, Boston and many of the surrounding towns.

During the evening Miss Eva Stowers of Main street gave several readings and Miss Carrie Hemingway of Stoneham furnished selections on the piano.

Mr. and Mrs. Mobbs were remembered by a large quantity of silver and cut glass from their many friends.

DR. DENNETT OPERATED UPON.

Dr. Daniel C. Dennett was operated upon Monday at the Winchester Hospital on Washington street for appendicitis. The operation was successful and the doctor is recovering rapidly.

ADDRESS BY MRS. MEAD.

Next Tuesday afternoon, October 16, at 4 o'clock, Mrs. Edwin D. Mead of Boston will address the teachers and their friends in the Assembly Hall of the High school building on the subject of "Peace and Arbitration." Mrs. Mead has long been a student of this problem, has made numerous addresses on it, and has been an official delegate to various congresses of Arbitration both in the United States and in Europe. She is also a very interesting speaker, and at the present time, it is hoped that a large audience will be present to hear her on this occasion, and a cordial invitation is extended to all to attend.

WINCHESTER PUBLIC LIBRARY.

GRADE CROSSING NOTES.

Timothy Callahan of Elm street had a narrow escape from being struck by an express train at the crossing last Friday afternoon. An express going north was passing through the centre, and Mr. Callahan stepped on the inward track to cross, as it went by, not noticing a fast inward train which was almost upon him. Many people saw the danger and shouted to him, which caused him to step back just in time to escape.

Superintendent William T. Dotten of the Water department narrowly escaped meeting with a serious accident on Tuesday at the railroad crossing. As Mr. Dotten approached the tracks the gates were being lowered but as he drove up those on his side of the crossing were held partly up, as he supposed, for him to go under. He whipped up his horse and at the same instant the gate tender lowered the gate, with the result that the gate caught Mr. Dotten in the chest, sweeping him off the seat of his wagon. He held on to one rein, which turned the horse down the track towards the station. Fortunately he was only thrown back into the wagon and was able to quickly stop his horse. It was equally fortunate that the train was a slow one and that he had time to get off the tracks before its arrival. He was not injured beyond a bruised hand.

A Woburn bound car of the B. & N. road went askew Sunday night at the crossing. The forward trucks of the car started all right for Woburn, but the rear trucks started towards Arlington, and the car naturally came to a stop, but with a wrench that disturbed several passengers. After some half an hour's work the car was replaced in its proper order upon the track.

An electric car jumped the switch at the railroad crossing Wednesday morning shortly after nine o'clock, stopping directly on the steam tracks. The motor man ran it off the crossing before the 9.15 express arrived, after which the crew succeeded in replacing it on the tracks.

The new name for the express which passes through the centre every evening at 5.15 is "The Dog Killer." This train probably holds the record of killing more dogs in the centre than any other.

MR. KNOX REPORTED SLIGHTLY BETTER.

Word was received on Tuesday morning by Mr. Henry F. Johnson that his nephew, Mr. Chester Knox of Boulder, Col., was dying of typhoid fever. Mr. Knox was reported as having a chance for recovery on the evening of the same day, and it is expected that he has continued to improve.

Mr. Knox resided in this town up to a few years ago, and has many friends here. He is engaged in the manufacture of mining machinery in the west. It was known that he was seriously sick, but the news that he had no chance for life Tuesday morning, came as a great shock to his relatives and friends.

THE LEADING HOME THEATRE.

For a third season under the management of the Boston Stage Society, the Castle Square Theatre has begun its new year most auspiciously. As the leading home theatre of Boston, it is the only playhouse in that city with a repertory drawn from the best and most popular dramas of all ages, and the ability of its stock company, the perfection of its stage management, and the careful attention to all artistic details, is gradually bringing to it and securing for it the patronage of all theatregoers. Although its productions are staged merely for a single week, they are put on with great care and expense as if they were to run the season through, and more than one revival of a classic or standard drama has received the highest praise from competent and unbiassed critics. As one of them has well said: "The productions at the Castle Square are unexcelled; they would do credit to Irving, to Mansfield, to Mrs. Fiske, or to any acknowledged masters of stage-craft."

The plans for the next few weeks at the Castle Square have just been announced, and the list of plays reveals extraordinary variety. It runs as follows: Oct. 15, A Temperance Town; Oct. 22, Sardous's Theodora; Oct. 29, Julius Caesar; Nov. 5, Trilby; Nov. 12, Monsieur Beaucaire; Nov. 19, Quo Vadis. The performance of Julius Caesar on Oct. 29 will be the beginning of another series of Shakspearian productions similar to that which received such high commendation last season.

It should be remembered that although the Castle Square Theatre is situated at the corner of Tremont and Chandler streets, it is as accessible as if it were in the down town theatre district. It may be reached from any point through the subway by transfer at Pleasant street, and all Tremont street cars from the south side of the city pass directly by its doors. It is moreover but a step from all the cars that pass through Berkeley and Dover streets.

The races for the Eastern Division Sailing Trophy will be held on Mystic Lake Saturday afternoon, Oct. 13th, at 2 o'clock. In addition to the Winchester Boat Club members, Starling Burgess of Marblehead will sail his new canoe, and Mr. Herbert Moore of the Knickerbocker Canoe Club of New York will also sail. The races promise to be very interesting and closely contested.

Rev. W. I. Lawrance attended the Unitarian convention at Petersham Institute last week.

LAST HOOSAC TUNNEL EXCURSION SAT., OCT. 13.

$2.00 Round Trip via Boston & Maine R. R.

On Saturday, the Boston & Maine Railroad will run one of its most delightful fall excursions. This trip is through the beautiful Hoosac Country and Deerfield Valley to North Adams, where an opportunity is presented to climb Old Greylock, or to visit the many interesting points of the Hoosac Mountains and the Taconic Range. This affords also a grand chance to see the wonderful piece of engineering, the famous Hoosac Tunnel. Should you desire, you can leave the train at Hoosac Tunnel Station and make connection with the Hoosac Tunnel & Wilmington Railroad for a trip through the most beautiful portion of the upper Deerfield Valley to Wilmington, Vt. Wilmington is a beautiful place for a day's visit, and at the old-fashioned hotel, Child's Tavern, a delightful dinner can be procured. The round-trip rate from Boston, including a stop-off at the Tunnel and a trip to North Adams, is $2.00. Tickets are on sale at Boston & Maine Railroad City Ticket Office, 322 Washington street, up to 5.00 p. m, Oct. 12, and at Union Station until departure of train, October 13. Special train will leave Boston & Maine, North Station, at 8.30 a. m., Waltham 8.49, Ayer 9.30, Fitchburg 9.55, and Gardner 10 30. The rate from all these stations is $2.00, except Gardner, which is $1.75. Returning, leave North Adams at 4 30 p. m., stopping at Hoosac Tunnel Station each way, or returning on regular train, October 14 or 15.

AMATEUR BOWLERS MEET.

The Amateur Bowling League of Massachhsetts held its annual general meeting last night at the B. A. A. The resignation of the 999th bowling club was accepted. Two resignations of the league officials were accepted, Warren M. Hill and G. S. Littlefield, president and secretary, respectively.

The following clubs signified their intention of remaining members of the league: Central, Commercial, Dudley, Newton.

The following officers were elected for the year: President, F. L. Crocker, Commercial club, Brockton; vice-president, A. E. Watts, Central club, Somerville; treasurer, L. W. Marston, Dudley club; secretary, John L. Behnke, B. A. A.

THE FOOD FAIR.

The food fair which is now open in the Mechanics' Building, Boston, is the best ever given. The color scheme predominating the entire interior is simply grand and alone is well worth a visit. The displays are artistically arranged and include about everything in the nature of food products. A musical program is given every afternoon and evening by the celebrated United States Marine Band of Washington. The side shows are free and vocal concerts are given, and this with the large number of exhibits makes one day too short a time to take in all the pleasant sights.

RAILROAD PROBLEM.

Supposing a railroad from A to B costs $1000 to build, on which the fixed charges are $4000 a year.

Supposing it costs $1000 a year to keep the roadbed in order and $1000 a year to run the trains, this makes a total cost of $6000.

The fares are established at $1 a trip and six thousand people travel each year, making a total income of $6000 a year, just paying the expenses.

The railroad then builds an additional line from B to C of the same length and under the same conditions with the result that the expenses of running the road from B to C are $6000 a year and that 6000 people at $1 each travel between the two points making the net income equal to the expenses.

Between A and C there is a route by water on which the fares are 50 cents so that no one travels from A to C by railroad since of course the fare from A to C is $2. The railroad can now do three things.

First. It can keep the fares at $1 from A to B, $1 from B to C, making $2 from A to C and it just pays expenses and nobody complains of discrimination.

Second. In order to get the traffic from A to C they can cut the rate from A to B to 25 cents and from B to C to 25 cents making a rate from A to C of fifty cents or enough to get the water born traffic. With this cut in rates, of course many more people would travel say, the equivalent of 24,000 people at 25 cent fares instead of the 12,000 people who formerly traveled at $1 fares.

In order to handle this increased traffic, there would be no increase in the fixed charges nor in the cost of keeping the roadbed in order, but the cost of running the trains would double and we therefore have the following balance sheet:

Fixed charges on each of the roads, $4000 or a total of $8000.

Keeping the road bed in order on each road, $1000, on both roads, $2000.

Running trains twice what it was with the 12,000 people traveling, or a total for both roads of $4000, or a total expense $14000.

Against this we have an income of 24,000 fares at 25 cents or $6000 compared with an expense of $14,000.

Obviously the roads cannot reduce the fares to this point.

The third solution is as follows:

Supposing the road makes the fare from A to B 95 cents, B to C 95 cents, but sells through tickets from A to C which tickets read that the passenger is not allowed to get off the train at B at a price of 45 cents for the through ticket.

The balance sheet under these circumstances then works out as follows:

6,000 people who formerly paid $1, travel from A to B, now pay 95 cents and the road gets an income of $5700. 6,000 people who formerly traveled from B to C at $1 each now pay 95 cents and the road gets $5700.

6,000 people who formerly travelled by water from A to C at a cost of 50 cents each, now buy these through tickets at 45 cents by rail and the roads get $2700, from that, making a total income of $14,100. Against this income, the expenses are as follows;

For fixed charges $8000 as before.

For keeping the roadbed in order, $2000 as before.

For running trains, 1-2 as much again as when only 12,000 people traveled or $13000 making a total expense of $13000 showing a profit to the road of $1100, more than in the first case.

We therefore, have this situation: Under the $1 fares with no discrimination, everybody is satisfied. If the fares are cut so as to get the water born traffic, the road cannot possibly make money without so-called discrimination.

Under the third system of fares, the people who formerly paid $1 now pay $.95; people who formerly paid fifty cents, now pay 45 cents.

The roads which formerly just paid fixed charges, now earn a small profit, but the road is selling tickets from A to C at 45 cents and telling the man who buys them that if he wants to get off half way he must pay 95 cents.

The above, while not taken from the experience of any particular existing road, is an exact statement of the conditions that exist.

The Boston papers had an account the other day of a very remarkable case where a Kansas City man after being apparently dead for four months was taken from the family vault by his fiance, restored to life and health and then went on his wedding tour. Names, dates and places were given. The story aroused the interest of a Wakefield physician and he sent a clipping of it to the city clerk of Kansas City asking as to its authenticity. The clipping came back endorsed "Fake story." This is a fair sample of the stuff with which some of the city papers are regaling their readers these days.—[Wakefield Item.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The thirty-third annual convention of Mass. W. C. T. U. met in Trinity M. E Church, Worcester. Thursday, Oct. 4.

As the Worlds W. C. T. U. Convention is to be in Tremont Temple, Boston, from Oct. 17 to 23 the State Convention was limited to two business sessions and the attendance consequently less. The president's address was not given in full and superintendents of different departments of work were allowed but two minutes in which to report the best thing done to advance the cause. All, both annual address and reports, will appear in the printed minutes. The president's address was full of good cheer in respect to the past and wise suggestions for the coming years work.

Among the greetings by Worcester men we were pleased to see and hear Rev. Mr. Cheney who was for a time pastor of Winchester Methodist Church and highly esteemed by all.

Mrs. K. L. Stevens was re-elected as president, Mrs. J. H. Knox as corresponding secretary; Mrs. Pevear as treasurer; Mrs. H. G. Rice as recording secretary. The evening address was by Miss Annie M. Lile of London, Eng. She said she wished to correct statements that drunkenness was on the increase in London. Much advance had been made, that not many years ago it was not uncommon for men to become drunken at banquets and on other occasions but at the present time it is considered a disgrace. In a very pleasing manner she spoke of her first interview with Miss Frances Willard, that she made one feel as if she wanted to do her best.

A pleasant feature of the convention was the presentation of a fine portrait of Mrs. Gifford the first president of Mass. W. C. T. U. by Worcester County to be placed in the headquarters, 14 Beacon street, Boston.

Another good thing, a representative of Worcester Press claimed the attention for a moment and expressed his appreciation of the efforts of the W. C. T. U. in doing so much to better conditions in their city and elsewhere and thought he was safe in saying that he voiced the sentiment of the whole Press of Worcester.

Friday evening there was a senior L. T. L. Rally in the Old South Church. The Senior Loyal Temperance Legions of Worcester and Leicester uniting.

Some of the graduates of the Loyal Temperance Legion are actively engaged in the temperance work as young men. Mr. Herbert C. Shattuck of Ithaca, N. Y., a National Organizer, has recently given some items from his diary kept during the journey he took from July 1905 to July 1906. Will give but one:

"My route took me up the coast through San Jose to San Francisco. Twenty-four days were spent in beautiful California. Eight legions were organized and more than five thousand people were reached in the eleven towns and cities visited. California is a wine state, and yet 175 of its towns and cities have voted the saloons out. They have found that it pays from a business standpoint too. Property values have gone up, taxes have gone down, city improvements have multiplied, the cities are cleaner and the people more contented, self respecting and happy. What a pity, that poor scourged San Francisco, that faltered not in the face of physical ruin and disaster, could not muster out enough manhood to make use of the lesson he had learned, but with eyes blinded by the glitter of gold must again throw open the doors to shame and misery. Many men have courage to face cannon, flood, fire and earthquake. God give us men who are as brave morally, who will die rather than disgrace their towns and cities, for the doubtful profit received from the saloon. May not such an oncoming manhood accrue through the awakening interest of the W. C. T. U. and young people of the Pacific coast in the Loyal Temperance Legion?"

One of our exchanges is sympathetically wondering what the poor Chicago packers will do with the hog snouts now that they can no longer chop them up and label them potted chicken. Perhaps they will have to let them go with the "squeal" which it was their famous boast was the only part of the pig they couldn't use.

My Hair Ran Away

Don't have a falling out with your hair. It might leave you! Then what? That would mean thin, scraggly, uneven, rough hair. Keep your hair at home! Fasten it tightly to your scalp! You can easily do it with Ayer's Hair Vigor. It is something more than a simpie hair dressing. It is a hair medicine, a hair tonic, a hair food.

METROPOLITAN EXPENSES.

In a report recently issued by Hon. Arthur B. Chapin, treasurer and receiver general of the commonwealth, are some interesting facts and figures relating to the expense of the metropolitan water, park and sewerage systems.

The total population of the 41 cities and towns in the metropolitan district is 1,275,364, of which Boston has 595,285. The total assessment for 1906 for water, park and sewers is $3,975,114.40, of which Boston will have to pay $2,668,956 85. The assessments for 1906 for water amount to $2,262,657; for parks, $959 596; and for sewers, $752,861.

In order to meet the fundamental cost of these three systems the commonwealth has issued its bonds to a total amount of $67,160,412. This indebtedness is distinct from the direct debt of the state and imposes no direct burden upon the state as a whole, for the payment of these bonds is secured by sinking funds, provided for by annual assessments upon the cities and towns benefitted. The state also collects from them the interest and cost of maintenance.

By far the largest portion of the total amount of bonds issued is for the metropolitan water system, or $40,500,000. This system, however, is more than self-supporting to the cities and towns interested, for, while the total assessments on the cities and towns of the water district this year amount to $2,262,657.20, the cities and towns received from the sale of water to their citizens $3,425,097.84 though from this amount they are compelled to pay for the maintenance of the system within their respective limits; so that probably the revenue about balances the assessments. Seventeen cities and towns use the metropolitan water.

For metropolitan park and boulevards, etc., bonds have been issued by the state amounting to $12,632,500, which includes $200,000 for the Wellington bridge. The expense is borne by 39 cities and towns in the metropolitan district. The total assessment for the Wellington bridge for 38 cities and towns is $18,076.04. A special assessment for this bridge has been levied on Somerville, Medford, Malden, Stoneham and Reading to run through five years. This assessment amounts to $34 985 06.

The total amount of bonds issued for the north and south metropolitan sewer systems is $14,027,912.

106 YEARS AGO.

In looking over some old papers recently, I came across a report of the Census taken for the towns of Woburn, Burlington, Lexington and Bedford, Jan. 22, 1800, by Lieut. Sam'l. Thompson of Woburn, that is quite interesting to compare with present day figures, and thus show the progress these towns have made during the last 100 years of their existence.

In the enumeration for Woburn is included "55 Laborers on the Middlesex Canal, some foreigners, and some from the neighboring States."

The list gives the names of the heads of families, and the first name in the Woburn list is Col. Loammi Baldwin who had nine in his family besides one African.

	Males	Females	Negroes or Mulatoes	Total	Houses
Woburn	373	537	18	1228	156
Burlington	251	281	2	534	74
Lexington	506	494	6	1006	124
Bedford	260	273	5	538	74
Total for the district	1690	1585	31	3306	428

The prevailing idea of today that the female population is largely in excess of the male was not then current, except for Burlington and Bedford, where they did predominate to a small degree.—["L" in Woburn Journal.

A Curiosity In Figures.

The following remarkable contribution to the curiosities of figures consists of two series of numbers, of which no description is necessary, as they speak for themselves. Perhaps there is no special profit in them, but they are worth preserving nevertheless:

1 times 9 plus 2 equals 11.
12 times 9 plus 3 equals 111.
123 times 9 plus 4 equals 1111.
1234 times 9 plus 5 equals 11111.
12345 times 9 plus 6 equals 111111.
123456 times 9 plus 7 equals 1111111.
1234567 times 9 plus 8 equals 11111111.
12345678 times 9 plus 9 equals 111111111.
1 times 8 plus 1 equals 9.
12 times 8 plus 2 equals 98.
123 times 8 plus 3 equals 987.
1234 times 8 plus 4 equals 9876.
12345 times 8 plus 5 equals 98765.
123456 times 8 plus 6 equals 987654.
1234567 times 8 plus 7 equals 9876543.
12345678 times 8 plus 8 equals 98765432.
123456789 times 8 plus 9 equals 987654321.

White Animals Can't Smell.

"Pure white animals," said a pet stock dealer, "have no sense of smell. Hence they are continually eating things that disagree with them, and in eight cases out of ten poison themselves and die. Pure white pigs should never be allowed to run loose in the fields and woods. For, without the protection of a sense of smell, such pigs, when they get out, eat all sorts of poisonous roots and berries and die off rapidly. "In Africa the white rhinoceros poisons itself by eating the euphorbia, and pure white sheep are difficult to rear because they are continually munching shrubs and grasses that don't agree with them."

Butler's Flag.

Feb. 21, 1861, General Benjamin F. Butler presented to congress the first genuine American flag, made of American materials by American labor, ever constructed in this country. Prior to that time all American government flags had been made of English bunting. Since then all our official flags have been the product exclusively of American material and labor. There were twenty-six stars in the flag at that time.

The Crested Rat.

The crested rat of East Africa is remarkable, first because of the great length of the black and white hairs down the ridge of the back, which are rendered the more conspicuous because the hairs along the sides of the body are so short and so differently colored, being brownish gray and looking for all the world as if some one had taken a pair of scissors and maliciously shorn off the decorative hair, leaving only a dull underfur. Secondly, it is remarkable because the skull has a roofing of bones exactly resembling that of some turtles, while, furthermore, this roof has a granulated appearance recalling that presented by the skulls of certain fishes. In its habits it appears to be arboreal while from the structure of its teeth it would appear to be at least partly insectivorous.

THE INDISPENSABLE MAN.

An Event That Moved Him to Take a Trip to Europe.

He was one of those men who believe that if they let up for a moment the whole world will go to smash. Especially was this so about his own business. When his wife wanted him to go to Europe for a rest he said:

"Impossible to get away from the office. Why, if I were to stay away six weeks there's no telling what would happen. No, I must be there all the time."

So they didn't go to Europe. Instead he got sick, good and sick, too, the kind of sick that kept him on his back for nearly a month and didn't let him get back to his desk for still another week.

The day came for his return to harness, and he plunged for the office. All the way downtown his mind danced with the visions of the wreck of business that would greet him. He expected to find the staff demoralized, the business gone to pieces, the cobwebs thick on the order books and an air of gloom hanging over all which could be dispelled only by his triumphal entrance. He fancied himself picking the business out of the mire and putting it on its feet again.

But did he? Not quite.

He entered the office. The boy was there and looked up at him as though wondering if the boss were not a little bit late. The cat rubbed against him as she always did. His desk was opened as usual, and on it was no pile of mail, the accumulation of all these weeks. The clerks were at their places as usual. In fact, nothing was apparent of the awful disaster that he had expected; hardly any one seemed to know that he had been away.

He stopped for a moment, breathless, and then managed to call one of his men to him and ask about something. The man began to tell him what had been going on. They had been transacting business just as though he had been there—answering mail, filling orders, taking reports from traveling men and sending them out again—in short, the little particular world of his business had gone on just as though he had been there all the time.

He heaved a sigh—a sigh of humility. In fifteen minutes he had telephoned his wife to make plans for a European trip, and that he would accompany her. Thus do matters make us see how small we are.—New York World.

THE WINDOW CURTAIN.

Originally It Was For Use and Not For Ornament.

The real purpose of the window curtain is to regulate the amount of light admitted to the room and a curtain so arranged that it cannot be drawn backward and forward at will is but a meaningless accessory. It was not until the beginning of the century that curtains were used without regard to their practical purpose.

The window hangings of the middle ages and of the renaissance simply were straight pieces of cloth or tapestry hung across the window without any attempt at drapery and regarded not as part of the decorating of the room, but as a necessary protection against drafts.

It probably is for this reason that in old prints and pictures representing the rooms of wealthy people curtains are so seldom seen. The better the house the less need there was for curtains. In the engravings of Abraham Bosse, which so faithfully represent the interior decoration of every class of French house during the reign of Louis XIII., it will be noticed that in the richest apartments there are no window curtains. In all the finest rooms of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries the inside shutters and embrasures of the windows were decorated with a care which proves that they were not meant to be concealed by curtains. In fact, it would be more difficult to cite a room of any importance in which the windows were not so treated than to enumerate examples of what really was a universal custom until the beginning of the nineteenth century.

It is known, of course, that curtains were used in former times—prints, pictures and inventories alike prove the fact—but the care expended in the decorative treatment of windows makes it plain that the curtain, like the portiere, was regarded as a necessary evil rather than as part of the general scheme of decoration. The meagerness and simplicity of the curtain in old pictures prove that they were used merely as window shades or sun blinds. —Philadelphia Ledger.

An Air Brush.

Dottie was asked, "What is a fan?"

After a moment's thought Dot replied, "A fan is a thing to brush warm air away with."

A Monster Musical Instrument.

The most gigantic harp ever constructed, as far as the record goes, was that made by Veritan, the provost of Burkli, near Basel, Switzerland, in 1787. That was a long while ago, but the fame of M. Veritan's gigantic harp was such that it is still occasionally mentioned by writers on the rare and the wonderful, just as the sea serpent, bloody rain, live mastodons, etc., are. M. Veritan's colossal musical instrument was 320 feet in length, and, on that account, was constructed in an open lot instead of in a harp factory. It was most simple in construction, consisting of fifteen wires strung tightly between two poles. These wires were of different sizes, the largest being one-sixth of an inch in diameter and the smallest one-twelfth of an inch. They were stretched north and south and inclined in such a manner as to form an angle of from twenty to thirty degrees with the horizon. This queer instrument was not intended as an exaggerated toy, but was constructed for the express purpose of foretelling changes in the weather, which were calculated by Professor Veritan according to the different tones the instrument made when the wind was blowing through it.

As You Please.

In the ancient times there lived a wonderfully wise man, of whom it was said that he could answer correctly any question put to him. There was one, however, who thought himself clever enough to outwit the sage. This man took a poor, captive bird and clasped it so closely in his hand that only the head and tail were visible.

"Tell me," said he to the renowned guesser of riddles, "is the bird which I hold in my hand alive or dead?"

If the answer were "Dead," thought this artful plotter, he would just open his hand and let the bird fly. If the answer were "Alive," he would with one little squeeze crush the poor bird to death.

But the wise man proved himself equal to the occasion and replied, "It is as you please."

Each one holds within his or her grasp the fair bird of life. Which is it to be? A blessing or a bane? It is "as you please."

Pressed to Death.

An English court has sentenced a woman to imprisonment because she refused to speak during a trial. The old penalty for remaining mute under similar conditions was being pressed to death. The form of sentence set forth "the prisoner shall be laid in some low, dark house, where he shall lie naked on the earth and one arm shall be drawn to one quarter of the house with a cord and the other arm to another quarter, and in the same manner let it be done with his legs, and let there be laid upon his body iron and stone, as much as he can bear—or more." There the man had to lie. On the following day he was given three morsels of bread without water, on the following water, but no bread. And this was his diet until he died.

Great Discovery.

The editor of a Kansas paper states that he once borrowed a Winchester rifle and started up the street a few days after to deliver the weapon to its owner. The delinquent subscribers got it into their heads that he was on the warpath, and every one he met insisted on paying what he owed him. One man wiped out a debt of ten years' standing. On his return to his office he found a load of hay, fifteen bushels of corn, ten bushels of potatoes, a load of wood and a barrel of turnips that had been brought in. We would like to borrow a Winchester for a day or two. —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Disadvantage of Health.

A visitor among the poor of the east end of London found unexpected testimony to the disadvantages of health in one of his calls. Mrs. B. had a family of a dozen children, and, like most of her class, she had her tale of woe to tell. "How are the children, Mrs. B.?" inquired the caller. "All very well, indeed, sir; very well, indeed," was the answer. "You ought to be thankful, I'm sure, with so much sickness about." "Yes, sir; I suppose I ought to be thankful; but, I tell you, when they're well they eat an awful lot."

Java's Population.

Java is very thickly populated, and cultivation is pushed to an extraordinary distance up the steep slopes of the hills. The plain of Leles in the month of July "is one sea of ripe golden rice, with here and there a village of brown thatch roofs nestling in a group of green cocoanut trees." In the middle of the island white chimneys of sugar mills peep above miles and miles of sugarcane fields.

Fire and Water.

Why does water put out fire? Water reduces the temperature of the flame below the point of ignition; therefore it cannot burn. Water does not smother the flames even when the burning brand is completely immersed in a tank of water, because the first contact puts out the fire—that is, reduces the temperature of the flame below the point of ignition.

Too Much Exercise.

Unfortunately a good many men have the conviction that they must keep exerting themselves all the time. They call every moment wasted which is not spent in activity of some kind, either physical or mental. Such men are taking the quickest means to burn themselves out. You cannot live well and keep happy under a constant and tyrannical sense of effort. There must be times of play, times to let up the tension and to do easy and natural things which don't require conscience and exact attention. Horace Bushnell, the great Connecticut minister, recognized this when he said, "Let's go sin awhile." Sinning has the advantage of being easy, and there are times when the easy thing is the right thing. A man who takes no time off for one kind of play or another, but who keeps the anxious, conscientious look on his face day in and day out, may be on the road to heaven, but he will find that the sanitarium is a way station.—Dr. Luther H. Gulick in Good Housekeeping.

A Few Corrections.

A few things picked up from a child's schoolbook: Never say, "I don't think it will rain." What you mean is, "I do think it will not rain." "All over the world" is bad; say "Over all the world." "The reason why" is not only incorrect, but doesn't sound as well as "The reason that." In the King James version of the Bible, quoted by some authorities as a standard of pure English, one may find the following, which occurs in Isaiah xxxvii, 36: "Then the angel of the Lord went forth and smote in the camp of the Assyrians a hundred and fourscore and five thousand, and when they arose early in the morning, behold they were all dead corpses." In other words, the corpses arose early in the morning and found themselves dead. Don't say "A man fell off the dock." A man might fall into a dock, but to say that he fell off a dock is no better than to say he fell off a hole.

Henry Clay's Popularity.

The greatest popular idol in a political sense the country has ever known was Henry Clay. Only one other American statesman ever possessed the quality called personal magnetism to the same extent that he did, and no other ever had a more enthusiastic personal following. He was an aspirant for president from 1824 to 1848, but never reached the goal. He received 37 electoral votes in 1824, 49 in 1832 and 105 in 1844, but never enough to elect him. Clay was elected speaker of the house of representatives on the first day of his term in that body and was five times re-elected. He was twice elected United States senator, once unanimously by the Kentucky legislature, and held several other high offices. If there was ever a popular idol in the politics of this country, it was Henry Clay, but he could not be elected president.—Indianapolis Journal.

The Old Plane Tree of Cos.

In the island of Cos, in the Ægian sea, there stands, jealously guarded, a huge plane tree measuring nearly eighteen yards in circumference. It is surrounded by a podium, or raised platform breast high, doubtless built to support the trunk of the tree after it had become hollow and weak from age. The lower branches are still well preserved and have been shored up by pieces of antique columns, over the upper ends of which the branches have grown like cups in consequence of the pressure of their own weight. Close by the tree is a solid marble seat, which is said to be the chair of Hippocrates, the father of medicine, and it is supposed that he taught the art of healing from that seat. He was born at Cos 460 B. C. This gives a clew to the age of the celebrated plane tree, which must be considerably more than 2,000 years old.

His Last Name.

A gentleman once asked a lad what was his last name.

"Johnny," replied the boy.

"Well, what is your full name?"

"Johnny Brown, sir."

"Well, how can Johnny be your last name?"

"Because, sir, when I was born my name was Brown, and Johnny wasn't given to me till I was a month old."

The Twin Bridge Plan.

The plan printed on first page is undoubtedly the best yet submitted as a solution of the present grade crossing problem. It is known as the "Twin Bridge Plan," and has the endorsement of some of the best citizens. With the exception of the plan favored by the Selectmen, which calls for the raising of the centre of the town at enormous expense, the principal merits of the many other plans have been their cheapness. With the "Twin Bridge Plan" is presented something more important than cheapness, and that is convenience and preservation of the business centre of the town. Winchester cannot afford to have its centre become the means of damaging the entire town by agreeing to the cheapest method of abolishing the crossing. Our interests are far greater than are those of the other interested parties combined, and this fact should at no time be lost sight of. We should jealously guard the future.

The "Twin Bridge Plan" calls for two bridges and the necessity for them will be apparent to all who will give the matter only the slightest consideration. With one bridge there is danger at any time of one half of the town being cut off. Suppose the bridge was put out of commission and there should be a fire on the west side of the town, the damage might be enormous before the fire apparatus could reach the scene by way of Swanton street or Bacon street. There is danger, too, that the insurance interests would compel, and perhaps justly, the maintenance of a large equipment of fire apparatus on both sides of the town. As our correspondent, Mr. Redfern, says, there could be "No more convenient or central location for a new engine house than the present site, as its situation on New Main street about midway between the two bridges will enable the fire department to respond quickly and easily to an alarm on either side of the town." Considerable saving would result in building the proposed new engine house on the land at present owned by the town if the "Twin Bridge Plan" is adopted.

An important matter to the Boston & Maine Railroad is that the present grade of the roadbed would not be disturbed, as is the case with other plans.

Again, the Boston & Northern electric road would be called upon to go to but little expense for relocating its tracks. The land damages would not be large, but considerably less than some other plans call for, while conditions in the centre would remain as at present. If for no other reason than that it calls for two bridges, Mr. Redfern's plan should meet with the approval of all. There can be no serious objection from the Boston & Maine to this plan. It is practical and inexpensive, and does not require the interested parties to build ornamental plots and wipe out a large amount of business and residential property that the town is now receiving a good revenue from.

Read carefully Mr. Redfern's article on the first page.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

October 8th, 1906.

Board met at 7.45 p. m. All present.

Voted that Supt. of Streets be instructed to construct and install the Lebanon street fountain according to plans and specifications adopted.

Voted that the Supt. of Streets be instructed to put in drainage on Myrtle terrace as per plan and estimate.

Voted that the Supt. of Streets be instructed to lay a concrete sidewalk on School street, easterly side; the School Board to pay one half the expense.

Voted to write the Boston & Northern St. R. Co., the Edison Electric Illuminating Co., and the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., to appear before the Board, Tuesday, October 23rd, at 8.00 p. m., in regard to an agreement for the consolidation of pole lines on Pleasant street.

Voted that the Town Engineer be instructed to prepare grade plan of Mystic avenue.

Voted that all articles to be inserted in the warrant for the Town Meeting, Oct. 22nd, must be in the hands of the Selectmen by 7.30 p. m., Monday, Oct. 15th, next.

Voted to hold a hearing on the petition of Martin D. Kneeland and others for the acceptance of Fells road, so-called, as a town way, on the premises Monday, Oct. 15th, next, at 8.30 a. m.

Received from the Chief of Police, a list of defective lamps on the highways.

Received from Hayes Robbins communication in regard to repairing of Cross street, and the Lebanon street fountain, which was placed on file.

Received from the Supt. of Streets communication complaining of the manner in which rubbish and leaves burnt in the streets are left without being taken care of. Referred to the Chief of Police to prevent such practice.

Warrants drawn for $2828.45, and $1287.39.

Adjourned at 10.30 p. m.

CLARIGOLD MUSICALES.

Last Sunday, Oct. 7, at Mr. Clarke's music hall on Woburn-Reading line, Mr. William W. Crosby played cornet solos, The Good Shepherd by Barri, and Still wie die Nacht by Bohm; Mrs. Lewis and son played piano duets,—Berceuse and Marche by Rubinstein; and Mr. Lewis played organ selections from recent American composers, including two of his father's ms. compositions.

This was the fifth and last of the series of informal artistic Sunday afternoon musicales, which were enjoyed each week by a hundred or more music lovers from several nearby towns, which pleasure was made possible by the generosity of Mr. Clarke and the contributing artists.

LONG TRIP TAKEN BY HORSE.

From Winchester to Melrose centre, a distance of seven miles, was the itinerary of a livery horse last Saturday night who walked away from the curb in front of Henry McEwen's residence, Brookside road. The animal is owned by a West Medford liveryman, and heretofore has been regarded as "safe to stand without hitching." When the horse disappeared the police were notified as it was believe the animal had been stolen. Two hours after the alarm was sent out a motorman said he had seen the horse with top buggy sauntering leisurely near Melrose Highlands, and shortly afterward the Melrose police caught the animal, after he had journeyed through two towns and part of a city. The outfit was not damaged.

SENATOR RILEY.

Representative Herbert S. Riley of Woburn, who was nominated last week on the 36th ballot as the republican candidate for senator in the new 6th Middlesex district, was born in Woburn in 1859; was graduated from the high school in 1878 and from Tufts college in 1882. He taught school for several years and was then admitted to the bar. For 11 years he was a member of the Woburn school board and five years its chairman. For 14 years he has been chairman of the city committee. The new senatorial district comprises Medford, Woburn, Winchester, Arlington Stoneham and Wakefield.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

If any such grade crossing abolition plan as that presented in last week's paper is to be considered seriously, it is plain enough that certain changes should be made in it. For instance, the centre square is not nearly large enough for the railroad station and it would be better to leave the station where it is; there would be no necessity of taking the houses on the westerly side of Thompson street, or all of the property from its easterly side to Main street; the street cars from Medford should turn down Walnut street to the proposed bridge and return the same way; Stoneham and Arlington cars should use Main street to the above mentioned bridge. A very similar plan was made by the B. & M. engineers, at the request of the Selectmen, over two years ago but they preferred the Guild-Brown plan, although its cost would be more, the principal objection to the other being the circuitous route for getting to and through the centre for vehicles and cars. All routes are being made as direct as possible now-a-days and round-about ways are objectionable.

Will not the School Committee at least try having a few free public lectures in the Town Hall this winter? The expense would be nominal and it would be strange if they were not well attended and with good results. The people were never so anxious to learn as now and should not have to take their instruction from "Yellow" journals and "red" magazines whose teachings should be combatted in time.

Much discomfort and annoyance is caused by passengers blocking up the rear end of the street cars, forcing others to crowd by them, it also delays cars and adds to the danger of operation besides. Frequently people can hardly get into cars on account of this even when there are some unoccupied seats up front and plenty of room in the aisle there. If the railroad company had gumption enough to have front as well as rear doors open at all centres it would help very much. The conductor's request to move up does not seem to have much effect.

There are many kinds of railroad accidents that there is some excuse for, but it is pretty difficult to see any excuse for rear end collisions and the train crews should be indicted in every case and some of the officials too. There seems to have been no more excuse for last week's accident on the B.& M. than there was for the Baker's Bridge accident.

The Republicans undoubtedly nominated the best of the candidates before them for this district and they also showed their courage or rashness in holding this convention in District Attorney Moran's county.

Charles Willis Thompson, Washington correspondent of the New York Times and the Philadelphia Public Ledger, says in his most interesting book just published entitled, Public Leaders of the Times, "If you abruptly ask any Washington looker-on who are the men of real brains on the Republican side of the House he will mention Hepburn, Tawney, McCall, Burton and Littlefield in a breath, and then hesitate for the next name." This book is in our library and is well worth reading.

MRS. GEORGE D. STEVENS.

Mrs. George D. Stevens who was killed in the train wreck at Troy, N. Y., formerly resided in Malden. Her two brothers are well known members of the theatrical profession, one being manager of The Strollers' company. Mr. Stevens, had not been in good health for some time and had passed most of the summer at the seashore, and was on his way to Lake Mohawk, N. Y., for an extended stay. They were married in Malden, she being Lizzie Deshon, daughter of the late Mrs. Deshon of Highland avenue, that city. They had lived in Winchester about five years. This sad news is not only a great shock to Mr. Stevens mother and relatives in Malden and his wife's two brothers in the west, but to their large circle of friends in Winchester.

Mr. Stevens is a son of the late Hon. Ezra A. Stevens of Malden. He is a member of the firm of Willard Welch & Co., Exchange place, Boston.

The funeral of Mrs. George D. Stevens, who was killed in the railroad wreck at Troy, New York, last week was held at 26 Dexter street, Malden Monday afternoon. The Rev. W. I. Lawrance of Winchester officiated and burial was at Forestdale.

The whist club of Winchester, of which she was a member, sent a beautiful floral reminder. Also there were many tributes from friends here. Many people from Winchester attended the services.

The Handicraft Society announces that its classes in metal work and wood carving will open next week. All those wishing to join the class in metal work are requested to meet Mr. Rogers, the instructor, at the handicraft shop on Friday afternoon, Oct. 19th, at 3 o'clock. On the evening of that day a class in metal work for gentlemen will begin at 8 o'clock. On Saturday afternoon, Oct. 20th, those wishing to join the class in wood carving may meet the instructor at the shop at 3 o'clock.

A Magnificent Yet Practical Scheme of Improvement.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The Vinal plan for abolishing the present grade crossing, as outlined in last week's STAR, seems to be the best yet offered. If it could be made a little more comprehensive and take in ALL the land and buildings between Walnut street, Main street and the railroad instead of a portion of them, what a great improvement would be made in Winchester center! It would be a great and lasting benefit to be shared by the railroad, electric road, the town of Winchester and the state of Massachusetts. As the scheme would be a great improvement to the state parkway, the state could come into the arrangemement under the authorization already given by the legislature to expend money to improve the parkway "along the Aberjona river in Winchester."

This would seem to be Winchester's peculiar opportunity to carry out plans to improve the town center in connection with abolishing the grade crossing which will probably never be offered again. The town ought to be willing to pay a good share of the expense and so had the railroad and the electric road both of which would get a closed passageway right through the most costly land in town and would be absolved forever from hereafter maintaining gates and gatemen at great yearly cost. In addition to gaining land for the town to improve the common, other valuable land would be obtained sufficient for an engine house, library building, Young Men's Christian Association building or any other ornamental structure. The whole tract of land with the river running through it could be so treated that not a town in Massachusetts would have so unique and ornamental center as Winchester.

In comparison with the Selectmen's plan of raising this whole territory, then turning it back into the present owners' hands to be used for commercial purposes forever, how short sighted and cheap the latter plan seems, and yet it would cost more money than proceedings under the Vinal plan. Let Winchester wake up and do its best to carry out some such great improvement as the Vinal plan suggests. Then the abolition of the grade crossing would be a blessing, not in disguise, but patent to anybody who has eyes to see and a mind to comprehend beautiful things. Mr. Vinal has marked on his plan a site for a library building (now occupied by a machine shop) which would make a beautiful feature in the landscape and blend well with the Unitarian Church and the High School building. But there would be other land in the tract suitable for an engine house of ornamental design and certainly the town ought not at present to think of purchasing land for such a purpose until the grade crossing matter is settled. Every contemplated town improvement should now wait until the improvement of the center is decided upon and the grade crossing abolished or perpetuated.

NEW TIMETABLE ON B. & M.

The new running time of the trains for the fall and winter went into effect Monday. The changes are, as a whole very slight, showing that Winchester people are steadily using the steam road as a means of transportation to and from the city.

But these changes in the inward trains deserve notice: the 8.44 a.m., now leaving at 8.39, the 9.22 to 9.27, and the discontinuance of the 9.15 train at night.

The outward trains are virtually the same as at present.

The Sunday trains are also the same except for a few, outward bound, which leave from one to three minutes earlier than formerly.

Wedgemere has no changes to speak of beyond the changing of the 8.46 a. m., to 8.41 and the 9.24 a. m. to 9.29, and loss of one outward train, the 5.49. The Highlands schedule is only very slightly altered.

TOWN MEETING!

A special Town Meeting will be held in the Town Hall, MONDAY EVENING, Oct. 22d, at 7.45 o'clock, to hear and act on the petition for the acceptance of Fells Road and any other articles that may be inserted in the warrant.

Articles to be inserted in the warrant must be in the hands of the Selectmen not later than 7.30 o'clock, Monday evening, Oct. 15th.

G. H. LOCHMAN, Clerk
Of the Board of Selectmen.

NOTICE OF DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

An audience of about two hundred gathered in the Calumet Hall on Monday afternoon, the occasion of the first meeting of the Club. Mrs. Ely, the new president, presented the names of eight applicants for membership.

At the close of a short businss session, the president in an apt and graceful speech, presented Mr. Griggs, the lecturer of the afternoon. For an hour the Club listened in rapture to the masterly effort of this delightful speaker, and the universal sentiment expressed was that of profound appreciation.

Mr. Griggs began with a comparison of the ancient and modern literature as illustrating the great awakening to a deep meaning in human life—a renaissance of the spirit. In the literature of the past forces of fate were considered, not individuals. Even Dante wrote of isolated types, and our beloved Shakespeare makes the humbler folk of his drama only a background for the lords and ladies who really are the representatives of human life.

In the work of the Italian renaissance no matter how perfect technically something vivid, human, is lacking. That which is not seen here is found to its fullest sense at the Luxembourg in Paris. Mood of humanity, dignity of common life is found—the humblest father with his little one, the doctor beside the bedside of the sick child, all interpretation of common life. He dwelt upon the wise teacher as one who makes himself unnecessary at the earliest possible moment St. Francis of Assisi was instanced as that sort of a teacher, Leonardo da Vinci of the opposite type.

He spoke of the saddest tragedies as of the people who never dared to live. Amiel, as an example, a professor at Geneva, dry, academic, who was never really known until the publication of his journal after his death.

The lecture was filled with rare and beautiful thoughts, and one is unable to select among so many choice bits. I will give two: "Live so well you have no temptation to evil living." "The one inclusive fine art is the art of living."

W. H. S. NOTES.

The High school foot ball team disbanded last Monday, owing to the lack of candidates. Since the first of the season the number of candidates for the team has been constantly dropping, until after the Milton game, two men being out of the game for the rest of the season on account of injuries, not enough candidates responded for practice to form a full team. Great praise is due Capt. Richardson for the way he has worked to form a team to represent the school. The schedule of foot ball games is now being cancelled by managers Robinson and Witmer.

The following officers have been elected by the Senior class: President, Harold T. Webber; Vice-president, Dorothy D. Power; Secretary, Alice Main and Treasurer, Leroy Atherton.

These officers have been elected by the Sophomore Class, '09: President, Guy Kinsley; Vice-president, Elizabeth Coit, Secretary, W. Hervy Mason; treasurer, Grace Hatch.

At a meeting of the Athletic association, Monday, it was voted to make an amendment to the constitution in regard to due notice being given of a meeting. Thursday the A. A. voted to send delegates to the meeting of the proposed basket ball league, including Everett, Medford, Wakefield, Melrose and Malden, which the High school has been asked to join, to find out, fully, concerning the league, and report to that body. John Welch and William Witmer were appointed the delegates.

A novelty introduced by the Basket Ball Team this year is season tickets. The prices: $3.00 a piece for reserved seats, and $2.50 a piece for admission.

WINCHESTER COUNTRY CLUB.

The golf play at the Country Club last Saturday was a four-ball foursome which was won by R. L. Hilton and W. M. Foster, with 79, 13, 66.

The summary:

R L Hilton and W M Foster	79	13	66
R S Whitten and G W Brooks	84	11	73
I R Kent and C A Bean	85	12	73
A C Fernald and F C Adams	90	13	77

H. W. Spurr, Jr., in the invitation medal handicap tournament at the Oakley Country Club, last Saturday, out of a field of eighty-four, had the best net score, 83, 14, 69. Dana Wingate came in sixteenth with the score 89, 9, 80. I. W. Small, H. T. Bond, F. B. Tracy and F. O. Fish also entered.

WON WEEK'S PRIZES.

The winners of last week's bowling at the Calumet Club in the South Dakota tournament were Messrs. Fred Redtenbacker and George B. Lawrence.

SOME FATAL ACCIDENTS.

Most everybody admits that accident insurance is legitimate and supplies a public need. That it enables one to make provision against the unexpected. They feel that no one who has loved ones dependent upon his labors can afford to be without it, but rarely do I find a man who appreciates how much the accident companies are paying out each year in claims and what those payments cover.

Here is the fatality experience of one company, The Travelers of Hartford, who paid in death losses, (death by accident,) from simply SEVEN causes, during the first eight months of the present year, over TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS.

Steam railroads and electric and cable railways,	$102.196
Auto fatalities,	61,050
Burning buildings,	28.300
Elevators,	11,000
Steamship,	3.000
Horses and vehicles,	7.750
Bicycles,	200
	$213,496

The disability benefits paid under these classes treble this amount. The U. S. Census Report with its tremendous showing of accidental disabilities, the monthly reports of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the daily newspapars, all preach the moral: "INSURE IN THE TRAVELERS."

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Few plays have aroused greater mirth and jollity, than "A Temperance Town." It is one of the cleverest and most laughable of the late Charles H. Hoyt's farce comedies, and it has always been especially popular in Boston, where it has not been played for at least half a dozen seasons. It then had a memorable run at the Castle Square Theatre, where it was acted to crowded houses for a month. Its revival there next week will be in the nature of a gala series of performances, and there will be doubtless many who will be made acquainted for the first time with the irresistible Hoyt brand of humor. "A Temperance Town" abounds in comedy of the most hilarious kind, and that the admirers of the Hoyt farces will flock to the Castle Square Theatre, there can be no doubt. The Castle Square Stock Company will in this play make evident it's great versatility and the cast will include Mr. Hansel, Mr. Waldron, Miss Lawton, and all the other favorite players.

BURIAL OF JOHN HURLEY.

The funeral of John Hurley, whose death was announced in last week's STAR, took place Sunday afternoon at one o'clock from his late home on Lake avenue, and at 2 o'clock from St. Mary's church. The service at the church was conducted by Fr. Roach. The interment was in Calvary cemetery, Montvale, the bearers being John Lynch, John Bowler, Patrick Boyle, Michael Crampton, Timothy Callahan and John Haley.

High mass was celebrated at St. Mary's church Monday morning at eight o'clock by Fr. Rogers.

Through Straddle Rock Cove

By GEORGE E. WALSH

Copyright, 1906, by George E. Walsh

BOGGLES came aboard at Halifax—a stranded, battered derelict of the sea—anxious to sail to the north coast. He was suffering from a plethora of hard luck, but to Mr. Pierce he had the appearance of one recovering from a period of dissipation. Annette saw only the picturesque side of Boggles, and he was tentatively engaged on the spot.

"I know the Newfoundland coast better'n I know the chart of me own face," confessed the pilot in a soft, pleading voice. "Seeing that I was born in Straddle Rock Cove an' lived there until I was old enough to run away, I ought to."

Annette was romantic, and she anticipated his thoughts.

"And you want to visit your old home again?" she asked sympathetically.

"Yes, ma'am, I'm dying to do that; been trying to get back in the old home port for well nigh twenty years, but what with hard luck an' other things I've always missed it. Once at St. John's, I says to myself, now I'll see Straddle Rock ag'in before I die. I was so sartin of it that I had to break a leg celebrating the event. Of course no one wanted a sailor with a game leg, an' I had to stay in port until the season was too far advanced to go north. Then I shipped to the States ag'in to keep from starving."

"OH, BOGGLES! WHY DID THIS HAPPEN?"

Boggles limped a trifle yet from his broken leg, and one eye seemed to squint with diabolic cunning when you looked him square in the face, but Annette saw none of the ugly sides of the subjects she liked, and Boggles charmed her.

Mr. Pierce grumbled at the bargain, but finally submitted. Pilots familiar with the north coast were scarce in Halifax, and the season was late anyway. "Well, it's for Annette's sake I'm up here," he confessed, "and I suppose I shouldn't object if Annette approves."

"He looks honest, but a bit hardened on the surface by too much contact with the world," ventured Dr. Langdon, with a smile. "I think his story of being born and nurtured in Straddle Rock Cove is a myth, however. I doubt if there is such a place."

"We must visit Straddle Rock Cove," said Annette positively one day. "Mr. Boggles"—she always dignified the old pilot with Mr.—"can guide us there. It's an immensely dangerous harbor, and no one can enter it in a storm except Mr. Boggles."

"Boggles may be all right," drawled the doctor, "but I draw the line at going into Straddle Rock Cove with him in a storm."

Annette ignored the interruption. Mr. Pierce was bored with the whole trip, and he was willing to yield anything for peace.

"You will visit the cove, papa, where Boggles was born?" Annette continued. "You will make him happy again. He's been dreaming of this trip for twenty years."

"If you will be satisfied to return home then we may run in the harbor," craftily replied Mr. Pierce, anxious to shorten the trip by striking any sort of a bargain.

"Yes," reluctantly, "after we stay there a few days."

Straddle Rock grew daily in importance thereafter. It was the first definite point of entry for the yacht. Captain Reed looked the place up on the charts. There was a group of small rocks off a dangerous point of the coast, locally known by the fishermen as Straddle rocks. They were marked "Dangerous" and "No Safe Harbor For Ships or Yachts." He carried his information to the owner and grumbled with mutinous intent.

"Oh, it doesn't matter in the least, captain," retorted Mr. Pierce, annoyed by the new interference. "Annette is persistent, and you must oblige her. Really, it's none of my affair."

"But, sir, this man Boggles may wreck us."

Mr. Pierce waved his hand entreatingly. "Talk to Annette," he murmured.

Annette checked the incipient mutiny by closeting herself in the chart room with the captain for two whole hours. When they emerged both were smiling. No orders were given to change the course of the yacht.

The waters of the north coast met them a week later. They were cold and icy, with the breath of floating bergs hovering over them. Boggles was consulted by the captain, and his meek, submissive air sloughed off to make place for the official bearing of "Mr. Boggles, the north coast pilot."

Boggles was to report for duty the following morning. As his last unofficial act he helped the mate to repair the small acetylene gas generator in the forward part of the yacht. This was used in emergencies for the forward searchlight.

"We've got to keep a sharp lookout for icebergs now," Captain Reed had warned, "and that forward searchlight must be fixed up."

Boggles didn't know much about acetylene gas. Neither did the first mate. They tampered with the plant for two hours, and then a muffled explosion forward alarmed every member of the crew. It was the first mate who exclaimed incoherently:

"The thing—the tank exploded right in our faces. It was so sudden that I could not say how."

Boggles couldn't explain, for he was blinded and his body was blazing like a human torch covered with pitch. The captain and Dr. Langdon squelched the flames, so the yacht was safe, and Annette, with two sailors, rescued Boggles from incineration.

Mr. Pierce was angry and bored to the point of saying:

"How annoying! Any one hurt?"

"Boggles is pretty well done up," the doctor replied, scraping the charred skin from the blackened face. "He's blind as a bat for one thing, and"—

Boggles groaned and stammered in a hoarse whisper:

"I knew I'd never see Straddle Rock Cove ag'in. I might have knowed something would happen. Oh, why didn't I stay away?"

Captain Reed called another meeting to consider the question of changing the yacht's course. "Mr. Boggles is now incapacitated," he exclaimed, "and of course no one else is familiar with this coast."

"That's so," retorted Mr. Pierce, with sudden enlightenment. "Then we must return—at once."

A malevolent light of joy illumined his features.

"Exactly," replied the captain. "I shall order the course changed."

"Not today, captain," interrupted Annette sweetly. "It seems like—like sacrilege to turn around and run home so soon after Mr. Boggles is laid up. I—I think we should keep on a day or two. There is some hope, Dr. Langdon, isn't there?"

The doctor shook his head. "I'm sorry to disappoint you, Annette, but there's none. Boggles is blind—totally blind. He may in six months or a year recover some of his sight, but it is a forlorn hope."

Annette's face darkened. Mr. Pierce thought she was about to cry, and he hastily said:

"We might keep on the same course for a day or two, captain, out of respect for Boggles, and"—

"Yes, yes, certainly."

Annette gave them both a grateful smile, and the conference was ended. Boggles absorbed more attention now than before the accident. Every one paid him deference, but that was partly because all, from the humblest to the highest, knew that the trip was to be abandoned in a day or two. But Boggles didn't know, and he kept moaning:

"I'll never see the Straddle rocks ag'in! If I could see 'em I'd die in peace! Ah, there they are! Are you here, ma'am? Look at 'em! See the sun on 'em! There's where I was born—twenty, thirty, forty, fifty years ago, ma'am!"

"Oh, Boggles!" moaned Annette in return. "Why did this happen?"

Now, the meeting of the cold breath from the north coast and the warm wind of the southern summer plays havoc with the sea at many points between Newfoundland and Labrador. Fierce elemental struggles of the atmosphere shake the sea and earth, and for days and nights no ship is safe in those far regions.

The Grayling was a stanch yacht, but rather undersized for a cruise so far from port. When the wind struck her she danced lightly in the choppy seas, but as the storm developed she grew troubled and frightened.

Boggles had recovered from his feverish delirium and was rational. He heard the storm and found an atom of consolation in it. It relieved his mind of the weight pressing upon it.

For a night and day the yacht drifted. Then in the blackness of the second night the vortex of the frightful storm was reached, with the craft ill prepared to meet it.

The forward watch reported breakers ahead, and the jagged outline of rocks was seen in the distant background. The Grayling was drifting steadily toward them. It was a matter of an hour before she would strike.

Annette heard the summons to prepare for the worst. The two boats which were left would hold the crew and passengers, and there was no alternative but to trust their lives to the tender mercies of the breakers in them.

"Boggles, you must rise and go with me," Annette said. "I'll lead you. We're drifting on the rocks."

"What rocks—Straddle rocks?"

"I don't know," laughed Annette hysterically. "It would be funny if they were."

"No, ma'am, it wouldn't, for they're dangerous—very dangerous in a storm like this."

"Oh, if you could only see, Mr. Boggles, you would save us!"

"Yes, I'd save you. I know the coast."

He pressed a hand to his throbbing head.

"What rocks did you say they were?" he queried again. "How do they look—tall, ragged an' straddling, as if they wanted to block up the entrance to the cove? That's them. Yes, I know them."

"I didn't say, Mr. Boggles, what they looked"—

"Yes, I know that sound," interrupted the man suddenly. "That's off the Saddle's hump. It's three miles to the west of the entrance. I know my reckoning now. I'll take the yacht."

"Mr. Boggles, it is"— Annette started to interpose, but the old pilot was at the door of his stateroom.

"There, take those things away!" he said impatiently, stripping the bandages from his forehead. "I can't see with them on!"

Annette mechanically picked up the discarded strips of fine linen and followed her erstwhile patient through the door. Boggles was on deck before her. All was confusion and blackness there, but the pilot wended his way through the obstructions to the pilot house.

"I'll take her, captain, now," he announced gently. "I've got my bearings. That's the Saddle's hump, an' over there's Straddle rocks. It's nasty weather in here."

Captain Reed stared at the vision, but it was too dark to see clearly. His own nerves were considerably rattled by the recent series of events, and he stepped back in something like superstition.

"Let her go ahead full speed, captain," Boggles continued. "The tide runs like blazes through these channels."

The sailors halted in their work and left the boats swinging half down the davits. Mr. Pierce shouted angrily:

"What's he doing—wrecking us on his blamed rocks?"

"Wait a moment, Mr. Pierce," Dr. Langdon said, the intuition of a vision possessing him. "He can't make matters worse."

"Isn't he blind?" snorted the owner.

"Yes, we're all blind," answered the doctor meekly.

The crash of the breakers on their right drowned all further conversation. The wind veered and shrieked a new tune, and the Grayling cleared the line of rocks by a scant yard.

"That was as close as we could run to the hump without going on," exclaimed Boggles, with both hands on the wheel.

"Now," with a sigh, "for the Straddle rocks. They're worse, much worse in this weather."

"Good God! Then we're lost," groaned Mr. Pierce. "We can't live in anything worse than that."

"Hush, papa!" whispered Annette. "I think Boggles may know."

The yacht yawed and swung wide of the next line of breakers, then faced the black towering rocks. Boggles held her steadily toward them. There was no opening. The sea dashed mountain high against their precipitous face. The white foam spattered the bow of the boat. Mr. Pierce could stand it no longer. He broke loose and shouted in a frenzy:

"We're crazy! That madman will wreck us! Take the wheel, Captain Reed! I command you! Take it!"

But the captain [illegible] and movements. Then he was arrested by a most violent lurch of the yacht. There was a grinding and grating of steel against an unyielding substance. Some one shrieked awfully. It seemed an eternity for the bewildered spectators, but Boggles sighed and said:

"There, we're through the Straddle now! We're safe, captain!"

The towering wall of rocks had miraculously opened, and the Grayling [illegible] shot through a channel so narrow that her sides scraped the outer edges of the strange formation of granite. The current swept the craft forward with accelerated speed.

Then the sea lost its turbulence and the wind its power for evil. Protected on all sides by abutments of rocks, the sheltered cove was like a mill pond compared to the raging sea.

"We'll anchor here, captain," Boggles was saying. "The tide is not so swift inside the rocks, an' the bottom is sandy. I'll take a rest now. I'm tired, an' it's getting dark, very dark. I never knew the cove to be so dark before. I can hardly see the rocks. I think—I'm failing."

It was Annette's arm he clutched, and Annette and the doctor led him below to his room.

Robinson Crusoe.

The second volume of "Robinson Crusoe," by Daniel De Foe, published on Aug. 25, 1719, was the first story published in England with illustrations. The illustrations consisted of a map of the world, in which the different voyages of the hero of the tale were delineated. The first volume of "Robinson Crusoe" was published in April, 1719, and became popular at once. A second edition was printed seventeen days after the first, twenty-five days later another followed, and a fourth was published on Aug. 8 of the same year. On Aug. 20 the second volume was issued under the title of "The Further Adventures of Robinson Crusoe; being the second and last part of his life and of the strange, surprising account of his travels round three parts of the globe. Written by himself. To which is added a map of the world, in which is delineated the voyage of Robinson Crusoe."

The End of Books.

What brings about the end of books? Is it fire, water, worms? As every ship launched is bound to be wrecked, every theater to be burned, the finis of the book is its reduction to ashes. What became of the Alexandrian library? Did the Saracens burn it in 640? There is this question asked: Was there any library at Alexandria containing 700,000 books? Gibbon inclines to the opinion that there was no such library. Canon Taylor insists that if there had been a library it was burned in the time of Julius Caesar. Tradition seems to indicate, however, that there was a library in the serapeum, by no means a large collection, but whether destroyed by Theophilus or Theodosius is not known. It looks as if the charge brought against the Arabs rested on no foundation. Explorations of Alexandria in 1895-96 show no traces of the serapeum. The seaport of Egypt was built on a damp foundation, and granting that there was a library, if not destroyed by fire, then the papyri might have suffered from decay due to water. Books of today taken to India, to the southern states and to the West Indies perish through mildew.

But human bodies are sic fools, for a' their colleges and schools, that when nae real ills perplex them they make enow themselves to vex them.—Burns.

The Blind Historian.

William Hickling Prescott, who was born at Salem, Mass., on the 4th of May, 1796, was the son of a prosperous lawyer, entered Harvard college in 1811 and graduated in 1814. Early in his college career he had his left eye blinded by a piece of bread playfully thrown at him by a fellow student, and the other eye soon became sympathetically affected. He traveled in England, France and Italy and then devoted himself to severe study, but it was not till the beginning of 1826 that he found the work of his life within the range of Spanish history. Fortunately his means were ample, so that he was able to procure the services of assistants and to live amid conditions of comfort. By constant habit he gained the power of carrying a great deal in his memory, and after he had revolved the whole of a chapter in his mind he quickly transferred it to paper by means of his stylus and an ingenious writing case especially constructed for the blind. He published his "History of Ferdinand and Isabella" in 1838, which carried his name across the ocean to the old world. This was followed by his "History of the Conquest of Mexico" in 1843, and of "Peru" in 1847. These gave him a great reputation.

A Fruitarian Diet.

A fruitarian diet consists of the fruits of trees (like apples, oranges, bananas and olives), the fruits of bushes (like currants and raspberries), the fruits of plants (like strawberries and melon, lentils and beans and cucumbers), the fruits of grasses (like wheat and barley and maize and oats), the fruits of nut trees (from filbert to cocoanut), together with some earth fruits (like potatoes), and a mollicum of vegetables and salads. To these may be added butter, milk, honey and cheese, although their production is not so free from risk of contamination and animal infection as is the case with the products of the vegetable kingdom and the world of fruits. Grown under healthy conditions, with diseased specimens easy to detect and remove, it is far more possible to live healthily and well upon a fruitarian dietary than upon the products of the slaughter house.

Making It Plain.

In the lower Amazon country the temperature ranges about 87 degrees in the shade all the year round, says the author of "Ten Thousand Miles In a Yacht." At Manaos, 1,000 miles up the river, the temperature is six or eight degrees higher. Thermometers are little used in that country and little understood. So when a yachtsman returned down river and was asked by an official at Para, "How is the temperature at Manaos?" his reply, "Eight degrees hotter than here," elicited a stare of noncomprehension.

"At Manaos," said the yachtsman in explanation, "I used to wilt six collars a day; here in Para I only need three a day."

This was perfectly clear to the Brazilian, whose face lighted with understanding.

The Arab War Chant.

Captain Von Herbert describes how the sacred chant was sung by Osman Pasha's force in that last dreadful sortie from Plevna. He knows, for, as he says, "as a youngster of seventeen, being then in the Turkish service, I took part in the charge." It is a solemn four part chant for deep male voices, with intervals, the melody recurring again and again, of alternating harmonies hummed almost pianissimo, to the words "Alla Akbar," and then again rising "to a great outburst on the fifth note." There is more than a suggestion of plain song, that song which drifted westward from the east.—Pall Mall Gazette.

At a banquet held in a room, the walls of which were adorned with many beautiful paintings, a well known college president was called upon to respond to a toast. In the course of his remarks, wishing to pay a compliment to the ladies present and designating the paintings with one of his characteristic gestures, he said, "What need is there of these painted beauties when we have so many with us at the table?"

Signs of Brain Exhaustion.

A doctor says that when a person begins to have doubts about the spelling of common words, to write an unnaturally small hand that shows a tendency to waver above and below a straight line and to grasp the pen with unnecessary force, especially at the end of a long word, then that person is suffering from brain exhaustion and ought either to take a complete rest or else to find work of an altogether new and different kind.

An Old Proverb.

The proverb, "Necessity is the mother of invention," can hardly be traced to one independent source. The idea was expressed by Persius, the Roman satirist, about 60 A. D. and is found in the precise form now quoted in Richard Franck's "Northern Memoirs" (printed in London in 1694) and in various later English writers.

Mutual.

Mother (entering parlor suddenly)—Mr. Snowball kissing you? I am surprised. Daughter—So am I, mother. He has been coming to see me five years and he never got up enough courage to do it before.

Confirmation.

Blobbs—Poor old Bjones! The doctor says he won't live six months. Slobbs—I've been telling him that for the last two years.—Philadelphia Record.

The learned man has always riches within himself.—Phaedrus.

Measured the Time.

An old sailor was being examined in an assault case by a cute young lawyer, who questioned his veracity regarding a matter of time.

"You had no watch, and yet you are positive that the defendant was only ten minutes absent. I doubt if you are able to estimate ten minutes of time correctly," he said.

"Try me," said the old tar.

The lawyer drew his watch from his pocket and said, "When I call out 'Now' you allow ten minutes to pass, and when it is up call out 'Time's up.'"

The old salt nodded, and the lawyer called out "Now." Slowly the time passed, and the lawyer, with watch in hand, tried to wheedle him into an admission that time was up. The sailor paid no heed and exactly at the end of the ten minutes shouted, "Time's up." The bewildered lawyer turned round confused at the court's loud laughter, and his eye lighted on the courtroom clock behind him, which had assisted the oil sailor in his task.

Rossini's Laziness.

Rossini was one of the most indolent of men and in his younger days used to do most of his composing in bed. Once he had almost completed a trio, when the sheet fell out of his hand and went under the bed. He could not reach it, and, rather than get up, he wrote another. The lazy man, if he works at all, does so by spurts, and Rossini, working against time, wrote "The Barber of Seville" in thirteen days. When Donizetti was told of this he remarked, "It is very possible. He is so lazy!" The overture to the "Gazza Ladra" was written under curious circumstances. On the very day of the first performance of the opera not a note of the overture was written, and the manager, getting hold of Rossini, confined him in the upper loft of La Scala, setting four scene shifters on guard over him. These took the sheets as they were filled and threw them out of the windows to copyists beneath.

Subjective Drowning.

The dentist's chair was tipped so far back that escape for the village seamstress, a lady of remarkable conversational ability, was impossible. Wads of absorbeat cotton were tucked beneath her tongue, some patent appliance held her jaws apart, and all the lower half of her countenance except one back tooth was concealed under a decidedly damp rubber dam. The patient's mouth was full of water, speech was impossible, and the poor, naturally talkative lady was suffering agonies of discomfort.

The engrossed dentist paid no heed to her squirmings or to the appeal in her eyes. Fortunately, however, the patient's hands were free. Groping in the reticule that hung from her belt, she brought forth paper and pencil and wrote:

"Help! Help! I'm drowning."—Youth's Companion.

A Poet's Curious Compliment.

It was the habit of Richard Henry Stoddard, the poet, to always speak well of every one. No matter how bad the character of a person, the good gray poet invariably found some trait to praise. One day in his office on Park row some friend entered and asked him whether he knew so and so and, if so, what was the man's reputation. It happened that the man had a shady reputation and was well known as a "gold brick" operator. The aged poet lighted his pipe and answered:

"Yes, I know him. He is the most energetic, progressive, irrepressible, good natured, artistic kind of an unmitigated rascal that I ever met."—Leslie's Weekly.

Cold Storage In Irish Bogs.

For long it puzzled me to know what the poachers did with the birds they shot in July. There is no cold storage in the north of Ireland, but they have discovered an excellent substitute. The birds are buried four or five feet deep in dry peat, and, I am told, come out perfectly fresh at the end of two or three weeks. When one remembers the bog butter dug out of the peat bogs in a comparatively fresh state after being buried for probably 200 or 300 years, it is not difficult to believe that grouse might keep, under the same circumstances, for two or three weeks.—Letter in Country Life.

The Tact Market.

Chancellor James R. Day was once advising a young undergraduate of Syracuse university to cultivate tact. "But, alas," he said, "I fear that advice on such a subject must always be wasted. On tact the last word was spoken by Barbey d'Aureville when he said:

"'If tact could be bought, only those already possessed of it would want to buy it.'"

Making New Rubber Plants.

From a rubber plant which is growing in a living room, the best way to get plants is by scoring the bark of the limb where you want the roots to grow and covering the injury with sphagnum moss, which must always be kept damp. Roots will soon permeate the moss, when the limb should be cut off and potted.—Garden Magazine.

Kept Her Word.

"——is," said the school friend who [illegible] seen her for a year, "this is the [illegible] vowed to me that she never w[illegible] belong to any man, eh?"

"I don't," said she who had been married the matter of some few months or so. "He belongs to me."

Women Writers.

We know a number of women writers, and many of them are very good looking—much better looking, at any rate, than men writers, whose appearance is very seldom as attractive as their works.—Academy.

A Curious Tomb.

The most curious tomb in England is that of Lady Anne Grimston, daughter of the Earl of Thanet, who died nearly two centuries ago and was buried in Tewin churchyard. Upon her deathbed she disregarded the efforts of those who sought to administer spiritual comfort. An atheist she had lived, an atheist she would die. "It is as likely that I should rise again from the dead," she said, "as that a tree should grow out of the middle of my coffin." A tree has grown out of the middle of her coffin—an oak—and by its side a sycamore. The vault is square, of brick and granite. The two trees first filled the interior before they could find a way out. When they did burst through the masonry they so spread as completely to envelop the grave.

When Everything Is Poisonous.

All substances, even eggs, are poisonous when they are injected in certain quantities into the circulatory system of an animal. A French investigator has taken the powdered yolk of a duck's egg, treated it with a 20 per cent solution of salt and injected it into the veins of an animal until it died. In order to kill a rabbit fifty-five grains of the substance were required for each pound of the rabbit's weight. The yolk of a hen's egg is less poisonous, but that of a turtle more so than that of a duck. The albumen of eggs is also poisonous.

Far Enough.

One day when William M. Evarts, secretary of state under President Hayes, was a college student he was called on to read Virgil in class.

He started out bravely, "Three times I strove to cast my arms around her neck, and—and"—adding lamely—"that's as far as I got, professor."

"Well, Mr. Evarts," said the professor, "I think that was quite far enough."

The storm that struck this town Tuesday evening was the most severe Winchester has experienced in years. The electric lights were all put out of commission, compelling the inhabitants to grope their way about in the darkness until midnight. Woburn was also in darkness. The heavy rain storm did not do but little damage to the side hill streets, but the drain at foot of Eaton street again proved to small and as a result Washington street at that place was flooded more than ankle deep.

All persons are requested to save any articles which they may have which may be used at the Old Peoples' Home Rummage Sale, to be held Nov. 9th and 10th.

WILL PLAY NO MORE FOOTBALL.

The High school foot ball team has decided to disband for this season and to cancel its schedule of games arranged with other nearby schools and teams.

The reason given is that there is little interest taken in the game by the school at large, and this, coupled with the fact that of the boys who are desirous of playing the game, almost every one is suffering from some injury received this year, has caused the trouble.

Among the list of players incapacitated since the season opened are: Mason, broken finger and dislocated digit; Petts, collar bone broken; Collins, ankle sprained; Symmes, broken nose and finger askew; Webber, sprained ankle. Others have sustained serious hurts. When Capt. Charles E. Richardson called the team for practice the members and substitutes marched forward like a band of crippled soldiers. They were willing to fight to the end of the schedule, but it was deemed best to call it off, and so the team of '06 is out of the running.

VOL. XXVI. NO. 17. WINCHESTER, MASS., FRIDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1906. PRICE, FIVE CENTS

THE SCHOOLS—NO. 3.

Winchester, Mass., O tober 18, 1906.

We gratefully acknowledge the kindly feeling which is so universally manifested in the community towards the general management of the schools of the town, and especially towards our efficient corps of instructors. There is surely no lack of interest in the schools, and no lack of friendly criticism which has for its object their improvement. It seems best, however, to discuss, in the same friendly spirit, a few of the questions, involving a criticism of the schools, which come to us from various sources.

"With good schoolhouses, good teachers, and liberal appropriations what hinders our having excellent schools?" "Why should so many pupils who have spent nine years in the first nine grades read so poorly, spell so wretchedly, and fail so ignominiously in the use of English, both oral and written?" "Why do so many fail to reach the High School, or, having reached that goal by dint of hired tutors, or too generous examiners, utterly fail to reach the moderate standards which admit to colleges and technical schools?" "Why do so many boys and girls, after spending three or four years in our High School, find it necessary to spend one or two years more in some noted preparatory institution, miles away from their own homes, before they are qualified to meet the requirements of our best colleges and scientific schools?"

These are questions that come from our friendly critics with discouraging frequency, and they are of great interest, both to the teaching fraternity, and to the hard pressed property owners who pay the bills.

It is vastly easier to ask questions than to answer them, to catalogue obstacles that bar the educational road, than to clear the way and make success both possible and probable. When we fail to win the prize of our high calling, it is hardly worth while to point to others who have failed also. Far better is it to look for the causes of our disaster, and having found them, devise means by which success in the future may be made sure. With this laudable purpose in view, I shall proceed to point out a few of the probable causes of our discontent as they array themselves in my mind, aided by a memory that reaches back over a good many years of school experience.

When compared with the towns about us, Winchester pays her teachers liberally, and as a consequence, we have a strong corps of instructors. And yet, the community must deal still more liberally with them, or our teaching force will inevitably deteriorate in the near future. Few teachers now save more than one hundred dollars per year from their salaries. A very large percentage save nothing. As they approach the evening of life, our teachers will have little or nothing in the bank to rob old age of its terrors.

With new opportunities for labor constantly opening before them, many of our ablest young women are drawn to other callings than teaching,—to mercantile pursuits with their quick return of generous compensation, rather than to the Normal and training schools where several years of expense must surely await them before they can even apply for positions as teachers.

At the present time, our failures in the school room cannot fairly be attributed to the weakness of our teaching force, but surely, in the years to come, without greatly increased school appropriations, there must be a scarcity of thoroughly equipped school teachers, and consequently a still greater deficiency in our school room product.

In order to judge fairly of the strength or weakness of our schools, we must examine them from the right point of view, and taking this point of view we cannot help seeing that while many of our boys and girls graduate from the Grammar school before they are able to read well, to write good English, or to solve simple mathematical problems correctly, there are very many graduates who can read, write, and even cipher with a commendable degree of success. And if the latter can, why not the former? They are in the same classes, have the same teachers, and usually have more than their share of the teachers' time and nervous energy.

The fact is that many of our pupils come from homes where they are never called upon to do, systematically, any kind of work. They do not seem to understand what real work means. They seem to think that teachers are hired to teach them, and that their part of the contract is completed when they present themselves in the school room, and place themselves in an attitude of passive receptivity. Unfortunately for them, an education cannot be obtained in that way. No child can be educated except through his own efforts. His teachers and his books furnish opportunities for an education, but only by his own hard work can the education be gained. He may have before him the best of food, and yet his poor body will starve unless the food is eaten and properly digested. Teachers and books are helpful, but the pupil must study, and mentally digest the knowledge he gains from them.

Some pupils in a class do this, and succeed in all they undertake, while others in the same class neglect their opportunities because of the hard work required (which is what they need); and the discouraged parent makes a bad matter worse by hiring a tutor to do the work which the pupil was amply able to do for himself. Why not hire someone to save the boy from eating his own meals; someone to play in his stead while he sits comfortably and watches the game, avoiding the necessity of exercising his muscles, and the fatigue incident to such exercise?

The mind as well as the body needs hard work, vigorous exercise. Its needs cannot be supplied by a substitute, whether teacher, tutor, or parent.

Why will boys and girls fail, as scholars, in our own schools, and succeed, often brilliantly, in a good private school? Because in the private school, where social life makes such slight demands, the pupil is bound to his work by hard and fast rules. He eats his meals at prescribed hours, or goes without. He studies at prescribed hours. He goes to bed at night, and gets up in the morning, at prescribed hours. In short, he works as he never worked before. The same rules for work, for sleep, and for recreation, if enforced at home, would have brought the same reaults in his own school. It is true that in some of the large endowed schools, a superior class of teachers, male and female, are employed, at high salaries. This is a distinct advantage which the public schools cannot, with our present means, enjoy, but after all, the great difference between the two kinds of schools, in results, is caused by the hard work which the pupil is required to do in one, and which he neglects to do in the other. These prescribed hours for work and for play, these prescribed hours for study cannot be enforced by the public school authorities. The parents, and the parents only, have that power, and it is practically hopeless to improve, to any great extent, the scholarship in our public school without the active cooperation of the parents in limiting the demands upon our pupils from the social life of the community, and in prescribing for their children the hours for work and for play outside the regular school sessions.

With the air of our town charged with golf, and tennis, and base ball, and foot ball, and basket ball, and billiards, and bridge whist, all in themselves harmless, and in all of which our pupils join, to say nothing of secret societies, dancing parties, and the like, how can we expect a high degree of scholarship in our schools? In England, France, and Germany, the children are almost completely shut out from these social demands. In scholarship their schools are far ahead of ours. These two statements seem to bring cause and effect pretty close together.

Good educational work includes physical as well as mental training, but a proper balance between the two should be maintained. Games, especially out-of-door games, should be encouraged, but the boy whose ball games exhaust his energies, or the girl whose social functions encroach upon her hours for study or for sleep, is pursuing a course which will inevitably end in disaster. Young people under eighteen or twenty years of age, require good food, plenty of physical exercise, and a large amount of sleep. Failing to get all, or any one, of these three requisites, will surely lead to partial, and it may be to complete failure in school work.

Parents can control the home duties of their children. They can insist upon fixed, reasonable hours for study, for recreation, and for sleep. If all, or even a large majority of the parents, will do so, a mighty impulse for good will be felt in the schools.

MARRIAGE OF MISS MAY W. BARTA AND KELLOGG BIRDSEYE.

A quiet home wedding in this town on Friday evening last was that of Miss May Wallace Barta, and Mr. Kellogg Birdseye. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Barta of Cabot street, at whose home the ceremony was performed by Rev. John W. Suter, rector of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Birdseye is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence F. Bridseye of New York City, and a graduate of Amherst '02. The bride is a graduate of Smith College '02.

Miss Elinor Barta, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor, and Mr. Henry V. Birdseye, brother of the groom, was the best man.

Only members of the two families, relatives and intimate friends, including some of the college classmates of both the bride and groom, were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Birdseye will make their home in New York.

Most people buy their fashion books and papers of us—because we sell a large variety. W.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING.

The warrants for the special town meeting for next Monday evening were distributed this week. The warrant contains twelve articles, some of them being of much importance. The first one is the acceptance of Fells road by the town. This street is in good condition and the residents are desirous that the road become a town way because they wish to have the sewer laid and their houses connected.

The committee on a new central fire station will report, but that any decisive action will be taken is unlikely until the grade crossing question is settled. Recognizing this, an appropriation will be asked for to repair the present station which is in a deplorable condition. It is a wonder that the Board of Health has not ordered the building vacated long ago.

The gypsy and brown tail moths we still have in our midst, and therefore an appropriation will be asked to keep them down until such time as the parasites commence work.

The citizens will be asked to place the care and management of the town stable and yard in the hands of the Selectmen.

Probably one half of the citizens are not acquainted with the fact that at one time a school was maintained over in the Hill district. The pupils from that section are now taken to the other schools in barges, thus enabling them to secure a better education than was the case when the school opened its doors to a mere handful of children. The building was sold many years ago, and now the town is to be asked to sell the lot on which it stood.

In the combination of offices' shuffle that was before the citizens at the meeting of last March, Collector Bell did not fare very well when the town voted that all perquisites received by officials be turned into the town treasury. Increased salaries were given as an offset with the exception of Mr Bell. He will now ask the meeting to reimburse him to the extent of $400, which is the amount of fees he has thus far collected. The amount of work that he is now called upon to perform necessitates the employing of an assistant.

An article calls for the abolishment of the Sewer Board, and the assumption of its duties by the Water Board. The reason given for this is that the Sewer Board has but little to do. A member says that there is plenty of work if the Board will only attend to their duties.

The meeting will be in the Town Hall, Monday evening, and the opening hour will be 7 45.

TO FORM ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the Business Men's, or Village Improvement Association, was held in Waterfield Hall last week. About 40 citizens and business men were present. Mr. Chas. A. Symmes was elected chairman and Mr. Charles A. Lane secretary of the meeting. Remarks were made by Samuel J. Elder, Esq., and others upon the advantages of such an organization for the beautifying and advancement of the town which will be its aim, together with the discussion of important questions coming before the citizens from time to time.

The following committee on by-laws was appointed, Dr. C. J. Allen, chairman, R. E. Joslyn, C. A. Lane, S. W. Twombly, G. A. Woods and S. D. Leland. A committee on membership was appointed as follows: J. L. Ayer, chairman, C. E. Barrett, E. H. Stone, George E. Morrill, H. D. Nash, A. W. Rooney.

These committees are to report together at a future meeting to be called by them.

OPENING AUTUMNAL SOCIAL.

The opening social gathering of the Baptist Church for the autumn season was held last evening in the vestry and parlor of the meeting house. Decorations of autumn leaves were very tastefully arranged by the committee in charge. A choice program was rendered. Vocal solos were given by Mr. Ernst Makechnie and Miss Grace Hill, and readings were contributed by Miss Florence Estes and Miss Gertrude Poirier. Mr. Makechnie also rendered a violin solo. The entire program was most pleasing and thoroughly enjoyed.

Refreshments were served after the program. The committee in charge were Mrs. S. W. Smith, Mrs. A. P. Briggs, Mrs. H. E. Richardson, Mrs. J. A. Hersey and Miss Ackerman.

RECEPTION TO PASTOR.

The annual reunion and reception to the pastor and his wife was held at the Congregational Church last evening. The large committee in charge, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Joshua Phippen, made provision for an attendance of about three hundred, and their plans were well fulfilled, for during the evening fully that number of church people were present to welcome Rev. and Mrs. D. Augustine Newton.

The reception opened at 7 30, and during the evening refreshments were served and an orchestra was in attendance.

A BIG DIAMOND.

Jeweller Fred S. Scales returned this week from New York, where he has been purchasing his Christmas stock of china, jewelry and silver. He brought home with him an uncut diamond weighing 6 5-8 carats, and worth $428. The stone is just as it was found in the South African mines, and if seen by the average person lying on the sidewalk would probably be passed by as a piece of not very clear glass. Mr. Scales has the stone in his window on Common street, where all may see it.

WINCHESTER COUPLE MARRIED.

The wedding ceremony of two well known young couple of this town, both prominent in the Baptist Church, took place in that edifice on Monday evening. The groom was Mr. Alfred Ollis Weld, son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Weld of Sanborn street, and he took for his bride Miss Elizabeth Macdonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Macdonald of Washington street. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of friends of the couple, being performed by Rev. Henry E. Hodge, pastor of the church. The edifice was prettily decorated with palms, laurel streamers and autumn leaves, the ceremony being performed beneath an arch of oak leaves, which covered the altar. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Mr. William T. Rutherford, jr., organist of the church.

The bride was dressed in cream satin and carried a bouquet of bride's roses. Miss Clara E. Macdonald, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a dress of white net and carried pink chrysanthemums. Mr. Clarence Merritt of New York, W. P. I., '04, was the best man.

The ushers were H. Earl Richardson and Stanley B. Weld, brother of the groom, of this town. Albert A. W. Ghoreyeb of Boston (Harvard medical '09) Arthur L. Patch of Stoneham (Harvard medical '09) Ralph R. Patch of Stoneham, M. I. T. '06, and George A. Robinson of Providence, W. P. I. '04.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, attended only by members of the two families and a few intimate friends. The house was decorated with autumn leaves and green.

After a short wedding tour the couple will reside at 81 Clarence street, Auburn, R. I., where the groom holds a responsible position with the General Fire Extinguisher Company of Providence.

The presents received were very handsome, including cut glass, silver, china, pictures, linen and money in large quantities. The members of the Baptist Church presented the couple with a very handsome silver service, while the officers of the B. Y. P. U. of the church gave a china tea set.

For several years Mrs. Weld has been prominently connected with the church, both as member and soloist. The groom is a graduate of W. P. I., '04 the best man and ushers being his classmates.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

October 15th, 1906.

Board met at 7.45 p. m. All present.

Timothy Callahan appeared in regard to moving a building on Elm street; was told to get the contractor to apply for the usual permit.

Voted that the committee on Highways and Bridges be authorized to purchase a horse and team for Supt. of Streets.

Received communication from Mrs. J. H. Plummer asking to have the concrete sidewalk in front of her property on Ridgeway put in proper condition as the Sewer Department left it in poor shape; replied that the Selectmen had no jurisdition in that matter as the street named was a private way, and the subject matter was referred to the Sewer Board.

Received check from John B. Rhodes for one half the expense of laying a curbstone at his corner of Wildwood and Church streets.

Received and placed on file communication from Henry C. Robinson, Supt. of Boston & Maine railroad, in regard to matters at the Highland station.

Received petition signed by Patrick Nelson and others asking to have White street accepted as a town way; referred to the Town Engineer.

Arlington Gas Light Company asked permission to lay a gas main from its terminus on Myrtle street to the Boulevard, a distance of about 26 feet; granted, subject to the approval of the Town Engineer.

Received communication from A. E. Whitney in regard to grade of Mystic avenue; replied that the Town Engineer had already been instructed to prepare a grade plan of said street.

Made up and completed warrant for the town meeting October 22nd, next.

Warrants drawn for $1215.77 and $1088.25.

Mr. Geo. S. Driver has rented his apartment on Park road to Arthur Briggs.

NO SCHOOLS OCTOBER 26TH.

The sessions of the public schools will be omitted Friday, October 26th, the date of the meeting of the Middlesex County Teachers' Convention. The teachers will have their choice of attending the meetings of this convention or of visiting schools of other towns and cities.

CHESTER W. KNOX.

Death of a Successful Young Business Man.

Chester W. Knox died at his home in Boulder Colorado, last Saturday, Oct. 13, 1906, aged 24 years, 7 months and 4 days. He was born in this town in 1882. His parents were Warren L. and Louisa M. (Johnson) Knox. He was a product of our public schools, but was not graduated from the High school, but fitted for college in the Wesleyan Academy at Wilbraham, Mass. He entered Harvard University in 1900 but remained there only his first year. In 1901 he worked in the mining business in Butte, Montana, and attended the School of Mines there, and received a degree of E. M (engineer of mining). In 1902 and 1903 he worked as assistant engineer and part of the time as assistant superintendent of mines at Cripple Creek, Colorado. This was a very strenuous period of his life. It was during the time of the great miners' strike, much of the time the city was under martial law. His life was in danger several times.

In 1903 he sold a mine for some people in Boulder, Colorado, to some very rich Jews in New York who agreed to pay him $15,000 commission and he engaged to work for them in this mine in Boulder. In 1904 he personally bought a small mine adjoining the mine where he was working, but he first took copies of all the charts of the mine where he was at work. His purchase of this mine greatly incensed the New York Jews, and they tried to beat him out of part of his commission and salary, but he came out best and they had to pay him in full. Finally they offered him three and one half times what he had paid for his mine. He showed the written offer to a relative in New York who said "if that Jew crowd offered you the sum stated, your property is worth at least four times what was offered, and I will provide some capital." The mine is now in successful operation. In 1905 he started in the mining machinery business, which increased beyond his expectations, and he opened another mining machinery house in Denver on July first last. He wrote his relatives in this town that at the close of his business year on Sept. 1st, last he had $72,000 of unfilled orders. When cautioned by his relatives here not to go too fast he replied, I am doing battle with the big fellows now, but I keep my head level. When in Winchester five weeks ago he told his family that this year, the second year of his mining machinery company, he would do half a million of business. But he didn't, he was too ambitious and worked too hard and when the germs of typhoid struck him he was not strong enough to throw them off and died in less than three weeks. "Death loves a shining mark."

In June, 1904, he married Miss Ruth N. Bradway of South Framingham, Mass., whom he first met at Wesleyan Academy. He had one child, but he died when five months old. He said he did not believe anybody enjoyed their family and business more than he did.

He was solicited to run for Mayor of Boulder, but he told the people he was in that country for business and not for politics. He served on important committees but would never stand for election for office. He conducted the church choir of the Episcopal Church while he lived in Cripple Creek and the Methodist Church while he was in Boulder. He was on intimates terms with the city and state officials and did business with large companies.

A brilliant life was closed before he was twenty-five years old.

I should like to tell of some of the traits of his character, but that is so often overdone by others, that I only say that he was clean in body and mind, paid his bills promptly and was energetic and capable.

H. F. J.

MRS. MARTHA BAKER SHEPHERD.

Mrs. Martha B. (Dodge) Shepherd, mother of Dr. Hovey L. Shepherd and wife of Mr. Freeman W. Shepherd, died at her home on Church street, Wednesday, of infirmities due to her age, augmented by heart trouble. She was 70 years 7 months of age, and was born in Edgecomb, Me., being the daughter of John W. Dodge, 4th, and Abigail (Brown) Dodge. She was married in 1866 to her husband, who is now 80 years of age. Besides Dr. Shepherd and her husband, she leaves one daughter, Miss Freemetta Shepherd, and a brother, Mr. John M. Dodge of Dorchester. She had made her home in this town for about three years.

Services were held at her late home yesterday afternoon at three o'clock, conducted by Rev. D. A. Newton. The remains were taken to Morrill, Me., for burial.

A LIVE ALLIGATOR.

Mr. Charles A. Lane received by express this week a fine alligator about 18 inches long. The donor of the animal is unknown, but as the "gator" lives on flies, and Mr. Lane's fame as a fisherman is well known, doubtless it will be well fed with choice specimens—and then stuffed. For the present it is on exhibition at Parker & Lane's office on Main street.

SPECIAL SERVICE FOR ELDERLY PEOPLE.

It is fifteen years since the First Congregational Church first held a special service for the aged people of the town. During that time many grateful expressions have been given that the elderly people were thus remembered. Next Sunday morning this annual observance will have especial interest to all as the Rev. Daniel March, D.D., of Woburn will preach the sermon. Dr. March at the age of ninty years is a marvel of strength and vitality. An original hymn has been written for this occasion by Mrs. Caro H. Bowers. A collection will be received for our "Home for Aged People." All will be welcome.

W. H. S. NOTES.

Mr. H. M. Hoisington-Kulasinghe of Ceylon, India, a graduate of Cambridge was an interested visitor at Wednesday morning's music lesson.

It has been decided to give plays this year instead of a minstrel show. The play committee consists of Harold Webber '07, chairman, Dorothy Power '07, Harold Robinson '07, Ruth Smart '08, Margaret Homer '08, and Gordon Parker '08. The services of "Charlie" Harrold, who so successfully coached the minstrel show, have again been procured to help with the plays. "The Revenge of Shri-Hot-Su," "The Cool Collegians," "All Tangled Up," and "A Russian Honeymoon" are the plays at present under the consideration of the committee.

The senior class has elected its executive committee as follows: Harold Webber chairman, Dorothy Coit, Ruth Kneeland, Francis Spaulding and F. Lambert Hunt; and the photo committee: Josephine Wingate, Marion Cole, Edward Mason and Alfred Little.

The freshman class, following the example of the two previous classes, 1908 and 1909, in organizing in their freshman year, is now the class of 1910. Isabel Hunt has been elected president and Theodore Main, vice-president. In the vote for secretary, Eliot Barta and Harold Johnson were tied.

POSTPONED RACE HELD SUNDAY.

The sailing canoe championship of New England was won Sunday on Mystic Lake by W. Starling Burgess of Marblehead in the canoe Twilight. The race was for the trophy offered by the Eastern Division of the American Canoe Association, and was scheduled for Saturday, but had been postponed. Entries were: W. Starling Burgess, H. D. Murphy, W. J. Ladd, J. A. Newman of Winchester, and Herbert Moot of New York. At the end of the first round Murphy led, with Ladd, Newman, Burgess and Moot in the order named. During the third round Murphy's feet slipped, and he fell overboard to windward, all the other boats passing him.

Ladd then secured a long lead, with Newman second, Burgess third, Murphy fourth and Moot fifth. In the next round to windward Burgess and Murphy caught up with the fleet. The buoy was rounded in the following order: Newman, Murphy, Burgess, Moot. A mix up and sudden puff carried away the forestay of Murphy's canoe, putting him back to last place. At the finish Burgess was 30 seconds ahead of Ladd. Newman was third, Murphy fourth and Moot fifth.

The same men will race at Marblehead tomorrow for the Winchester Boat Club trophy.

A GREAT SURPRISE.

A surprise party in every sense of the word was given last Saturday evening to Miss Claudia LaForte of Main street by a large number of her friends from Woburn, Reading, Medford and Winchester. A pleasing program of piano selections by Mabel Coty, Ella Horne, Willie Coty and Rena LaForte, and singing by Mabel, Irene and Willie Coty, Grace Jones of Woburn, Addover and Mabel LaForte was enjoyed. Games were played, dancing was enjoyed and ice cream and cake were served.

During the evening Miss Grace Jones presented Miss LaForte with a gold locket and chain. For the dancing, music was given by John Garvey, piano; I. Budroe, violin. Selections on the harmonica were given by Mr. Charlie Gallagher. The surprise was planned and carried out by Miss Mae Moffett.

BALL OF J. H. WINN & SON EMPLOYEES.

The annual ball of the employees of J. H. Winn & Son, watch hand factory, will take place in Lyceum Hall this evening and promises to be a very pleasant social event. The floor directress will be Esther T. Louder; Assistant floor directress, Margaret A. Kelley; Aids, Annie M. Nowell, Rosella Haney, Mary A. Kelley, Henrietta V. Kelley, May F. Kirwin, Helen C. Craven, Mary V. Donovan, Elizabeth C. Shea, Alma L. Harrington, Celia L. Haggerty, Katherine E. Kenney, Annie E. Haggerty, Belle A. Walsh, Margaret Curry, Margaret T. Weafer, Margaret E. Haggerty, Mary G. Haggerty, Margaret Kerrigan, Annie T. Connors, Mary Fallon.

DR. DENNETT BETTER.

Word from Dr. D. C. Dennett this morning was to the effect that he was better, being in the best condition yet since the second operation, which was performed last Friday. The doctor is still a very sick man, but indications are that he will recover.

WEIGHT OF CLOCK BROKE.

One of the heavy weights of the Congregational Church clock fell last week seriously damaging the clock and splitting some of the heavy timbers in the belfry of the church. The chain which held the weight broke. The Selectmen have made arrangements to have it repaired.

ELIZABETH DESHON STEVENS.

The following tribute to the late Mrs. George D. Stevens was taken from the Malden Mirror:

"That our community has been shocked and saddened by the sudden and tragic death of one so well known, has been made evident by the kind expressions of feeling and sympathy extended by so many of our residents.

Beautiful in every way; talented, with her magnificent voice, silenced in the past few years by her great sorrows. So strong in character, rising up above all the afflictions sent upon her one after another in such a noble way that was a wonder to those who knew her best. The breaking up of a beautiful family in so short a time would soften and sadden the hardest of human hearts.

The widowed mother just passing away so suddenly, followed in a short time by the death of the youngest sister. The dear little babe, apparently so well, dying instantly in its mother's arms, in less than two years in her married life. This followed in the next year by the unexpected taking away of the youngest brother, "Budd," well known to all here. The taking away of five of the dear ones in less than six years seeming as if the Angel of Death was ever hovering over this afflicted family, eager to unite them in "The Great Beyond."

And now this young and beautiful woman who has passed through all these sorrows, and passing through them with a faith and resignation that has been wonderful to behold are strong lessons to those left of her friends, who knew and loved her.

The heart broken husband, lying so ill from his injuries and far from home and loved ones, grieving for that dear wife, of only a few short wedded years. The two grief-stricken brothers, left so entirely alone, the one happy home and loved ones all taken away, leaving them to bear this terrible affliction with crushed and aching hearts.

The deepest feelings of sympathy go out from the hearts of all to these three suddenly and sadly bereft of so beautiful and loving a wife and sister."

The condition of Mr. Stevens is much improved, and he is expected to recover. His injuries have been found to be compound fractures of the right arm and leg and both ankles are badly injured. No internal injuries have yet developed. He was told of his wife's death by the hospital chaplain and was very much affected. It is expected that he will be confined to the hospital at least a month.

A SOLITARY PASSENGER.

The B. & N. advertised an excursion from Haverhill to the Brockton fair, for a day last week, but only one passenger appeared, a lady who resisted all overtures to go by steam cars instead. She insisted on the company carrying out its contract. Accordingly a big open electric carried its single passenger all the way to the shoe city. The car had to have a pilot in addition to conductor and motorman after reaching Boston. They waited the pleasure of their patron, who took in all the sights of the fair and came home in solitary grandeur. It was an open car and she almost froze but she made the company "do as they promised" and she was satisfied. When the company figured up the balance they discovered that they were out $12.85 on the wrong side of the ledger.

POLITICAL NOTES.

In the speech accepting the senatorial nomination, Mr. Riley said he was glad the nomination came to him without any trades or dickers or without alienating anybody. It was a great honor to be the Republican nominee from the new senatorial district, and he felt particular satisfaction because as a member of the subcommittee on redistricting he had helped to plan the district. He promised to work not merely for Woburn but for the whole district and the commonwealth. No other pledges would have to be carried out; he would simply do his duty. The legislature, he believed, should go slow. Of course, there was a chance for improvement, but he did not believe in upsetting the state of Massachusetts which is one of the best governed states in the union. He believed state affairs had been properly and economically managed, and he would try to do his share to keep them so, progressing as far as possible, but still keeping things in the good old Massachusetts way.

The Eighth congressional district Republican committee gave a dinner complimentary to Congressman Samuel W. McCall Tuesday at 6.30 p. m. at Young's hotel, Boston.

At the Representative convention for this district, which renominated Mr. Barker B. Howard, a motion was made and carried that it was the sense of the convention that Winchester and Medford should alternate in having the representative for two year terms, and that the next time the office came to Medford the ward not having it now should be entitled to the representative. It was voted, on motion of Mr. Lowell, that the chairmen of the Winchester town committee and of the committees of wards 3 and 6 of Medford constitute the district committee.

Mr. James A. Marden of Medford is the Democratic Senatorial candidate for this district. Dr. Charles F. McCarthy was a candidate for member of the State Committee at the convention.

MCCALL AGAIN.

It is with extreme pleasure that we are enabled to announce in these columns the renomination of Hon. Samuel W. McCall to represent the 8th Congressional District of this State in the National House, where he has been a shining light for lo' these many years. It was with still greater pleasure that we discovered in his speech of acceptance of the honor indications of a mellowing and reform in his political opinions and attitude towards the Republican organization and its principles. Signs were not absent in that speech of an early switching around by our able and esteemed Congressman into the ranks of the old party, of which he used to be the central and most brilliant figure. Representative McCall is one of the strongest men intellectually in Congress; he is honest, and true to his convictions; he possesses all of the elements of a great political leader; and if he would only work himself back into the Republican household, as he seems now to be trying to do, it would not be long before he would take a seat, by grace of the Massachusetts Legislature, in the upper branch of the Nation's Legislature. In addition to which, Congressman McCall "is a mighty good fellow."—[Woburn Journal.

PACIFIC COAST RATES.

Until the end of October only, the Canadian Pacific Railway will sell Colonist tickets to Pacific coast points at low rates, for example, $49 90 from Boston, with correspondingly low rates from other stations in New England.

Tourist cars run weekly to the North Pacific Coast, accommodating passengers for the Northwest, British Columbia, Washington and Oregon. Also to Chicago, where direct connections are made for California points.

An exceptional opportunity is thus offered anyone contemplating a transcontinental trip in the near future, and they will make no mistake in using the improved tourist car service of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Full details regarding tourist car accommodations, rates and train service, can be obtained upon application to F. R. PERRY, Dist. Pass. Agt., 362 Washington street, Boston.

ELECTRIC LIGHT NOTES.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and a cure is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling badly you can make no mistake by taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

"FORT HILL, PLEASE!"

Boston, which is said on account of its topographical peculiarities to have the most complicated system of telephone plants in the world, has just added another exchange to the six "Metropolitan" offices in the business districts of the city. Although this might seem to add to the complexity of the existing situation, it will in reality enable the telephone engineers to obviate some difficulties that have already begun to make their appearance.

The new office is known as "Fort Hill." It is designed to take some of the burden off the "Main" exchange which, on account of the rapid growth of telephone traffic in the business district, was in danger of becoming overcrowded. Although "Fort Hill" is a central office complete in itself, its switchboard, curiously enough, will be practically in the same vast room with the "Main" switchboard in the telephone building in Milk street. Ultimately, when the building which the New England company is about to erect in Fort Hill Square is completed, the new exchange will be transferred there, but meantime its tempoary plant if its perfect equipment which is of the most modern type in every respect may so be described, will be operated as if it were in service for all time.

When the exchange known as "Main" was opened, something more than four years ago, it was supposed to be ample to serve the needs of its section of the city for at least ten years. Yet so rapid has been the expansion of the telephone traffic in the congested centre of the wholesale and banking district of Boston that the New England company some time ago foresaw that further facilities would be required at once to prevent the big down town central from becoming overcrowded. To relieve the pressure of the "Main" switchboard and give subscribers additional facilities they could not be afforded there, at the same time making it possible to maintain the high standards of operation the company aims at, a considerable number of subscribers have been transferred to the "Fort Hill" office. All the pay station lines in "Main" have been moved from there to "Fort Hill," also; and new subscribers will be added to the new office instead of the old. At the same time, an opportunity is given for concerns that had outgrown their "reservations" in the "Main" switchboard to get all the space they may now want or are likely to want in the future in the "Fort Hill" board.

One curious circumstance is that although the "Main" and "Fort Hill" switchboards are located under the same roof, the trunking arrangements by which traffic is passed from one to the other are exactly similar to those between "Main" and "Oxford," or "Main" and "Back Bay," or indeed between any exchanges in the metropolitan district, though they may be ten miles apart.

We Trust Doctors

If you are suffering from impure blood, thin blood, debility, nervousness, exhaustion, you should begin at once with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the Sarsaparilla you have known all your life. Your doctor knows it, too. Ask him about it.

WHITFIELD TUCK NAMED.

Whitfield Tuck was nominated by the Democrats in the 27th Middlesex representative convention last Saturday night in Medford.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer, One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by all Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Assessors' Notice!

The Assessors will be in session at their room, in the Town Hall Building, Thursday Afternoon and Evening, Oct. 18, and Thursday Afternoon and Evening, Oct. 25, 1906, from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 o'clock, to hear parties aggrieved who claim abatements.

All claims for abatement will be adjusted according to the law regulating taxation.

VENEERED WOOD.

Its Advantages Over Solid Lumber For Furniture.

If the art of veneering were not the extensive art it is today, it would be impossible for any but the comparatively few who have a good supply of the almighty dollar to possess any fine articles of furniture at all. Veneering is not a new art, but the earliest American cabinetmakers, although using it to some extent, preferred as a rule the solid wood furniture.

Today hardwood trees, such as the oak, walnut and ash, have been made more valuable by the invention of veneering machinery which will enable the logs to be sliced up into layers of uniform thickness of less than one-twentieth of an inch. In the old days this process was all by hand and was a slow and arduous undertaking.

The advantages of veneered wood are that it will not crack, swell nor warp in the changes from hot to cold weather, and in the case of doors, for instance, it makes them lighter and more easily handled.

For our finest pieces of furniture the best of oak, walnut or ash is used, and it may be seen how much one of these trees is worth. Cut into thin slices, it will give hundreds of feet of veneer. A large walnut tree, for instance, will be made into a large amount of veneer and is sought by expert woodsmen. Found in the heart of the woods or on some lonely farm, it is bought by the agent working for the interests of a veneering company, and ten times as much is paid for it to its owner as would be for ordinary lumber.

The process includes the cutting and trimming of the tree, sawing into logs of convenient lengths and then the cooking of these logs. They are boiled until soft and pliable in a vat of hot water or steam. They are then sent to the veneering machines, where they are sliced or sawed into pieces from one-tenth to one-thirtieth of an inch in thickness, of absolutely the same thickness all over. Their soft, pliable condition prevents them from cracking or breaking.

The cabinet workers then apply these slices to the articles of furniture, gluing them on with the grain running in opposite directions and with no joinings visible. Instead of making a weaker article the surface is really toughened and hardened by this crossgrain work, and it may also be polished to a richer luster than the solid wood.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Consols by the Pennyworth.

It may not be generally known that a pennyworth of British consols can be purchased. Consols are not like shares, which are invariably of a certain denomination—£1, £5, £10, and so on—but can be divided up to any extent. It consequently happens that very small amounts of this lordly stock are bought to make up round sums, but no one can be registered at the Bank of England as a holder unless he has acquired enough to bring him in fourpence a year in dividends, and less than £1 will purchase a sufficient amount for that purpose.—London Saturday Review.

BOSTON LETTER.

How the Federation of Labor Was Dragged Into Politics.

GERRY BROWN'S SELFISH AIMS.

Why Did Moran Go to New York to See Hearst?

The Massachusetts branch of the American Federation of Labor has, during the past week, been holding a convention in the city of Lawrence. Some things done at that convention are extremely significant.

It has not been in past years the policy of labor bodies, as such, to take an active interest in politics. Members of labor bodies have exercised their rights as citizens to take such individual action as they saw fit on political matters.

The state branch of the American Federation of Labor, however, has for the first time in its history taken a deliberate plunge into politics, and from evidence at hand it seems apparent that Democratic leaders have tried to force it into the Democratic party.

One of the most striking things about this convention was the fact that one of the delegates was E. Gerry Brown of Brockton, the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor in this commonwealth, and that Mr. Brown used his utmost efforts to embroil the federation in the contest between the two great parties for the lieutenant governorship. It was particularly notorious that Mr. Brown, as the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, should enter a labor convention and endeavor to put that convention on record as conspiring for the defeat of the Republican candidate for the same office. There was an extremely sharp fight over this issue, and Mr. Brown led in the fighting for the passage of a resolution calling on the Federation of Labor to undertake the defeat of his Republican competitor for the office of lieutenant governor.

Selfishness Splits the Federation

Such an exhibition has seldom been witnessed in this commonwealth. The evident anxiety of Mr. Brown to make a personal use of the labor movement to defeat his rival for the lieutenant governorship shows a selfishness which has split wide open the ranks of labor in this commonwealth.

From all parts of the state labor men have raised their voices in protest against such rank selfishness and such willingness to embroil the Federation of Labor in a political contest. It will probably not benefit Mr. Brown as much as he thought it would. The delegates of the American Federation of Labor in this state can vote to take the Federation into politics, but it is another thing to drag the individual members at the chariot wheels of the Democratic party. A great many members of the American Federation of Labor in various parts of the commonwealth have signified their intention to vote as they see fit, regardless of the attempt made at Lawrence to tie them up to the Democratic party.

What made it extremely evident that unscrupulous men there had planned to capture the American Federation of Labor for the benefit of the Democratic party was the action of the convention in considering the cases of congressmen in this commonwealth. The cases of 11 congressmen were acted upon and two of them were indorsed, both Democrats, while nine were censured, all of them being Republicans. It is extremely significant that some of these Republican congressmen had been hearty workers in the interests of measures demanded by labor organizations, and had always been considered friends of labor. Some of these congressmen had voted on labor measures almost identically as had one of the Democratic congressmen who was indorsed.

It is true that a number of the delegates to the Lawrence convention deprecated any such action as was taken, feeling certain that it would be followed by injury to the labor cause, but those who were insistent upon dragging the labor cause, as represented by the Federation, into politics, could not be deterred from their purpose. It was quite evident that the whole thing had been prearranged and that it was a deliberate effort to align the Federation of Labor on the side of the Democratic party in the contest.

Concealing Their Partisanship

It was called to the attention of some of those engaged in this transaction that it would be very apparent that the move was wholly political as the matter then stood; therefore, for the purpose of concealing the partisanship of the whole transaction, it was decided to censure a Democratic state senator for his action on one of the measures defeated in the legislature at the last session, so that the utter partisanship of the convention might be slightly relieved.

The questions, however, will still be asked: "Why did the convention of the American Federation of Labor at Lawrence indorse none but Democratic candidates and, with one exception, censure none but Republicans?"

"Why did E. Gerry Brown of Brockton, the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, seek to enlist the American Federation of Labor in his fight against Lieutenant Governor Draper of Hopedale?"

"Was it the best interests of the American Federation of Labor in Massachusetts which was sought by Brown and his allies, or was it a purely selfish interest which had no regard for the welfare of the Federation or its members?"

Nemesis on Moran's Trail

When John B. Moran started out to secure an election as district attorney of Suffolk county and succeeded, he declared to his friends, it is said, that he would do something to get his name in the newspaper headlines every day of the year. He succeeded extremely well, but the time has come when he is not so desirous of publicity as he was then. For the last several months he has been pursuing publicity with a determined step. At the present moment publicity of an undesirable sort is pursuing him as relentlessly and as determinedly as the bloodhound on the trail of his victim. Retribution is on his trail. It is evident that a man may have too much even of a good thing, and certainly Mr. Moran feels that he has too much unpleasant publicity at the present time.

It is quite a different matter when your own ox is gored from what it is when it is merely your neighbor's ox. Mr. Moran has summoned a great many men before the grand jury, but although such publicity has been unpleasant, that has usually been the end of the matter. His habit of bringing people before the grand jury was well hit up the other day when one of the Boston newspapers said it was a matter of as little import to be called before the grand jury of Suffolk county as it was to be called to the telephone.

Chaos Is the Situation

At the present moment a state of anarchy seems to exist on the Democratic side. The only man Mr. Moran feels entirely safe in trusting is John B. Moran. All the others who surround him are believed by him to be either spies of the enemy or men who wish themselves to occupy the position of leadership now held by him if, indeed, a man can be called a leader whose following is wholly a matter of conjecture. Mr. Moran is supposed to have lost confidence in both the Coakleys, Timothy Wilfred and Daniel H., and also in their brother-in-law, Joseph A. Dennison. He is not quite sure of the sincerity of George Fred Williams since Mr. Williams stampeded the Democratic state convention with that resolution indorsing William Jennings Bryan for the presidential nomination in 1908, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Williams himself declares that he and Moran are on the most friendly terms. He is a little uncertain about the loyalty of Granville S. McFarland and in his sleep he has bad dreams in which he imagines that John B. Feeney carries a stiletto in his inside pocket.

As a matter of fact he has had occasional moments in which he is doubtful whether to trust himself to run for governor. Taken all in all, it is a situation which has never been paralleled in the political history of the state of Massachusetts. When prominent Democrats wake up in the morning they are accustomed to ask themselves whether Mr. Moran is still a candidate, or if he has declined to run on the Democratic ticket and given way to Whitney or Douglas.

Moran and Hearst

"Why did John B. Moran go to New York and see William R. Hearst?"

That is a question which the politicians are busy asking today. Is he a personal representative of Mr. Hearst in the fight of the latter for the Democratic nomination to the presidency? Does he represent the same type of politics as is represented by Mr. Hearst? Is he a Democrat or a Hearstite?"

The most absorbing question, however, is the first, which is: "Why did Mr. Moran go to New York to see William R. Hearst?"

Democrats throughout the state would like to have this question honestly answered.

St. Valentine.

St. Valentine, presbyter and martyr, unlike many saints who are specially remembered, did nothing which could have suggested the manner in which his day is celebrated. It was his fortune to suffer martyrdom (he was beaten with a club and then beheaded) at a time when the heathens of southern Europe were accustomed to observe the return of spring. The quick eyes of those dependent upon sunlight for warmth learned to note and welcome every indication of the approaching season. They watched the birds, and when they saw them mating and making love they were minded to do the same, and so strong was the habit that, as with Christmas day, the good fathers did not attempt to root out the custom, but to connect it with some holy name, and St. Valentine's day of martyrdom fitted very nearly to that time.

HIGHLAND CROFTERS.

How They Lived In the Middle of the Last Century.

In the middle of the last century the crofters in the west highlands seldom saw money and never needed it. They erected for themselves huts mostly built of turf, floored with clay and roofed with heather. They kept a few cattle, goats and sheep, which grazed at will on the open hillside and provided them with milk and wool. They lived a truly simple life, and their needs were few. They grew oats for their own food and potatoes, which formed their other chief article of diet. Tea was an unknown luxury. It was by no means uncommon to find persons who had never tasted it. Wheaten bread had never been seen in those parts. Their clothes were made from the fleeces of their own sheep, spun and woven by the good wives during the long winter nights and dyed from the simple dyes made from the lichens which grew on the stems of trees or on the bowlders of rock in the neighborhood. The whisky they drank came from secret stills on the hillside and had never paid excise. The nearest parish church was often many miles away. No school was there for the children. Very few of them, indeed, could read or write. Still fewer had ever heard a word of English spoken. Their spiritual needs, however, were not neglected, for they received constant visits from the "men," as they were called, who had constituted themselves the spiritual guides of their neighborhood. —Blackwood's Magazine.

Grumbling.

Grumbling is a potent cause of ill health. It keeps the sensitive nerves constantly vibrating with discordant emotions and not only hurts the grumbler, but every one who hears it. It really prepares the system of the grumbler for an attack of any malady that happens to be prevalent.

THE BOOMERANG.

One of the Most Peculiar Weapons of War Ever Invented.

The boomerang is an instrument used both in war and in the chase by the aborigines of Australia. It is usually about two feet in length, made of hard wood bent into a curve resembling an obtuse angle, flat on one side and rounded on the other. The method of using this curious weapon is very peculiar. The thrower takes it in one hand, holding the bent side downward, and hurls it forward as if to hit some object twenty or twenty-five yards in advance. Instead of continuing to go directly forward in accordance with the Newtonian law it slowly ascends in the air, whirling round and round, describing a beautiful and geometrical curved line till it reaches a considerable height, when it begins to retrograde, finally sweeping over the head of the projector, striking the object for which it was intended, which is always in the rear.

An English officer has this to say of the singular weapon: "The boomerang is one of the most curious weapons of war ever invented, at least by a barbarous people, nor is it easy to comprehend by what law of projectiles it is made to take the singular directions that it frequently does. I have seen a native throw one so as to make it go forty or fifty yards horizontally and not more than four feet from the ground. It would then suddenly dart into the air to the height of fifty or sixty yards, describe a very considerable curve and finally fall at his feet. In all cases, no matter how thrown, the boomerang keeps turning with great rapidity, like as if on a pivot, making a loud, whizzing noise all the while."

A man should never be ashamed to own he has been in the wrong. It is but saying in other words that he is wiser today than yesterday.

The Mind's Eye.

It will probably be news to most people to hear that rudimentary traces of a third eye exist among all vertebrates, including man. In the human race the third eye forms part of the pineal gland, a small mass about the size of a pea in almost the very center of the brain. Possibly, therefore, there was more actual truth in the well known expression "the mind's eye" than its originator dreamed of.

A Disperser.

A street preacher in a west of Scotland town complained to a passing policeman about being annoyed by a part of the audience and asked him to remove the obnoxious ones. "Weel, ye see," replied the cautious officer, "it would be a hard job for me tae spot them, but I'll tell ye what I'd dae if I were you." "What would you do?" eagerly inquired the preacher. "Just ga round wi' the hat!"

Finance.

Many words of most august sound prove to be of quite commonplace ancestry when traced to their origins. "Finance" is really only "settling up." Literally, it is just "ending" and was formerly used in that very simple sense in the English language. Then it came to signify settling up with a creditor and acquired the special sense of ransom.

Keep the Streets Clean.

The question of throwing rubbish into the streets in the centre will bear looking into by the police. Because a man is employed by the town to keep the streets clean is no good reason for thoughtlessly throwing refuse into them when barrels provided for the purpose are placed about the centre.

Go For the Moths Now.

Even if the gypsy moth nests do not hatch out until next spring, the present will be found a most opportune time to destroy them when the ground is free from snow and the stone fences, walls or buildings can be critically examined. Take time and do the work thoroughly, painting each nest over liberally with creosote. Remember that the work must be done carefully or else next summer the pest will be just as bad as ever. Any half-way measures will be money wasted.

SARDOU'S POPULARITY.

The popularity of Sardou seems undiminished. Last season the Boston Stage Society produced at the Castle Square Theatre no less than four of his plays, and a few weeks ago, a fifth, "Gismonda" was presented. Now comes the announcement of his famous "Theodora" which is to be given next week with all the splendid scenic equipment of the original production, and a special cast including all the members of the Castle Square Stock Company.

"Theodora" was the first drama that Sardou wrote for Sarah Bernhadt, and it helped the reputation of both the dramatist and the actress. As played by her and as it will be played at the Castle Square, it tells a strongly romantic tale of life in ancient Byzantium, and all playgoers who remember the fine production of "Celeopatra" and "Gismonda" will certainly not miss this opportunity to see it.

The cast will include Mr. Hansel, Miss Lawton, Mr. Waldron and the entire stock company.

WINCHESTER COUNTRY CLUB.

The golf event at the Country Club last Saturday afternoon was a bogey handicap, three-quarter regular handicap play which resulted as follows: Hal McCall 9 even, W. Henry Mason 17 even, W. M. Foster 14 4 down, R. H. Whitten 15 1 down, H. T. Bond 5 4 down, S. M. Holbrook 16 4 down, Dana Wingate 8 5 down. No cards: C. L. Kinsley, R. S. Hilton, E. O Russell, B. M. Brooks, C. F. Newell.

Mr. I. W. Small came in eleventh out of a field of fifty-two at the Lexington Golf Club last Saturday, with 87, 6, 81. Mr. H. T. Bond with a gross score of 89 and Mr. Small with his gross score of 87 were two of the eight, who had the best gross scores, qualifying for the match play during this week. On Tuesday, in the first round of the medal play, Mr. Bond beat E. C. Booth of Lexington by default, and Mr. Small beat A. C. Whitney of Lexington 3 and 2 to go.

H. W. Whitten tied with P. O'Donnell, W. G. Hell and J. E. Oldham, all of the Woodland Golf Club, in an invitation medal handicap tournament at the Woodland Golf Club, last Saturday, for the best net score. His score was 90, 14, 76.

SOME FATAL ACCIDENTS.

Most everybody admits that accident insurance is legitimate and supplies a public need. That it enables one to make provision against the unexpected. They feel that no one who has loved ones dependent upon his labors can afford to be without it, but rarely do I find a man who appreciates how much the accident companies are paying out each year in claims and what those payments cover.

Here is the fatality experience of one company, The Travelers of Hartford, who paid in death losses, (death by accident,) from simply SEVEN causes, during the first eight months of the present year, over TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

While the interest of White Ribboners this week is centered in the World's W. C. T. U. convention being held in Tremont Temple we do not forget the gathering in Brussels, Belgium, the official representatives of seventeen nations, it being the third international gathering for the purpose of restricting the sale of liquor to natives of Africa. The Lodge resolution (so called) adopted by the United States Senate Jan. 1, 1901, is said to be the strong backbone of this movement.

"Resolved, That in the opinion of this body the time has come when the principle twice affirmed in international treaties for Central Africa, that native races should be protected against the destructive traffic in intoxicants should be extended to all uncivilized people by the enactment of such laws and the making of such treaties as will effectually prohibit the sale by the signatory powers to aboriginal tribes and uncivilized races of opium and intoxicating beverages."

We have to remember that the "destructive traffic in intoxicants" was first forced upon these helpless people by their white brothers.

The Polyglot petition shown in Tremont Temple is some evidence of what the W. C. T. U. is trying to do for the betterment of conditions "All round the world."

On Sunday, Oct. 21, at 3 p. m., in the Temple, the Convention sermon will be preached by Miss Elizabeth W Greenwood, World's Superintendent of Evangelistic department. At 8 p. m. in the same place a grand mass meeting of young people will be held under the auspices of the World's Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union Branch, Miss Amy Swankie Cameron of Eng. presiding.

At each of these services seats fee.

The Welcome Banquet given to delegates to the World's W. C. T. U. convention Wednesday evening in Tremont Temple was a great success. It was presided over by Miss. President Mrs. K. L. Stevenson with Ex Gov. John D. Long as toastmaster. For the United States Mrs. Stevens, National President, greeted the delegates; Mrs. Emily McLaughlin for the Missionary Societies. Dr. Henson spoke most eloquently for the clergy. Alice Stone Blackwell for the Equal Suffrage League and the Press by Mr. Bridgman. Responses by Miss Agnes Slack of England and Lord Carlyle whose wife is president of the British W. C. T. U. but not able to be present. Mrs. Wright responded for Canada. A delegate from Athens, Greece, was warmly greeted as she spoke in her native tongue then translated it in good English. A lady's orchestra furnished music and a trio of ladies sang.

Beggs & Cobb began this week on a nine and a half hour a day schedule. the men stopping work at 4 50, a half hour earlier than formerly.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

We are now in the 8th Congressional, 6th Councillor, 6th Middlesex Senatorial and 27th Middlesex Representative districts. How many know it?

Town meeting Monday night. I wonder if the committee on municipal lighting plant will report progress? If it does, will it be as hot for it as certain citizens were last spring.

'Tis said the Prohibitionists, Independence Leaguers and Democrats will conduct their campaigns separately and according to their own ideas, although all three will support Mr. Moran. This would appear to be proper, for it is difficult to see what they have in common as parties and it is not at all likely that any one of them will swallow up either of the others.

To make much impression, reformers must be specific in their charges and remedies and if they are not, things cannot be as bad as they claim. Of course things are not, never have been, and never will be all right, from the individual up, but they are not usually as bad as painted, particularly at election time.

Don't forget that this is the 1906 campaign and not that of 1908.

How would this do for a show? let all who favor Bryan vote for Moran under the Democratic column and all who favor Hearst vote for Moran under the Independence League column.

Regardless of the grade crossing abolition Thompson street should be widened anyway. It is the route from the centre to Manchester Field and is altogether too narrow to safely accommodate the travel over it at times.

When are the changes in the office rooms in the Town Hall building to be made? Last Spring the Selectmen got the appropriation for this work and further had a vote passed instructing them to do it. Why this delay?

The north reservoir has not been full since June, 1904, although for the previous thirty years it had annually been so. The water now is over four feet below full and it would seem as if the Water Board should be giving the matter serious consideration.

The Boston & Northern has petitioned anew for a location through Middlesex Fells and it is expected the Boston Elevated will soon, and that this line will be built by next summer to run from Sullivan Square to Stoneham.

Will not some of those who advocate municipal ownership tell us what advantage it would be in this State over the control which we now have? Why, even in our own municipal water plant we do not do things in a particularly good way; for instance, we allow citizens to use over a hundred dollars worth of water through hose and charge three dollars for it, even where we have to pump it. We furnish free hundreds of dollars worth and charge nothing for it, and even provide the hydrants and standpipes to give it away through. Is this business?

The act consolidating our Water and Sewer boards passed by this year's Legislature should certainly be accepted by the town meeting Monday night. It was petitioned for by the entire membership of the Appropriations Committee, the Selectmen and Sewer Board, and the Water Board does not oppose it. It is a step in the right direction.

The Transcript and Herald say "decency" is the issue, Lodge says it is Amercanism vs Cossacks. Perhaps this kind of talk makes votes for their ticket, but I doubt it.

Cutting entirely away from the crowd around him will help Moran to thousands of votes he otherwise would not have got, and he is right when he says there are plenty of State issues for this campaign. Some things that might be discussed with profit to the people are: The corrupt deals for the speakership of the House and Presidency of the Senate; bribery of members with money and other valuable things; conduct of hearings in the interest of big interests; suppression of news regarding votes and actions of Representatives and Senators; many State Boards neglecting their duties. Regardless of party, I believe Moran's election would be one of the best things that ever happened to Massachusetts. She needs a shake up.

While we have regulation of railroad, railway, gas, electric, telephone and telegraph companies, water furnishing companies are under no public regulation whatever, and as far as the statute laws go may charge and do what they please. This seems strange.

PROUD RECORD FOR THE BOSTON JOURNAL.

Last month the Boston Journal achieved a star breaking record. The reason being that merchants have sized up the Journal—have found that it is a good, big, strong proposition—a paper that has grown in circulation, grown in advertising and grown in reputation, until now it stands fully established as one of the leading papers of Boston. An increase of 68,203 in circulation in a single year: an increase of 11140.3 columns of display advertising over last year and of 2926 9 columns over two years ago tells the story.

The Journal is a paper that is welcome in the home for the reason that it is newsy, entertaining, bright and truthful.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

The next meeting of The Fortnightly will be held in the Calumet Hall, Monday, Oct. 22, at 3 o'clock. It will be a home afternoon, the program consisting of vacation papers by Mrs. Dorsey, Mrs. Wheeler, Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Woods. Some of the work of the vacation school will be exhibited. Tea will be served.

THE PAY OF TEACHERS.

It is commonly believed among the uneducated that school teachers are especially favored of humans, that their yoke is easy, and their burden light, and that they are really extravagantly paid for the work they do—usually computed in school hours. The fallacy of that view is readily understood by those who teach and all others who give the subject any sensible thought. Teachers' work is never done; their responsibility never ending and their pecuniary recompense meager enough for the mental return they give.

But it has remained for William E. Curtis, writing in the Chicago Record-Herald, to present the status of school teachers in so vigorous and picturesque a way as to remove the doubts of the most skeptical. He has collected a vast array of statistics comparing the pay of laborers and teachers, and the guides of our children seem to have the worse of it financially. He finds that:

The official returns from cities and towns of over 8000 inhabitants (which pay the best salaries) show that the average yearly salary paid to teachers in elementary school was much less than the wages paid in the mines to ordinary workmen. The returns cover about 93,000 teachers and supervising officers.

In sixty-four cities many of the teachers were actually paid salaries of less than $300 a year; in 116 cities the minimum was less than $350; in more than half of the cities salaries less than $400 a year were paid. Incredible as it may seem, three university cities—Rochester, Syracuse and New Haven—pay some of their teachers less than $300 a year. In New Orleans, St. Joseph, Fall River, Baltimore, Detroit, Louisville and Toledo many teachers are paid less than $350 a year, In Pittsburg, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Providence, St. Paul and Scranton the lowest is $400 a year, and yet in those cities ordinary laborers on street and sewer work, ditch diggers, road graders, mortar carriers and the commonest kind of labor are better paid.

Old Massachusetts, we should all be proud to know, takes the place of honor among all the States. The monthly average salary of men teachers here is $145, while women get $54.61. Out in California they equalize things better, for women receive $80.44 a month to the men's $97.21. Is there so much difference in the service done in this State as our figures would indicate?

Teaching is in many ways a delightful occupation, and it has its varied rewards. But let no one make the error of believing that instructors are over paid because they do not dig with their hands and have ten weeks' vacation in summer.—[Boston Journal.

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

The Woman's Guild will meet on Tuesday afternoon at 2 30 p. m. in the Choir Room. The hostesses will be Mrs. Anthony Kelley and Miss Agnes Jealous. The Rector will be present and will talk to the guild on Glimpses of the Church Abroad.

There will be a half hour Organ Recital on Sunday afternoon, October 28, a week from this Sunday at 4.30 p. m., preceding the 5 o'clock service. For the present these recitals will take place the fourth Sunday of each month.

The Wednesday 5 o'clock services will be resumed the Eve of All Saints Day, October 31, and will continue as in former years until Easter.

There will be a service of Infant Baptism on the First Sunday in November, at 4.15 p. m.

TOWN MEETING!

A special Town Meeting will be held in the Town Hall, MONDAY EVENING, Oct. 22d, at 7.45 o'clock, to hear and act on the petition for the acceptance of Fells Road and any other articles that may be inserted in the warrant.

Own a Piano by Renting It.

Our new plan of Rental Purchase solves the problem. We will rent you a piano and by agreement apply all paid toward the purchase. This allows ample trial in your home before a decision is made to buy. If you are pleased with the instrument it can be rented until rent accumulates enough for its purchase, 36 or 48 months' time being given to complete the Rental Purchase.

This plan practically eliminates the inconvenience of piano-buying. Let us send you our catalogue and explain more fully the advantages of our Rental Purchase Plan. Write to-day for list of bargains if inconvenient to call.

SHAKESPEARE AT THE CASTLE SQUARE.

With the record of last season's Shakespearean productions as an encouragement, the Boston Stage Society has arranged to present at the Castle Square, during the present season a series of revivals of five classic plays—four of them by Shakespeare, and the fifth an old English comedy.

Last year, it will be remembered, the fine acting and splendid stage-settings of the Shakespearean revivals at the Castle Square called forth unbounded praise, and each occasion the theatre was crowded to the door at every performance of the four plays then presented. A similar success is anticipated this season and intending patrons would do well to secure their seats in advance. The sale for the week of Julius Caesar opens next Monday.

The series will begin Oct. 29 with "Julius Caesar," and it will be followed on Dec. 17 by Sheridan's "The Rivals"; Jan. 7 by "Twelfth Night"; Feb. 18 by "As You Like It"; and on April 1 by "The Merchants of Venice." The scenery will be especially prepared from designs by Frank Chouteau Brown.

As an illustration of the enormous values contained in the property of the McKinley-Darrah Mine, the following instance may be cited.

No. 3 vein is on the side of a hill. The vein has been worked for several hundred feet up the hill, two men doing the work in the trench. They were directed to cut into the side of the hill in order to make a platform from which to sink a shaft. No attempt was made to take out ore except that which was encountered in the carrying out of the plan above mentioned. These two men worked but one shift per day since August 8th, and mined enough ore to pay the entire expenses of the McKinley-Darragh Mine besides leaving a surplus of over $3,500.-00. The company is employing now between 50 and 60 hands and working night and day shifts in the shafts.

Mounting board, all colors, Wilson the Stationer.

The Mothers' Wooing

By ALICE LOUISE LEE

Copyright, 1906, by Alice Louise Lee

"THERE ain't a better manager in the county than Betsey Agnew," said her neighbors and immediately added, "but may the good Lord deliver me from being managed by her." Those were also her son Zed's sentiments, but Providence had so far turned a deaf ear to Zed. Indeed, it seemed to delived him still further into her hands after she and Eliza Willet laid their heads together for the fourth time.

Mrs. Willet was apprehensive as to the successful outcome of this fourth interfamily campaign. Mrs. Agnew was hopeful with the hope of one who has unlimited confidence in herself.

"But, Betts," argued Eliza Willet, "the others wan't so contrary. I can't do nothin' with Atulky. She won't hear to reason, and Zed ain't no better, is he?"

Mrs. Agnew clicked her teeth and her knitting needles simultaneously. Her tone was decisive. "Elizy Willet,

SHE THREW A BIG CAKE ON HER SON'S PLATE.

I hain't reached my time of life to set down in peace and have folks say: 'This time Mis' Willet and Mis' Agnew has got their hands more'n full. Zed and Atulk will be too much for 'em.' Them's the words that Mis' Lansin' used to Asy Clark. When I have said my little say to Zed things will look different to him."

It was one morning in the late winter that Mrs. Agnew said her "little say" to her son. It was breakfast time, and Betsey stood beside the stove twirling a pancake turner over a smoking griddle.

Zed still sat at the table, bolting griddlecakes and listening without appearing to hear. He sat well back in his chair, with his feet gripped around the rear legs. His left elbow rested on the table, his hand clutching the back of his neck firmly. His forehead was low and his chin short. The nose turned up suddenly at the end and drew with it the middle of his upper lip, exposing a cavity which two front teeth would have become. When Zed spoke, which was seldom, his words arrived by way of his nose and were not intended to give satisfaction on any subject.

The only response he made to his mother's ultimatum was, "Fork me over a few of them cakes, will ye?"

Mrs. Agnew, paying no attention, bent over the griddle. "It ain't every day that a young man can git a farm of medder land he's been hankerin' after fer years, and"—here Mrs. Agnew shot a keen glance at her son—"that he can't git no other way."

"Has the molasses give out?" was Zed's satisfying response as he glued his eyes to the bottom of the sirup pitcher.

Betsey continued, knowing that her words were not falling on deaf ears. "No, I say, it ain't every day that a young man gits such a farm, with a new house on it, and"—here she paused and threw a big cake on her son's plate by way of emphasis—"a deed fer the whole thing on his weddin' day."

Zed unhooked his feet and laboriously arose. He twisted his upper lip sidewise and looked over the table. "There hain't nothin' more to eat in sight," he remarked tersely, "so I've got to quit."

He reached the barn, his eyes roving over the rich flats which stretched, acre on acre, toward the river. These fertile flats might be his, provided he followed the example of his three older brothers and took a Willet to wife. He kicked the barn door vindictively. "If one of the others had only took Atulk I'd be willin'," he muttered.

Later Betsey and Eliza reported to each other.

Eliza was agitated. "Oh, Atulky acts somethin' awful!" she moaned. "She says she will run away to Boston to her Aunt Atulk's, and I just bet she will!"

Atulka possessed a pretty face, an imperceptible hump in her shoulders and a very perceptible hump in her temper.

Mrs. Agnew rocked and looked calmly at her emotional friend. "How old is Atulk?"

"Twenty one, come next September."

"Yes," remarked Betsey meditatively, "under age. Now, you know that Atulk hain't a thing to carry her to Boston on except her two feet."

A relieved expression stole over Eliza's face. She was not one to deal out money freely.

"And what's more," continued Betsey, "she knows her aunt is dreadful dressy, and she'd cut a pretty figure in Boston without a decent dud to her back." Betsey finished impressively, "and you see to it that she don't have unless she'll marry Zed!"

Mrs. Willet sat bolt upright. "Why, Betts, you don't mean"—

"Yes, I do," interrupted Betsey. "It'll fetch her if anything will." And the friends were closeted together in close conversation for an hour longer.

The farsighted Betsey gave Zed a full mouth in which to think over his prospects concerning the meadow lands. Then she forced him to a decision.

"That man Skinner was here yesterday," she remarked casually, "to see about buyin' the medder lots. I told him I'd let him know in ten days what would be done with them medders. I told him I was thinkin' of givin' 'em to my son, but if he didn't want 'em," significantly, "I'd sell 'em to him."

Zed's upper lip twitched, and he took a firmer hold of the nape of his neck, but he made no reply until nine and one-half days later. Then he stopped, swill pail in hand, and asked gruffly, "Ma, when you goin' to begin that there house on the medders?"

"Just as soon as the frost is out of the ground," replied Betsey swiftly, "fer it's got to be used by the last of September."

She had won. She hastened to tell Eliza. The latter was pleased, but she looked actually pale.

"Ain't my plan with Atulky workin'?" asked Betsey anxiously.

Mrs. Willet groaned. "Workin'!" she ejaculated. "It's workin' me to death. Why, that girl keeps me all of a-tremble. I don't know where we're comin' out. Last Monday she says, says she, 'Ma, if I marry Zed I'll have Aunt Atulky git me a black silk coat, lined with white satin.' Listen to that, Betsey Agnew! And I give in. Tuesday she come in and says: 'Ma, if I marry Zed you've got to git me a bow of furs. I won't have him without 'em.' Just hear that, Betts! And I give in. And yesterday she says: "Ma, I'm goin' to have one of them long lace fishers. Aunt Atulky says they're all the rage.' And, Betts, I give in. Now, where am I goin' to stop givin' in?" Mrs. Willet applied her handkerchief to her eyes and wept.

"Yes, yes, Elizy, I know it's hard," responded Betsey, with the light of victory in her eyes, "but it's worth all that to have our own way where people think we can't. Now I must hurry along and hire the carpenters. By the way," with her hand on the doorknob, "I'm goin' to send Zed over Sunday night to set up with Atulk."

Eliza groaned afresh. "Of course it's got to be done, but it'll mean another silk dress out of me, as likely as not, before she'll set up."

Zed "set up" Sunday night with his prospective bride—that is, he sat in one corner of the large parlor and blinked at the lamp. He held himself down by means of his toes hooked around the hind legs of the straight backed chair on which he sat. Mrs. Willet, with a face full of anxiety, had received him and immediately retired and closed the door behind her. A commotion began at once upstairs and down. Zed grinned appreciatively until the door flew open and Atulka projected herself into the room and, without so much as casting her scornful eyes on Zed, flounced into a chair in the farther corner, pressed her nose against the window pane, stared fixedly out into the darkness and chewed gum.

Zed sat patiently until the hands of the clock designated the hour specified by Betsey and then took his silent departure. He nearly fell over Mrs. Willet, whose ear had been applied to the keyhole in order that she might report progress to Mrs. Agnew the following day.

There was no word for her to report, nor was there until September, until the house was finished and the wedding day set, until Zed's upper lip had been permanently twisted sidewise in disgust and Atulka had secured such a trousseau as no one in the county had ever had before. Then Mrs. Willet had a report to make one Monday morning. It was not much, but it excited and delighted both mothers.

"They talked!" Mrs. Willet exclaimed.

"Now the Lord be praised!" cried Betsey, plously sinking into a rocking chair. "What'd they say?"

Mrs. Willet shook her head. "I couldn't make out a word, they talked so low."

"I should like to know," said Betsey regretfully, "seein' it's only two weeks to the weddin'."

"My, ain't I glad it's only two weeks more," murmured Eliza pathetically. "The clothes that Atulky has got out of me! They make folks open their eyes, though, I tell you!" Eliza found a crumb of comfort there. "But I just feel as if I was comin' on to the town."

"We'l," returned Betsey calmly, "I guess that deed I got recorded last week up to Auburn will take a trifle more out of me than Atulk's clothes have out of you, and the new house. You ain't the only loser."

"I know it, Betts," fretfully, "but I'll be all fired glad when it's over."

"I can't help wonderin'," was Betsey's ambiguous response, "what they said."

Unexpectedly Zed enlightened her that very afternoon. Zed had been doing an unprecedented amount of thinking for weeks and a little planning. He was proving himself the worthy son of his mother, but had his mother known it she would have been far from pleased. On her movements Zed had kept a wary eye until the previous week. The day Mrs. Willet and Mrs. Agnew drove to Auburn together he, feeling secure, had brought together pen, ink and paper, hooked his feet around the legs of his chair and with perspiring face tollsomely indited a letter. It was the longest he had ever written and proved to be the most satisfactory.

"Ma," said Zed, coming into the pantry—"ma, me and Atulky want to go to the circus Wednesday at Auburn. You know it's Atulk's birthday, and we want to celebrate."

Betsey was delighted. Mrs. Willet was delighted. They beamed on the world generally and on each particularly for two days. Eliza early decided to "set out Wednesday" with Betsey in order to finish their arrangements for the wedding. She hurried across the fields just after Zed and Atulka had departed, and the two women planned cakes and creams, salads and cold meats until sundown.

The dusk of the shortening September day was fast approaching when they heard the sound of horses at the front gate. Mrs. Willet arose hastily. "There; that means that Atulky is to home, and I must go right over."

"Why, wait, Elizy, and I'll have Zed carry you over"— Betsey was interrupted by a rap at the door. "It ain't Zed, Elizy. Set down again."

Betsey opened the door, and Asa Skinner entered. He was skinner by name and by nature both, the people of Auburn said, but outwardly he was pleasant to look at as he stood inside the door, smiling blandly at the the women. He couched slightly against the rim of his tall silk hat, which he held in one gloved hand.

"Ladies," he began, with some hesitation, "I—ahem—feel it my duty to inform you—er—that your ch'l'ren will not be home—er—tonight, at least"—

Mrs. Willet sat down suddenly and hard. "Atulky!" she cried. "Where is Atulky?"

Mr. Skinner bowed in Eliza's direction. "She has just—er—let me see." He drew out his watch. "Yes, her train is just now pulling into Boston."

Eliza threw up both hands and turned pale. "Into Boston," she repeated in a weak voice. "How'd she ever git

"LADIES," HE BEGAN, WITH SOME HESITATION.

"By means of a ticket," explained Mr. Skinner gravely and added as if in afterthought to Betsey, "purchased by your son."

Betsey suddenly advanced one step nearer Mr. Skinner. She spoke with heavy emphasis. "My son got it, did he? Just wait till I git a holt of Zed."

Mr. Skinner smiled blandly. "I fear, Mrs. Agnew, that you will be obliged to forego that pleasure, as he is on his way to California."

"California!" Betsey's voice was shrill. "It can't be true! Zed left this house with just $7 in his pocket."

"He left Auburn," replied Mr. Skinner quickly, "with $7,000, the price of his new farm."

Betsey's head reeled. She caught the edge of the table and spoke hoarsely. "The farm ain't his until the weddin' day. I've got the deed"—

Asa Skinner interrupted sharply: "Your family affairs are nothing to me, madam. The deed of the meadow lots to your son was entered at the office of the registrar and recorder last week as signed, sealed and delivered. The farm is now mine. I called to get the keys of the house."

Ten minutes later two very pale and angry women were looking at each other silently. Betsey was the first to speak.

"To think," she moaned, "that I was fool enough to get that deed recorded!"

Eliza wrung her hands. "And there's Atulk run away without Zed after pesterin' me nigh to death"—

She ended her sentence with a suppressed scream and sprang to her feet with the agility of youth. She hurried across the field and in at her back door, closely followed by the breathless and astonished Betsey. Up the stairs went Mrs. Willet and with trembling hands threw open the door of the guest chamber, where the wedding finery had been laid.

The room was empty. Silk, chiffon, skirts, veils, gloves, hats, scarfs and all the toilet accessories, which for weeks had been draining Mrs. Willet's purse, had all disappeared.

The two women gazed at each other and at the empty room by turns.

"My stars, Betts, how did she ever manage it?" wailed Eliza, immediately adding, "And she's of age today!"

All Right Now.

"I hear, Mulligan, that your sister Mary is going to marry Patsy O'Hagan."

"She is."

"I thought you and him was enemies."

"We was, but we've had our fight."—Chicago Record-Herald.

REVELED IN PERFUMES.

The Ancients Indulged in Them to an Extravagant Degree.

The use of perfume was indulged in to such an extravagant degree by the ancients that some of the more ascetic men had good reason to denounce it. Solon issued an edict prohibiting its sale in Athens. Julius Caesar and Lucinus, who were Roman consuls in 565, published a law forbidding the sale of exotics in that city, and by the laws of Lycurgus perfumers were expelled from Sparta as being wasters of oil and encouragers of sensuousness. Clearchus wrote against the excessive use of unguents, and Socrates declaimed against them in strong terms, preferring, he said, "the smell of healthy toil and the perfume of a good and manly life." It was customary at festivals to pass round to the guests perfumes served in alabaster boxes and vessels of gold. At one of these feasts Cynulcus, who loved to deride the youth for the use of perfumes, was made a butt for their ridicule. Some mischievous youth anointed the cynic with much ointment, pouring it lavishly over his head and face. When he awoke he exclaimed in an angry voice: "What is this? Oh, Hercules, will not some one come with a sponge and wipe my face, which is thus polluted with a lot of dirt?"

At the Syrian banquets it was usual for the slaves to come in with bladders full of Babylonian perfumes and bedew the garlands and walls and hangings and fill the halls with delicious fragrance. In some of the more modern feasts statues and ornaments were provided with jets which threw out diluted essences and attars.—London Society.

TABLE NAPKINS.

They Came Into General Use In the Fifteenth Century.

Curiously enough, that article, now considered almost indispensable, the table napkin, was first used only by children and was only adopted by elder members of the family about the middle of the fifteenth century. In etiquette books of an earlier date than this among other sage pieces of advice for children are instructions about wiping their fingers and lips with their napkins.

It seems that the tablecloth was long enough to reach the floor and served the grown people in place of napkins. When they did begin to use napkins they placed them first on the shoulder, then on the left arm and finally tied them about the neck. A French writer who evidently was conservative and did not welcome the napkin kindly records with scorn:

"The napkin is placed under the chin and fastened in the back, as if one were going to be shaved. A person told me that he wore his that way that he might not soil his beautiful frills."

It was a difficult matter to tie the two corners in the back, and it is said that thence originated our expression for straitened circumstances, "Hard to make both ends meet." This custom led to the habit of table waiters carrying a napkin on the left arm.

Tennyson's Astronomy.

In Tennyson's "Palace of Art" occur the lines:

She saw the snowy poles and moons of Mars,
That mystic field of drifted light
In mid Orion, and the married stars.

This at first looks like a literary parallel to Swift's well known fortuitous forecast of the discovery of the Martian satellites, and J. S. Stevenson, writing from Blairavon, Norwood, Ceylon, points out that Professor H. H. Turner quotes it in "Modern Astronomy" as having been written in 1835. This, however, appears not to have been the case, for Mr. Stevenson on reference to the biography of the late poet laureate by the present Lord Tennyson has found the note: "The 'Moons of Mars' is the only modern reading here. All the rest are more than half a century old." Scientific discovery was thus not anticipated by Tennyson in the mention of Martian satellites.—Nature.

In Good Season.

In a place in New Jersey the town officers had just put some fire extinguishers in their big buildings. One day one of the buildings caught fire, says the Philadelphia Ledger, and the extinguishers failed to do their work.

A few days later at the town meeting some citizens tried to learn the reason.

After they had freely discussed the subject one of them said, "Mr. Chairman, I make a motion that the fire extinguishers be examined ten days before every fire."

Napoleon's Tomb.

The windows in the Chapel of the Invalides in Paris, where the great Napoleon lies buried, are of a singularly translucent amber glass. When the sun shines full upon them the rays are transmuted into gold, and they fall like a ladder of light upon the bronze sarcophagus of the conqueror until he seems glorified from the skies.

The Purse.

The invention of the purse was doubtless contemporaneous with that of money. The purse is mentioned in Old Testament history as a part of a traveler's outfit. When the disciples, spoken of in the gospels, were sent forth to preach they were commanded to take neither gold nor silver nor brass in their purses.

Popular.

"He's a popular poet."

"Dear me! Why, I thought he hadn't written anything for years!"

"He hasn't; that's why he's so popular."

DEATH BY A BOMB.

Imaginary Incident of the Crimean War by Tolstoi.

The following imaginary incident of the Crimean war is found in Count Tolstoi's "Sevastopol:" "The bomb, coming faster and faster and nearer and nearer, so that the sparks of its fuse were already visible, descended. 'Lie down!' some one shouted. They lay flat on the ground. Praskouhin, closing his eyes, heard only the bomb crashing down on the hard earth close by. A second passed, which seemed an hour. The bomb had not exploded. He opened his eyes and at that moment caught a sight of the glowing fuse of the bomb not a yard off. Terror, cold terror, excluding every other thought and feeling, seized his whole being. He covered his face with his hands.

"Then he remembered the 12 rubles he owed, a debt in St. Petersburg that should have been paid long ago and the gypsy song he had sung that evening. The woman he loved rose in his imagination, wearing a cap with lilac ribbons, and yet, inseparable from all these and from thousands of other recollections, the present thought, the expectation of death, did not leave him for a moment. 'Perhaps it won't explode,' and with desperate final decision he wished to open his eyes, but at that instant a red flame pierced through the still closed lids, and, with a terrible crash, something struck him in the middle of the chest.

"He jumped up and began to run, but, stumbling over the saber that got between his legs, fell on his side. 'Thank God, I'm only bruised,' was his first thought, and he wished to touch his chest with his hand, but his arms seemed tied to his sides, and it felt as if a vise were squeezing his head. Soldiers flitted past him, and he counted them unconsciously. Then lightning flashed before his eyes, and he wondered whether the shot were fired from a mortar or cannon. 'Cannon, probably, and here are more soldiers—five, six, seven soldiers. They all pass by.' He was suddenly filled with fear that they would crush him. He wished to shout that he was hurt, but his mouth was so dry that his tongue clove to the roof of his mouth.

"He felt it wet about his chest, and this sensation of being wet made him think of water. Fearing lest the soldiers might trample on him, he tried to shout 'Take care with you,' but instead of that he uttered such a terrible groan that he was frightened to hear it. Then other red fires began dancing before his eyes, and it seemed to him that the soldiers put stones on him. He made an effort to push off the stones, stretched himself, and saw and heard and felt nothing more. He had been killed on the spot by a bomb splinter in the middle of his chest."

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

A sick man talks about everything except death.

No man is big enough to laugh at a real worry.

While loafing a man usually thinks about a big scheme that won't work.

An apology never gives satisfaction to but one person—the one who makes it.

If you must kick, make it swift and sure, and do not prolong the agony by making excuses.

A boy thinks, "What a good time a man has!" And a man thinks, "What a good time a boy has!" And what a poor time both have!

It may be as good a feat to have all of a little girl's petticoats the same length as it is to have everything that goes on the stove cooked at the same time.—Atchison Globe.

In a Mexican Hat Store.

Half a million straw hats is no uncommon sight to be met with at one time in the hat stores of Mexico. The hats are made of a long pampas grass which grows nowhere else in the world. It is specially cultivated for the hat industry. So rapidly are the hats made that some skilled workmen can turn out ten or a dozen a day, and they are then sent to all parts of the world. They cost about fourpence each to make, are retailed at from 1 shilling sixpence to 4 shillings and are so durable that it not infrequently happens that those of an economical turn of mind make a single hat last ten years. —London Queen.

Chesapeake Bay.

Few people fully appreciate the great size of the Chesapeake bay. It is the largest indentation on the Atlantic coast, and it has often been called the Mediterranean of America. On its bosom the navies of the world could easily float. It is 200 miles long, and in some places it is forty miles broad. It has an area of over 2,000 square miles, and it shoots off into great rivers with an aggregate length of thousands of miles. — Baltimore American.

The Latest.

Customer—You say, then, that this material is the latest? Shopman—The very latest, madam. Customer—But will it fade in the sun? Shopman—Why, it has been lying in the window for two years, and look how well it has stood.—London Mail.

Quite Different.

Papa—No; he's not the proper sort of a husband for you, my dear. Daughter—Oh, papa, he'd die for me! Papa—Oh, that's all right. Tell him to go as far as he likes. I was afraid he wanted to marry you.—Cleveland Leader.

Gratifying Progress.

"Your son is studying art, I believe. Has he made much progress?"

"Oh, yes. He is able to talk the language quite fluently."—Judge.

This Peculiar World.

This is a peculiar world, says an exchange. One is struggling for justice and another is fleeing from it. One man is saving to build a house and another is trying to sell his for less than cost to get rid of it. One man is spending all the money he can make in taking a girl to the theater and sending her flowers, with the hope of making her his wife, while his neighbor is spending what gold he has in getting a divorce. One man escapes all the diseases that flesh is heir to and gets killed on a railroad. Another escapes with a scratch and dies with the whooping cough. One man stands off his creditors and goes traveling while another pays his debts and stays at home.

Consoling.

A New England congressman once went to Franklin Pierce demanding an office for a constituent. Pierce sent him to James Guthrie, secretary of the treasury. By and by the congressman returned to the president in great dudgeon.

"What did Guthrie say to you about appointing your friend?" inquired the president. "He said he would be hanged if he would."

"Did Guthrie talk that way to you?"

"He did."

"Well, that's the way he talks to me, too," was Pierce's consoling reply.

Golf or Croquet?

It was a twosome. The player who drove off first had bandy legs. The second in driving off did not notice that his opponent had got in front of him and the ball ran through between the opponent's legs. Turning around in anger the bandy legged one said, "Here, mun, that's no golf!" "Weel," said the other, "if it's not golf it's croquet."—Scottish Referee.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Judge James T. Joslin of Hudson, Mass., father to Ralph E. Joslin, Esq., of this town, celebrated his 45th wedding anniversary last Sunday. In 1857 he took up the study of law, and was admitted to the bar in 1860. In 1856 he wrote the first article agitating the incorporation of Feltonville as the town of Hudson, and was one of a committee of three to present the subject to the legislature. Since that time he has been an active factor in the development of Hudson. He was trial justice from 1867 to 1892 and tried more than 3000 cases. He was reappointed to the office six months ago to succeed the late Henry Boynton. He has also been postmaster, was one of the incorporators of the Hudson savings bank, one of its first vice-presidents, and has been a trustee since the bank was incorporated.

Rev. William F. Lyons of the Sacred Heart Church, West Lynn, preached the sermon last Sunday evening at the close of the retreat for the men of the Holy Name society of St. Mary's Church. A large number of new members were received into the society.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING.

Report of Committee on New Central Fire Station—Other Business Transacted.

A special town meeting was held in the Town Hall Monday evening, and when Town Clerk Carter read the call, there was about the average attendance. George Chandler Coit was elected as the Moderator.

The first article to be considered was that concerning reports of town officers and committees. Mr. Charles N. Harris offered a motion, which was carried, that the rules for the guidance of the meeting adopted in March govern the present meeting.

Mr. Marcus B. May reported for the Appropriations committee, and stated that at a meeting held on Oct. 22, a permanent organization was effected by the choice of Marcus B. May as chairman and Charles N. Harris as clerk. Mr. May said that the committee had considered the several articles in the warrant calling for appropriations of money and had agreed on the recommendations of $500 for repair of Central fire station, $775 for moth suppression, and that no action be taken on the fees of the Collector of Taxes.

TABLE OF RECEIPTS, EXPENDITURES ETC.

Mr. C. F. A. Currier offered the following which was carried:

Moved: That the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee and the Town Auditor be, and hereby are, appointed a committee to prepare for the Annual Town Meeting of March, 1907, a table showing for each department and account for which an appropriation is made by taxation or by transfer, the appropriations, receipts and expenditures for the year March 1, 1906 to February 28, 1907, balances February 28, 1906, and February 28, 1907, and unpaid bills on hand February 28, 1907. The amount of said unpaid bills shall be reported to the Town Auditor not later than six o'clock, p. m. on Friday, March 1st, 1907, by person or persons in charge of the foregoing department or accounts. A sum not exceeding $25 is hereby appropriated to meet the expense of preparing and printing a sufficient number of copies of the above mentioned table for use at the Annual Town Meeting, the same to be charged to Incidentals Account.

Mr. Currier stated that the object of his motion was to bring down to date information that was needed by the Appropriations Committee in order to make a full report at the annual town meeting.

MUNICIPAL LIGHTING PLANT.

Mr. John Abbott for the committee on municipal lighting appointed at the last annual meeting reported as follows:

"The committee on municipal lighting respectfully report to the town that progress has been made in the matters under consideration by the committee. The conditions which led to the appointment of the committee have been modified to some extent since our appointment. The committee is not ready at this time to report definitely either in favor or against establishing a municipal plant, but believe it to be for the best interests of the town that the committee be continued in office to report at a future time."

In reply to a question by Mr. John H. Carter, Mr. Abbott said that it might not be desirable to report at the March meeting, as there was so much to be done. He did not know when the committee would report.

The report was received and the committee continued.

SCHOOL PHYSICIANS.

It was voted, on motion of Mr. Currier, "That the School Committee be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $250 of the appropriation for the support of schools for the current year in carrying out the provisions of Chapter 502 of the Acts of 1906 relative to the appointment of school physicians."

THANKS TO GEN. LAWRENCE.

On motion of Tree Warden Guild, the meeting expressed its sense of gratitude for the work that Gen. Lawrence of Medford is doing at his own expense in that city and on the border line of Winchester in suppressing the moths.

FELLS ROAD NOW A TOWN WAY.

The Selectmen having reported favorably on the acceptance of Fells road as a town way, the meeting concurred in their action. Selectman Woods said that the abuttors had contributed $375 for the rebuilding of the road (the engineer's estimate) and were anxious to have their houses connected with the sewer, which could not be done until after the acceptance of the street by the town.

NEW CENTRAL FIRE STATION AFTER GRADE CROSSING IS SETTLED.

Mr. C. J. Allen, for the committee on new Central fire station reported as follows:

Under article 14 of the warrant for the 1906 annual town meeting it was voted:

That a Committee of five be appointed by the Moderator, to investigate the matter of building a new Central Fire

MRS. CYNTHIA ANNE MEAD.

Mrs. Cynthia Anne (Flanders) Mead, mother of Dr. George N. P. Mead and Mrs. Frederic S. Snyder, both of this town, died at the home of her daughter on Sheffield road Sunday. She was 71 years of age.

Mrs. Mead was born in Meredith, N. H., Dec. 31, 1834, her parents being David B. and Polly G. Flanders. She was the widow of Nathaniel J. Mead, who was one of the firm of Mead, Mason & Co., contractors, of Concord, N. H., and Boston. During her life she resided for a number of years in Concord, N. H., New Hampton, and Everett, Mass., at the latter place her husband was for many years deacon in the First Baptist Church. She made her home in this town with her daughter for about a year. The son and daughter living in this town are the only members of her family who survive her.

Funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from her daughter's home on Sheffield road, conducted by her pastor, Rev. Mr. Hughes, of the First Baptist Church of Everett, who was assisted by Rev. D. Augustine Newton and Rev. Amos Harris of Everett. During the services selections were sung by the quartette from the Congregational Church. The burial was in the family lot in Woodlawn cemetery, Everett. The bearers were Mr. Cyrus S. Hapgood of Boston, and Mr. Dudley P. Bailey, Mr. James E. Lewis and Dr. J. A. Brown of Everett.

CARRIAGE AND ELECTRIC CRASH.

A two seated carryall and an electric car crashed together Sunday forenoon on Church street shortly before eleven o'clock, badly bruising the owner of the turnout, Mr. Elmer P. Randlett, and seriously injuring Barney Rogers of Kendall street, who was riding with him.

Rogers had just driven the team to Mr. Randlett's house on Lagrange St. from the stable and Mr. Randlett was taking him back. On Church street near the Pattee estate the road was being repaired and it was necessary to use the left side of the road. The electric was approaching at a good rate of speed when in some unaccountable manner the two came together. Mr. Randlett was thrown out and somewhat cut and bruised, being dragged some yards holding to the reins. The horse was knocked down and the carriage smashed to splinters, Rogers falling amongst the wreckage and being pushed along the track by the car for some distance.

Doctors Maynard and Cummings were at once summoned and Rogers removed to his home. He was found to be badly bruised and sprained about the shoulders and back, but is expected to recover in a few weeks. The horse was not seriously hurt, although a little cut. The carriage was smashed beyond repair.

NEW VOTERS.

At the three sessions of the Registrars of Voters the following names were placed on the voting list:

George W. Annin, Charles T. Boudreau, Burton C. Caldwell, jr., Chas. L. Chamberland, Henry S. Chapman, Leon E. Day, Michael Deveney, Francis Dolan, Wm. H. Donaghey, Knut M. Edstrom, Peter W. Foley, William H. Gilpatric, Herbert L. Gutterson, Raymond Humes, Merrill E. Hodgdon, Daniel J. Keleher, Arthur A. Kidder, John H. Latham, John Lydon, Edward S. Mansfield, Michael Melie, Thomas McKee, Thomas F. Mulrenan, George H. Morrison, Wm. H. Mobbs, Michael H. Nagle, Philip O'Melia, Timothy O'Callahan, Howard S. Palmer, Geo. H. Peterson, Wallace V. Plummer, Frank Prue, jr., Vincent Ravi, Law. E. Richardson, Herbert C. Ross, Robert W. Sawyer, jr., Charles D. Sargent, Patrick Smith, James B. Sullivan.

The last opportunities to register will be this evening and this Saturday from noon until 10 p. m.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

The Fortnightly held its meeting in Calumet Hall last Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. In spite of the threatening weather 140 members gathered. The program consisted of vacation papers, by Mrs. Harrison on "Botanizing on Greylock," Mrs. Dorsey on "A Visit to Nantucket," Mrs. Wheeler "A Trip from Intervale to the summit of Mt. Washington," and Mrs. Woods on "The Vacation Play Room."

Tea was served by Mrs. Rufus Herrick, assisted by Mrs. William Herrick and Mrs. Ralph Putnam.

CALUMET CLUB NOTES.

Mr. Fred Grung, who has been acting as steward at the Winchester Boat Club this summer, has been engaged as assistant steward at the club for the winter.

Twelve teams have entered the winter bowling tournament.

On last Saturday evening but three names were lacking to fill the membership of the club to the limit, which is 200 resident members. After the directors meet tomorrow evening the club will probably have a waiting list. The increase in membership this fall has been very noticeable.

END OF A LONG CONTENTION.

The Level of Mystic Lake Established.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

A substantial copper bolt has been permanently set into the northeast stone abutment to the parkway bridge near the ancient site of the old Bacon mill, previously known as the Symmes mill. This bridge is at the head of Mystic Lake, nearly opposite the old Ann Bacon house and the establishment of such a high water mark by the Metropolitan Water Board closes a long and often times bitter controversy regarding flowage rights pertaining to Mystic Lake which controversy has existed since the settlement of the country. The first court proceeding on record regarding the legal level of Mystic lake is that of Rev. Zachariah Symmes dated June 16, 1657, who sued Edward Collins, the second owner of Gov. Craddock's "plantation," Medford, for flowing Mystic lake illegally and to such a height that it damaged Symmes meadows at the head of the lake. Collins' mill was situated at the outlet of lower Mystic below the present highway bridge on the Medford and Arlington road. The verdict was in Symmes' favor and the damages fixed, up to the date of the suit, at 3 pounds, 13 shillings and 8 pence. Subsequent to this decision, the Symmes family moved from the site of the Winchester playground where they first established farm buildings and a "dye house" to near the site of the parkway bridge where a fulling mill, grist mill, etc., were set up and run by water power. The first dam was erected near the present railroad bridge over the river but it was subsequently moved to a point opposite the old willows and near to the present Smith homestead, formerly the Ann Bacon house. When the second Symmes dam was erected at the point last mentioned, Abel Richardson, an old French war and revolutionary soldier and Ebeneezer Converse, likewise an old soldier, claimed the new dam flowed their land, Richardson then owning the old Converse mill and Converse owning the meadow land along the river and including the present playground. The Converse mill was much older than the Symmes mill as it was established in 1642. Three bitter law suits were fought out between the owners of the two mills with the result that the Symmes dam was at last lowered by order of the court from eight to six feet in height, but no elevation was established from a fixed base line and no permanent mark erected as would be the case in such a matter at the present time. The depositions and evidence in these cases are interesting reading as they give insight into the ways of business in those old days as well as descriptions of the country along the river. One deposition speaks of the wild grape vines which overgrew the banks of the river between the two mills and of the wild ducks which came up the stream to pick up the floating ripe grapes which dropped from the vines into the water.

About the time the suits were decided in favor of the upper mill, the Symmes mill was sold to Gov. Sullivan and his brothers who were interested with Gov. Hancock and others in the Middlesex canal, John L. Sullivan being superintendent and Hancock president of the corporation. John L. Sullivan boarded at the old Black Horse tavern (on present Black Horse terrace) and has been described as a man of considerable pomposity as well as ability. He was much interested in a steam engine designed to propel boats which would do away with horses then used to tow the canal boats. The first engine was built at the old Symmes mill and it certainly propelled one boat through the canal to Woburn. It did not prove a permanent success, however, and Sullivan subsequently failed in business as well as in establishing a pioneer steamboat line, though it has been claimed for him that he antidated Fulton in propelling at least one boat by steam power.

After the Sullivan family got through with the Symmes mill, the Symmes family having removed to their present Symmes corner locations, the mill privilege and land about it was sold to the Bacon family, hatters, and became known thereafter as the Bacon mills. Many disputes and one law suit ensued between the Bacon mill owners and Harrison Parker who then owned the present Whitney mill, Parker claiming that the Bacon dam flowed water back upon his mill. Many depositions were taken of old men who knew about long ago conditions regarding the flowage rights of the lower mill, Dea. John Symmes, father of the late Luther Symmes, testifying that the Symmes dam was six feet high after the court ordered it cut down in the suit of Abel Richardson against the Symmes' mill. Nothing definite was established as the result of the Bacon-Parker contentions as the courts and all concerned in the controversy did not see to it that a definite mark was established to which height the lower mill could legally flow water.

In 1850 the city of Charlestown obtained a right from the legislature to take the water of Mystic lake as a source of water supply. It would seem that an act of the Great and General Court would state definitely to what clearly defined level Charlestown could flow the water of Mystic lake measured from some well known base, but it did not do so but perpetuated the old dispute by giving Charlestown a right to take Mystic lake and to raise the water in the lake to a level "not exceeding the level of Bacon's dam, so called." Soon after the taking, Charlestown blew up Bacon's dam with gunpowder without first definitely marking or preserving in permanent form the real height or level of the overflow of the dam measured from some well known base. Thus the old dispute was passed on for posterity's contention and torment. Soon after the Bacon dam was blown up, Harrison Parker sold his mill to the Whitney family in whose hands it has remained to the present day. During the long time that Charlestown used Mystic water, it was drawn down so low to supply that city and other near-by places during the dry season that it was impossible for the city to flow back the lake water upon the Whitney mill to its detriment. If the water was flowed back in winter time, it did no harm as there was abundance of it at this season. Thus peace and good will prevailed for many years between the municipal owners of the old Symmes-Bacon water privilege and the Whitney mill.

In 1900 the state under an act of legislature took possession of the old Charlestown water supply including Mystic lake and its tributaries and ceased thereafter to use the water for a water supply. The same year the state flowed the lake to a higher level than when it was in use as a water supply and the Whitney mill owners complained to the state commission, whereupon the lake was lowered to the mill owner's satisfaction for the time being. The following summer, 1901, it seems that influence was brought to bear upon the state commission to keep up the level of the lake to what the commission claimed was its full legal height which they claimed was as high as a seven foot dam would flow, or to seventeen feet above Boston city base. The commission absolutely declined to agree with the Whitneys' in permanently marking the flowage of Mystic lake except at this level which the Whitneys' would not agree to. Several conferences were held but no result was reached until a friendly suit was instituted by the Whitneys' and their side of the case brought out in court. Before all the plaintiff's evidence was put in, proceedings were stopped and a settlement was made between the parties and the flowage level of Mystic lake was agreed to as hereafter being 16 feet, 3 in. elevation above Boston city base which was practically agreeing that Bacon's dam was six feet three inches high. This was nine inches lower than the state's first contention and the result was a substantial victory for the Whitney mill though it was not quite as much a reduction in level of back water as it could justly claim. After the agreement of the parties was entered as a decision of court, the state commissioners fixed the copper bolt in the stone abutment as described thus marking for all time the flowage height of Mystic lake. This copper bolt does not mark the level of "Bacon's old dam, so called" or the legal level of the present Mystic dam but it marks the highest level to which the state can flow water under any condition of freshet flowage or excessive raintall. Hereafter the Mystic dam can only be maintained at such an elevation as not to flow water above the copper bolt at any part of the lake affected by the dam.

In brief, this is the history of an old contention which ought to have been settled long ago as it might have been, if in the "good old times" more attention had been paid to making court decision relating to the height of mill dams, so clear and definite that they could be understood forever by posterity and not simply by those living at the time of the contention. It may be said that the level of the lake as now established will keep it in good condition so far as depth of water in the lake is concerned though the river might be made deeper for appearance sake, it being nine inches lower than the state originally claimed a right to flow it. The last and closing chapter in the old contention has been carried on in a most friendly and honorable spirit though the subject was a most difficult one to settle as the evidence was very conflicting and difficult to get at. It is a credit to all concerned that it is at last settled.

REPUBLICAN RALLY.

There will be a grand Republican Rally at the Opera House, Medford, Thursday evening, Nov. 1st, at 8 o'clock. The speakers will be Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge and Hon. Samuel W. McCall. The voters of Winchester are earnestly urged to attend. There will be music, decorations, fireworks and a rousing good time.

Account books, all kinds and prices at Wilson's.

F. W. WOOLWORTH & CO. OPEN THEIR 160th STORE.

The people of Woburn and vicinity who have been watching the extensive alterations at 427 and 429 Main street, Woburn will be interested in knowing that F. W. Woolworth & Co. will open their latest branch this week. The Woburn 5 and 10c store will be open for inspection Friday, Oct. 26, from 3 to 9 p. m. At 8 a. m. Saturday, the store will be open for business.

The Woburn 5 and 10c store will be new and up-to-date in every respect, carrying the same large and varied stock as the well known stores in Boston. The same policy of prompt and courteous attention to customers will be followed here. There is nothing over 10 cents in the entire store.

The new store has attractive articles in every department. The ladies will take pleasure in inspecting the varied assortment of notions, jewelry, combs, ribbon, lace, belts and the like. The housefurnishing lines, tinware, enamel, yellowware, etc., are well represented. The men, who have been looking at the overalls and clothes baskets in the windows, will find that they can save money at the hardware and paint counters, and will be no less interested in the men's fall ties and hosiery.

The candy department will handle only confections that are strictly in accord with the pure food laws.

The new Woburn store will make the 160th link in the F. W. Woolworth chain of 5 and 10 cent stores, and this large, well lighted store has been placed under the management of Mr. Edwin P. Emery, whose wide experience in other New England stores will make him well able to serve the residents of Woburn and vicinity.

All are invited to the grand opening for inspection on Friday afternoon and evening during which time music will be furnished by an orchestra. This store will open for business promptly at eight Saturday morning.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

Through the "Society Kolumm" of the "Wind-chased-her Skidoodle" the "Hon Silas Hepburn, eddytor," on behalf of Mr. Howard Salem Palmer, extended to his friends in Winchester and vicinity, an invitation to be present at a birthday celebration—"and shindig," "to be held on ye night of Tuesday, Oct. 23, at ye soshul our of forty-five minutes after seven of the clock. Sed hulaballo to last untill it stopz."

In response to the above invitation about thirty expectant young people were on hand to make merry. With the spirit of Halloween in the air and decorations, three fleeting hours were naturally spent in the performance of old and new games that caused fun and laughter. Polished fruits and vegetables with shocked corn, vines, leaves, witches, black cats and numberless candles lent to various rooms an atmosphere of mystery and great beauty. Intermission was taken up with a bountiful buffet lunch and musical selections of a high order. At the conclusion Mr. Palmer gave a test, witnessed by all the guests, demonstrating in his ability to "put out" eighteen candles "in three blows" that three years must elapse before he becomes a benedit.

Harold W. Whitten, who tied with P. O'Donnell, W. G. Pfell and J. E. Oldham, all of the Woodland Golf Club, a week ago last Saturday, for the best net score, again tied with W. G. Pfell in the play off last Saturday. However, in the second play off Monday, he defeated Pfell by one stroke, the net score being 77 to 78.

MARRIED AT NEWBURYPORT.

A most attractive home wedding was that which took place at 5 30 o'clock last week Wednesday at the home of the bride's father, Joseph M. Greenough, 12 Titcomb street, Newburyport, it being the union of Miss Grace Ashby Greenough of that city and Howard Gary Chapin, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Chapin of this town.

The marriage was witnessed by members of the immediate families and friends. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Arthur H. Wright, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, as the couple stood in front of a very beautiful bank of palms, potted plants and flowers.

They were attended by four young nephews of the bride and groom, Masters Richard Greenough Norris, George Chapin Proctor, Howard Chapin Proctor and Caruth Chapin.

The bridal party entered the parlor to the sweet strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, the bride upon the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. The music was rendered by Chase's orchestra, stationed in the upper hall, which gave also a number of selections before and after the ceremony.

The bride wore a satin gown of conventional white, trimmed with real lace, an heirloom of the family, and carried a beautiful white ivory prayer book. Her long tulle veil was caught up with sprays of orange blossoms.

The parlors were most charmingly decorated with greenery, cut flowers, chrysanthemums and autumn leaves, arranged most tastily.

The ushers were Frank Emery, A. Howard Smith, Frederic Langford, Harry Tyler Lansing, Edwin Chapin, all of Boston.

Following the ceremony there was a reception from 6.30 to 8, Mr. and Mrs. Chapin being assisted in receiving by their parents and the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles S. Norris of Brookline.

Tanner, of Haverhill served a dainty wedding lunch and the company were entertained with orchestral numbers while receiving the hearty congratulations of all present.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapin started on a wedding trip during the evening. They are to reside at the Nottingham, Copley Square, Boston, and will be at home after December 1.

There was a large array of pretty and costly gifts, in almost endless variety. The groom's gifts to the ushers were pretty pins of amethyst set with diamonds, the birthstone of the bride.

The bridegroom is of the firm of Chapin, Trull & Co., Charlestown, distillers, and the bride the younger daughter of Joseph M. Greenough.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LECTURE.

Judge Septimus J. Hanna, C. S. D. who is to lecture in the Town Hall, next Monday evening is a native of Pennsylvania, though he removed from that State to the West when a youth. He practised law for upwards of twenty years; held various positions of trust: Captain of Company H, 138th Regiment Illinois Volunteers; Judge of the County Court at Council Bluffs, Iowa; City Attorney, and, during President Arthur's administration, Registrar of the United States Land Office at Leadville, Colorado. At the latter place he became interested in Christian Science, through the healing of his wife and some of her personal friends, and by his own healing. After a time he concluded to devote his whole time to the promotion of the cause which had become dear to him. He began his Christian Science work at Scranton, Pa., where he aided in establishing the present First Church of Christ Scientist, of that city. In 1892 he was called to Boston, Mass., where for ten years he was editor-in-chief of the Christian Science periodicals. He was for eight years First Reader of the Mother Church, after which he was made a member of the Board of Lectureship.

LADIES' AFTERNOON WHIST.

The ladies of the Unitarian Church are to again hold the afternoon whist parties for the benefit of the Ladies' Friendly Society which have been so popular on preceding years.

This season there are to be three afternoons, all at the home of Mrs. Oren C. Sanborn, 11 Central street, the dates being Nov. 19, Dec. 3, and Dec. 17.

Tickets can be obtained of Mrs. Oren C. Sanborn,

" Herbert Nickerson,
" William E. Beggs,
" George H. Root,
" Frank A. Cutting.

REPUBLICAN RALLY.

There will be a Republican rally in the Town Hall, Saturday evening, Nov. 3. Samuel J. Elder, Esq., will preside, and the speakers will be Cong. S. W. McCall, Cong. Gillette and Herbert S. Riley, the Republican nominee for Senator for this district. Make this rally a rouser.

OLD PEOPLE'S DAY.

Fifteenth Annual Observance at First Congregational Church.

Fifteen years ago Rev. D. Augustine Newton, pastor of the First Congregational Church inaugurated the annual feature of having in the autumn a service specially for the elderly people of the town, and known as Old People's Day. From the inception of the idea up to the present time these services have been very popular, the Church being well filled. The sermon, the music, and everything that has entered into the services, have been in keeping with the days of Auld Lang Syne.

This year the preacher was that grand old minister and man from Woburn, Rev. Daniel March, D. D., who probably was as old as the oldest person present in the audience last Sunday. He took for his theme, "The Comforts of Old Age." Isa. 46 : 4.

A pleasant feature of the exercises was the singing of an original hymn written for the occasion by Mrs. Caro H. Bowers, and sung to the tune of Hendon, which was as follows:

"Hitherto" our gracious Lord
Thou hast marked the paths we trod;
To Thee now, we render praise,
Wondrous in Thy works and ways.

"Hitherto" what joys we've known,
All along life's pathway strown;
Happy scenes in swift review,
Show Thy love to us anew.

"Hitherto" for every grief,
Thou hast sent a sure relief;
Glad thanksgiving we would raise;
In this gratetul hymn of praise.

"Hitherto" Thy care bestown,
Yet again we humbly own.
May each future year record
Loving thanks to Thee, our Lord.

The Church was decorated with fruit, vegetables and autumn foliage. The weekly offering and collection was given to the Home for Aged People in this town.

Of the Roll of Honor of Elderly People, printed one year ago there have been five deaths—Mrs. Johanna Buckley, Mrs. Elizabeth Browning, Mrs. Sarah J. Nowell, Mrs. Sarah A. Studley, and Mrs. Deborah D. Marble. The list for this year is as follows:

MR. TUCK'S PLATFORM.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I wish to thank the Democrats of the district for the honor given me in the nomination as a candidate to the general court. Believing as I do in those principles taught by Wm. J. Bryan since 1896, and most of them since adopted by President Rosevelt "to save his party," and now ingrafted in our state platform and supported by honest John B. Moran in Massachusetts and Wm. R. Hearst in New York, I do indeed take the nomination as an honor. It is the beginning of the contest of 1908 to prevent and destroy monopoly, with the three court decissions of this week in favor of the people, as against rebaters, Standard oil and gas companies.

Surely the great work of Bryan, Hearst, Folk, Tillman and other brave men is bearing fruit fast.

True to the interests that nominated my opponent, he supported those interests at the last session and is expected to at the next. I will be glad to debate the issues with him in Medford and Winchester any time in November he may select by notifying me by Oct. 29.

WHITFIELD L. TUCK.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

BOWLING BEGINS.

Twelve Teams out for Honors at the Calumet Club.

The Winter Bowling Tournament at the Calumet Club will begin on Tuesday evening with an entry of twelve teams. The Boston pin, which is very popular among the bowlers at the club, will be used. Twelve games a week will be rolled until Jan. 11th, when the series will end, and the matches promise to be interesting from the start.

Several very strong teams have been made up. The scratch team will be the club's Boston Pin League team, Team No. 1, and it will have to the limit team a handicap of 63 pins a string, making 189 pins to the total. Some of the lower rated teams are expected to develop considerable strength as the games progress, and will probably make the higher teams hustle to beat them. Team No. 9, captained by B. F. Blank, and composed almost entirely of new members in the club, will probably prove a strong proposition, while teams 8, 6 and 2 are also very fast. The Tigers (team 5) are again in the race, they being the oldest and best known of the house teams. While they are rated higher than many of the teams, they will doutless all roll over it.

The composition of the teams and the ratings are as follows:

THE SCHOOLS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I have read very carefully Mr. R. C. Metcalf's article on the schools of this town in last week's issue of the STAR. With the exception of the salaries question, it expresses my opinions exactly and in much better form than I could possibly do it. His treatment of teachers' wages is shop talk. The schools run about 40 weeks in a year and only 5 days in a week. Deducting the Saturdays and holidays, about 7 weeks, we find that the teachers work about 33 weeks in the year, while bookkeepers and other brain workers work about 50 weeks in the year. I commend the reading of Mr. Metcalf's article several times by those interested in the public schools. It proves that many parents are bringing up their children very foolishly and in a way to make them poor citizens hereafter; that the High school is not worth what it costs and that the scholars get only superficial and smattering knowledge, and that there is inefficiency, is proved by the large amount of outside tutoring.

But still I have hopes. We are not as badly off as when under an other administration: the committee were kindergarten crazy and used political methods to carry their points in town meetings.

HENRY F. JOHNSON.

THE REAL OBJECT.

Municipal ownership here in our own country is a thing which is being advocated unblushingly with but one object in view. It is not urged, because it cannot be urged as a safe, economical and desirable thing. It has for its object the crushing of the corporations engaged in that industry, nothing beyond that. It is the stock in trade of the political adventurerers whose fortunes lie with the ascendency of socialism or the success of any other propaganda of destructiveness which promises soonest a chaos of ruin wherein they may, like the wreckers who moved the harbor lights to the shoal and reef, salvage what is cast ashore.—[Editorial in the Jersey City Journal.

Massachusetts is a state proud of its dignity of administration, proud of its traditions and careful of the character of its legislation. Regardless of party affiliations there is in the heart of every man that conscientious pride in his state which makes him feel drawn to the men who can best exemplify these traditions which are so dear. With these feelings there cannot possibly be any doubt in the minds of thinking men where their support should be placed this year. All other issues seem to dwindle into insignificance by the side of this one which demands that every good citizen should uphold the honor and dignity of the state administration by making it impossible for political radicalism, founded upon selfishness and nurtured by deceit, to gain a foothold in the affairs of Massachusetts.

The people of Massachusetts do not want Hearstism in the affairs of state. It was William R. Hearst, who referred to the late President McKinley as "a weak, incompetent, contemptible poltroon," and who spoke of "speeding bullets" to use on him. He aided in the assassination of the president insofar as any man could by incendiary utterance. Do the people of Massachusetts want Hearstism in the management of state affairs or do they want able, sound and dignified Republican administration.

Many men give lavishly of gold,

If you want everlasting fame, a benefactor be,

Hanged and Tarred.

An English custom of not so long ago was to hang smugglers on gibbets arranged along the coasts and then tar the bodies that they might be preserved a long while as a warning to other culprits. As late as 1822 three men thus varnished could have been seen hanging before Dover castle. Sometimes the process was extended to robbers, assassins, incendiaries and other criminals. John Painter, who fired the dockyard at Portsmouth, was first hanged and then tarred in 1776. From time to time he was given a fresh coat of varnish and thus was made to last nearly fourteen years. The weird custom did not stop smuggling or other crime, but no doubt it worked some influence as a preventive.

"Touching Wood."

Can any reader explain the origin of touching wood after boasting of one's exemption from ill fortune?—a species of absit omen practised in Shropshire and Cheshire and probably in many other parts of England. The procedure is of this kind. "I'm thankful to say I never broke a bone or even had a bad sprain in my life—well, I'd better touch wood," and a chair or table or anything near that is wooden is touched. Can the custom come from some lingering memory of the veneration attached to relics of the true cross?—London Notes and Queries.

Touching a Button.

Wife—I've just been reading an article on electricity, John, and it appears that before long we shall be able to get pretty well everything we want by just touching a button. Husband—You'd never be able to get anything that way. Wife—Why not, John? Husband—Because nothing on earth would ever make you touch a button. Look at my shirt!

Old Time Floggings.

An act of the time of Queen Elizabeth ordained that vagrants were to be "stripped from the middle upward and whipped till the body is bloody." Fourpence each was the recognized charge made by the "whipman" for every male and female vagrant who passed through his hands, but on special occasions this sum was exceeded. Says the constable's account of Great Staughton, Huntingdonshire: "May, 1691.—Paid in charges taking up a distracted woman, watching her and whipping her next day, 8 shillings 6 pence." After whipping people according to the statute the authorities sometimes gave them a letter recommending constables and others "to be as charitable as the law permits."

Slight Mistake.

"Waiter, what does this mean? Twenty-five francs for two hard boiled eggs?"

"Very sorry, sir. Slight mistake, sir. I've given you the bill intended for the American at the next table."—Pele Mele.

TOWN MEETING.

Station and report to some future meeting.

The Committee as appointed, consisted of John Challis, N. H. Taylor, C. J. Allen, James J. Fitzgerald and F. E. Hovey. It organized by electing John Challis, Chairman and C. J. Allen Clerk.

The committee has held several meetings, has carefully examined the Centra Engine House, has investigated various locations available for a new House, and obtained the purchase price of each. It has ascertained the expense of erecting and suitably equipping a new Engine House and respectfully submits the following report.

THE PRESENT ENGINE HOUSE.

The fact that the present Engine House is near the center of the town is all that can be said in its favor. Its sewage is discharged into a cesspool that frequently overflows into the base ment.

There being no hay loft, hay and grain have to be stored in the basement. The underpinning is weak and giving away. The sills are decaying and allowing the building to settle. The roof leaks, the gutters are rotting away and the paint is fast disappearing. The odor from the horse-stalls, renders the sleeping rooms above undesirable, to say the least. The pipes from the stalls are so nearly level that they frequently block and overflow. The bath tub has no trap. In a word the present building is inconvenient, unsafe and unsanitary, and the need for a new one is so urgent, that very little money should be expended upon the present structure.

COST OF A NEW ENGINE HOUSE.

A four door brick building with stone trimmings, that in the opinion of the Board of Fire Engineers, will meet the needs of the town for many years, can be erected for $20,000. It will cost about $1,200 to transfer the wires and install a new switch board. A new Chemical Engine, rubber tired and equipped for work can be bought for about $2 150. The latter, if purchased, will require three extra horses, and two extra men.

AVAILABLE LOCATIONS.

If the present streets are not disturbed, there are at least four available locations for a new building, either of which will meet all requirements. The prices asked for these lots range from $1,500 to $12,000.

CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS.

The committee has carefully considered the matter and believes the town shou'd, in the near future, build and equip a Central Engine House, but in view of the uncertainty regarding the abolition of the grade crossing at the center; and as any change in street location or present grade would affect nearly all of the available sites, it feels that no definite action should be taken by the town until after the Commission has reached its conclusion, when further steps should be immediately taken.

The Committee finds that for about $500 the present house can, for a time, be made safe and sanitary and recommends that this sum be appropriated for that purpose.

C. J. ALLEN,
JAMES J. FITZGERALD,
NATHAN H. TAYLOR,
FREELAND E. HOVEY.

At the conulusion of the reading of the report Engineer Symmes offered the following motion which was carried:

Moved, That the report of the committee be accepted and placed on fill and the committee continued for the purpose of securing an option, in behalf of the town, upon such parcel or parcels of land as in the opinion of the committee will be most suitable for a central fire station, to secure a plan or plans for said station and to report to the town their action for its approval at a future town meeting.

$500 FOR OLD ENGINE HOUSE.

Mr. John Challis offered the following motion which was carried:

Moved, That the Fire Engineers, be and hereby are authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $500 in plumbing and repairing the Central Fire Station and for this purpose the sum of $500 be transferred from the corporation tax.

THE MOTH PESTS.

Tree Warden Guild gave in detail the moth work done by him since the last meeting and asked for $1750 to be used between now and the first of next March.

Mr. Henry F. Johnson criticized the work done by the town men on his trees last winter, and claimed that conditions at his place were now worse than a year ago. He intimated that the men left nests purposely so that they would be sure of continued work.

Mr. Marcus B. May, Mr. Lewis Parkhurst and Mr. Preston Pond sustained the work done the past year by the Tree Warden, and that the town was fortunate in having his services.

Mr James H. Winn did not believe in the winter work of creosoting the nests, but that spraying in the spring was more efficacious and less expensive.

Mr. Allen Chamberlain was a firm believer in spraying, but said that on account of the limited time in which this work could be done that it would be utterly impossible to procure enough machines to do even a small part of the work. He favored fighting the moth at every stage.

Dr. C. J. Allen told how his trees had been cleaned by private parties and favorably passed upon by the Tree Department, nevertheless the town men came onto his place, went over his trees again and charged him for it, thus he was obliged no pay twice.

The motion appropriating $7,750 for tree pests was then passed.

SEWER BOARD ABOLISHED.

Mr. John H. Carter offered a motion that the town accept the act to abolish the Board of Sewer Commissioners of Winchester. Without debate the act was accepted and ignominiously the Board passed out of existence.

SELECTMEN TO HAVE CHARGE OF TOWN STABLE.

On motion of Selectmen Woods, it was voted to place in charge of the Board of Selectmen the care and management of the town stable and yard and all buildings thereon.

REFUSED TO SELL.

The meeting refused to sell the Hill school lot situated at the junction of High and Ridge streets. Years ago the town paid $50 for the land and a would-be purchaser now offered the same amount for it. The lot is a small one.

COLLECTOR'S FEES.

Owing to the fact that no one spoke in favor, the article, "To see if the Town will increase the compensation of the tax collector for the current year, by repaying to him to an amount not exceeding $400, the fees to be accounted for and paid by him to the town for the current year," was indefinitely postponed.

Mr. J. H. Carter said the matter could come up at the annual meeting, when it could be adjusted by the Appropriations Committee.

BONDS TO BE DESTOYED.

It was voted to destroy nine certain bonds raised in 1903 for the purpose of rebuilding the bridge on Bacon street, but which were never sold or issued.

This being the last article in the warrant, the meeting dissolved shortly before 10 o'clock.

SHOULD BE STOPPED.

Two boys, almost young men in years, were caught in the act of breaking windows in the Whitney buildings last week. Stones were deliberately thrown at the windows in broad day light, breaking glass and almost injuring workmen inside the building. These boys attend a Winchester school and are members of highly respected families. What should be done with such boys is a question. A court decision against them is establishing a bad record for the boys, and yet how can such vandalism be stopped unless the courts are appealed to. The owner of the building has left the matter, for the present, in the hands of the Chief of Police and the Superintendent of Schools to do as they think best for the good of the boys as well as the community. The proof of guilt was so plain that Chief McIntosh had no difficulty in identifying the culprits who plead guilty to his accusation. There is altogether too much of such destructive rowdyism going on in all parts of Winchester and the best way to stop it is a serious question for parents and teachers to decide.

All the good qualities of Ely's Cream Balm, solid, are found in Liquid Cream Balm, which is intended for use in atomizers. That it is an unfailing cure for Nasal Catarrh is proved by an ever-increasing mass of testimony. It does not dry out nor rasp the tender air-passages. It allays the inflammation and goes straight to the root of the disease. Obstinate old cases have been cured in a few weeks. All druggists, 75c, including spraying tube, or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren street, New York.

The one issue in the state campaign seems to be "Mr. Moran," or Guild and Draper, the men who carry on the affairs of state with dignity and high purpose, on a level with the ideals which have always been so dear to the Massachusetts heart. In that event there should be no question of how any Republican or any thoughful citizen whatever his party affiliations may have been, is to vote.

The Better Way

The tissues of the throat are inflamed and irritated; you cough, and there is more irritation—more coughing. You take a cough mixture and it eases the irritation—for a while. You take and it cures the cold. That's what is necessary. It soothes the throat because it reduces the irritation; cures the cold because it drives out the inflammation; builds up the weakened tissues because it nourishes them back to their natural strength. That's how Scott's Emulsion deals with a sore throat, a cough, a cold, or bronchitis.

Endorse Faithful Work.

It is quite as much the duty of a Republican to reward good service of the representatives of that party as to denounce the shortcomings of the opposition. For this reason it should be felt to be the duty of every Repuclican to endorse the service of its able leaders, Governor Guild and Lieutenant Governor Draper during the past year. What reasonable excuse can a Republican have for withholding a a vote from them when thousands of Democsats are to give endorsement to their administration and their dignity of management of the state? The one issue which seems to be paramount in this very peculiar campaign this year is that of the safety of the state administration. It must be kept out of the hands of those who seek it for selfish aggrandizement, and who would prostitute it to their own personal ends, who would rob it of its dignity and make the office of governor a travesty

The people of Massachusetts do not want the highest office in the commonwealth to be made the bob on the kite of the presidential boom of that alien to our state, William R. Hearst of New York. We are able to select our own state officials without assistance from any such source. Let the votes be cast with a regard for the interest of our own people and not for the self exaltation of any such man as him of whom we speak.

Massachusetts is a Republican state, and is jealous of its fair name in state affairs. Let the good service for all the people which has been rendered by Guild and Draper be rewarded by the members of their own party, as they are certain to be endorsed by so many thinking and conservative men of the Democaatic party.

DEATHS BY ACCIDENT.

Between July 1st and August 31st, 1906, a leading life insurance company paid claims on the lives of:

34 POLICYHOLDERS WHO DIED OF TYPHOID FEVER
24 POLICYHOLDERS WHO DIED OF PNEUMONIA
85 POLICYHOLDERS WHO DIED BY ACCIDENT

In other words, fifty-eight policyholders died in eight weeks from typhoid fever and pneumonia. But in the same eight weeks EIGHTY-FIVE policyholders were killed in all sorts of accidents, and the Company paid claims under their policies amounting to $174.982.

Total	85

Look at that list. The differing circumstances do not stand out as startlingly as they would if you could peruse the death papers in each case. You would then understand and have impressed upon you most vividly the chances there are for fatal accidents in most innocent and unexpected places. A man is killed in bed in a hotel by an explosion in the street. You'd think a person pretty safe in bed on the sixth floor of a hotel, would'nt you? A gentleman gets out of his automobile by the roadside at night, his lights are extinguished, a second machine dashes into him out of the darkness, and he is killed. Can people guard against these and similar accidents? Yes, and no. The automobilist might give up his car. The traveler might stay at home. But will they? Even then would they be safe? No, we must come and go and take life as we find it. People have to incur risks of some sort at every turn, and the risks apparently increase as time goes on. This is a rushing, roaring world, full of danger, and getting more hazardous every day, out of one hundred thousand so many people are going to be killed, so many injured, and the list will include both the careful and the careless. One of them may be you.

You can't help yourself against the accident, but you can avert the financial consequences, both to yourself and family with a "Travelers" Accident Policy. The policy with an ACCUMULATION, covering accidental death and dismemberment, $10,000 (maximum), $15.00 per year.

In what way can you get so much protection for so little cost.

HALLOWE'EN CARNIVAL

Will be held in the Town Hall, Winchester, the afternoon and evening of November 1 and 2, 1906, under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary, Y. M. C. A. There will be for sale many useful and fancy articles, dolls, candy, ice cream and cake. Beautiful Hallowe'en decorations! A "Gift table." "Ye old Town pump!" Pop corn booth in charge of ghosts. Gypsy tent where you can have lots of good things told you. Then the supper Thursday evening, 6 to 8 o'clock. There will be all kinds of good things. Only 25 cents. The entertainment Friday evening will consist of the Weber Quartette, Miss Sanborn reader and a sketch from "Down in Maine" given by Mr. Charles J. Harold with the Stoneham High School class '07, and Sanford Ames. Tickets 25 and 35 cents.

Certainly this needs no comment.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The first Shakespearean production of the present season at the Castle Square will be "Julius Caesar." It will be staged with all the elaborateness of scenery and attention to artistic detail that characterized its presentation at this house last season, and it will be acted by a splendid cast of players selected from the membership of the Castle Square Stock Company. It is unnecessary to enlarge upon the dramatic power of "Julius Caesar" one of the greatest of historical tragedies ever written, it has had associated with it the names of many celebrated actors including Booth, Barrett, Beerbohm Tree, and many others.

The scenery at the Castle Square will be especially designed by Frank Chouteau Brown, and the cast will include Howell Hansel, Charles Miller, Ben Johnson, John Waldron and Miss Thais Lawton.

RUMMAGE SALES.

The Old People's Home rummage sale will be held in the Town Hall on Nov. 9 and 10. Both the large and small halls have been engaged for the sale. All the streets in town have been divided among the directors, who have appointed their committees to collect articles for the sale from each resident, and collection is now being made. This promises to be the biggest and best rummage sale ever held in Winchester, and all residents are urged to save apart all articles which they feel they can contribute, in order to carry it to a successful completion.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The great Objector was much in evidence at the town meeting and undoubtedly enjoyed himself, but realy he ought to refresh his memory on parliamentary proceedings and not be so continually "out of order." His point that the layout report of the Selectmen should be made was taken, but his lecture upon undignified proceedings was "a peach."

Unless there is a miracle performed it looks as if no water of the Lebanon street spring would gush from the rock this year although real progress has been made by delivering the raw boulder upon the grounds finally.

How much of the stuff talked and printed in political campaigns is believed the morning after? If any country or government is wrecked it is done by the people and isolated candidates here and there cannot disturb it. The people in this country are not disturbed if the office holders and those who want to be are.

The report of the special committee on the condition of the old engine house made it look as if we had not done our duty about it in the past. Sanitary conditions in all kinds of occupied houses are of the first importance.

W. H. S. NOTES.

The practice for the class basket ball teams began last Monday. This year, the class games will be played before the school team's season begins, and Capt. Webber will pick the players for the High school squad according to the showing they make in the class games. From this squad eventually the regular team will be chosen. The classes have elected the following captains: 1907, Harold Webber; 1908, Charles Thompson; 1909 Arthur Cameron; and 1910, Ernest Seeley. The seniors have four of last year's championship class team, the juniors, five, and freshmen, the same, of their teams of last year.

At a meeting of the class of 1908, Tuesday, it was voted to draw up a new constitution, the old one being judged insufficient for the needs of the class. The following committee was appointed by the president: Charles Thompson, chairman, Pauline Corey and Harold Cumings.

The Winchester High school foot ball team which was defeated by Bellows Falls High school of Vermont, 43 to 0, does not come from this High school but that of Winchester, Vermont.

CHESTER W. KNOX.

The following is copied from the Boulder, Col. Daily Camera of Oct 13th, omitting the sentences about birth, education, occupation, marriage and death of child, all of which were given in last week's Winchester STAR:

C. W. KNOX IS DEAD.

Energetic young Boulder business man dies after a brief illness at elegant Boulder home.

Chester W. Knox died at two o'clock this morning and few events in the life of Boulder this year have caused more general feeling of regret. While East on a business mission Mr. Knox contracted typhoid pneumonia, which sent him to his bed on his arrival home three weeks ago. So exhausted was his vitality that the young business man lacked the rallying power, ever after normal temperature had been restored. He was but 24 years old and had already established a name for himself that was prophetic of a brilliant business future. He owned a delightful home on Mapleton avenue, purchased last spring from C. B. Culbertson, had a young and beautiful wife, had fortune within his grasp, and yet was cut down in the midst of all these surroundings suggestive of a long and useful and happy life. At his bedside were his wife, her father, Frank L. Bradway of South Framingham, Mass., and his business partner, Mr. George W. Mabie of New York City. His married life was all spent in Boulder. During his residence here Mr. Knox took time from his business duties to train a fine chorus for the M. E. Church, donating his salary to the church funds every month, and in other ways showing his devotion to the society. He was a Boulder booster and a bright young business man who can be illy spared.

The funeral will be from his residence at 3 p. m. next Monday and the interment at South Framingham, Mass.

TO FORM A NEW IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION.

An informal meeting of a number of members of the Winchester Handicraft Society and of other citizens who are specially interested in matters of town improvement, was held at the house of Mr. Edwin Ginn Tuesday evening, Oct. 23. This gathering was a direct outcome of the interest Mr. Ginn has come to take in the work of this latest of the Winchester societies which have looked to betterment along aesthetic lines.

The net result of the conference was the appointment of a committee consisting of Mr. H. D. Murphy, Rev. J. W. Suter and Robert Coit, with power to add to their membership, to consult with the recently formed merchants' association and other local organizations, and to consider ways and means of assisting the work of the Handicraft Society by allying it with a broader movement for town improvement. It was the general sentiment that it may be possible to effect an organization, with low annual dues and large membership, embracing a number of groups of persons interested in various phases of local betterment. The Handicraft Society would thus continue the work upon which it has started, while the other allied groups would look after such matters as the appearance of parks and streets, the regulations under which houses are built, popular evening lecture courses, musical entertainments and the like. The committee, which has already added to its membership the names of Hayes Robbins and Frederick W. Coburn, will, after investigation and consultation, call a meeting of persons interested in the project.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. Ginn who stated that the need of helping along such a movement as that inaugurated by the Handicraft Society last spring was already apparent and that there were many other things which ought to be done in order that Winchester may continue to attract a desirable class of new residents and that the children of all classes of citizens may grow up in the midst of the most favorable possible environment. He called upon Mr. Murphy, president of the Winchester Handicraft Society, for a statement of what the association formed last January is trying to do and of the nature of the support it should receive from the community at large.

Mr. Murphy spoke at some length of the aim of the Society, its accomplishments up to date, and particularly of the opportunity that is offered through possession of the building on Pleasant street which Mr. D. N. Skillings has kindly put at the disposal of the Society for broadening the work that has been auspiciously begun. There should be, he thought, art exhibitions, lectures, musical entertainments of a high grade and other features which would bring people together, and many things still further to improve the appearance of the town might well be attempted.

In this sentiment Mr. Suter concurred absolutely, saying that whatever would promote local unity would command his hearty support, and that he only wondered whether a society which seemed naturally by its pursuits to consist of a small and even exclusive group could undertake to develop into a general improvement association.

Superintendent of Schools Metcalf followed with a statement of belief that there is still room in this town for awakening along aesthetic lines and that one of the evidences of the need of strengthening the work of the Handicraft Society appeared in the fact that, excellent as its aims are, he had had knowledge of hardly anything more than its existence. He strongly favored any movement that would supplement the training already given in the schools in art appreciation.

The discussion then became general, and after several had spoken, a motion was made that Mr. Ginn appoint a committee with powers as above stated.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The World's Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union closed its sessions Saturday evening. All through day and evenings of Thursday, Friday and Saturday the Temple was thronged with women and a good sprinkling of men eager to learn what they could ot the doings of the W. C. T. U. in the many countries represented there. The work is classified in five divisions: Preventive, Educational, Evangelistic, Social and Legal. The foundation department being organization. Under these divisions are grouped the various departments each in charge of a superintendent.

Following the convention was a School of Methods held in Lorimer Hall. The different superintendents present spoke for their respective departments presenting their needs. During the sessions of the convention many pleas were presented by delegates from India, Japan, China and other lands for more temperance missionaries to be sent. Monday, hearts were gladdened by the announcement that Mrs. Martin of New York would meet the expense of preparing and sending three such missionaries. Monday afternoon, two trips were arranged, one to Wellsley College for the Ys, the other to the Navy Yard under the guidance ot Mrs. Thacher, World's superintendent ot work among the soldiers. The writer accompanied the latter party. We went on board the battleship Rhode Island and the Receiving ship Wabash. We were shown all over the R. I. and taken to the Wabash by the Chaplain. He expressed regret that more Chaplains were not provided there being but twenty-four for the 40,000 men in the Navy and Marine Corps.

Among the boys on the Receiving ship we met a Winchester boy Winchester W. C. T. U. has from time to time contributed something to the sailors work. Many comfort bags and books.

"SHAKESPEARE."

The school children ot Greater Boston are expectantly awaiting the arrival ot next Monday afternoon, when they are to see at the Castle Square Theatre a performance of Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" arranged especially for their benefit. Following the system inaugurated last season, the management ot the Castle Square, has arranged with the Twentieth Century Club whereby the educational committee of that organization should offer to pupils and teachers of the High schools and academies of Boston and vicinity a season of five classic plays beginning next Monday and continuing at intervals of a few weeks through the winter. Circulars were sent out and within a few days the entire house was taken for the series of five performances.

The Castle Square will therefore be closed to the general public on Monday afternoon, but it will contain an audience that will fill every seat with an appreciative group of happy boys and girls. The many who were disapointed in their endeavors to secure seats for this special Monday afternoon performance will however, be able to purchase tickets for one of the other afternoons or evenings for "Julius Caesar" will be repeated throughout the entire week.

Later, the school children will see at the Castle Square "The Rivals" of Sheridan and "The Merchant of Venice," "As You Like It" and "Twelfth Night" of Shakespeare.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

October 23rd, 1906.

Board met at 7.45 p. m.

Present Messrs. Woods, Beggs, Rowe and Richards.

Records read and approved.

A conference was held at 8 o'clock with representatives of the Boston & Northern Street Railway Co., the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., and the Edison Electric Illuminating Co., in regard to consolidation of pole lines on Pleasant street; present, H. D. Stebbins of the Telephone Company, G. W Palmer, James O. Ellis and W. E. Keating of the Boston & Northern Company, and W. H. Lott of the Edison Company, and the Selectmen: matter was discussed at some length, and the companies urged to get together and come to an agreement as soon as possible.

Voted that the Supt. of Streets be authorized to let the steam roller and the stone crushing plant, to H. A. Spates for not more than three days when not in use by the town, the compensation therefor to be at the usual rate.

Received communication from F. L. Homer in regard to condition of the sidewalk at the southeast corner of Winthrop and Washington streets; replied that the Board had already ordered a curbing to be placed there, and as soon as said stone was received the trouble would be remedied.

Received from W. W. Rowe check for $5.50 as his share of concrete sidewalk on Myrtle terrace.

Warrants drawn for $960.09 and $1090.39.

Adjourned at 11.25 p. m.

BOSTON LETTER.

Moran's Record Shows That He Has Not Made Good.

JUST A RECORD OF FAILURE.

Unfulfilled Promises Mark His Career as District Attorney.

The state campaign is now at its height, and both candidates for governor are on the stump. John B. Moran claims that on his record as district attorney of Suffolk county he has a right to ask to be chosen governor, but his own party leaders declare him to have made a decidedly poor record, and assert that he is an unfit man to occupy the gubernatorial chair.

Evidently what the people at large want to know is what Mr. Moran has done. They wish to see certain abuses corrected and they are asking themselves whether Moran is the man to correct them.

There is a little verse current which hits off what Boston thinks of Moran:

"Count that day lost whose low descending sun
Sees by Moran no new crusade begun;
Count that day gained wherein the self-same sun
Sees something that John B. has really done."

The Sum Total Here.

The sum of Mr. Moran's performance is contained in his conviction of Proctor and Borges—both cases which in the ordinary course of events might have come before the courts—the indictment of two jurors in the Crocker will case, and the discharge of the inmates of the Massachusetts Home for Intemperate Women.

The indictment of the two jurors is a very different thing from a conviction, and there is good reason to believe that the two jurors in the Crocker will case will not be convicted, the only witness having now disapeared.

The Massachusetts Home for Intemperate Women is a private charitable institution, to which the court commits, with the consent of their relatives, intemperate women. The district attorney ordered the summary discharge of these poor women, several of whom were almost immediately found again, drunk in the streets.

Many inquiries into the action of public bodies and many prosecutions have been threatened by the district attorney during the 10 months of his incumbency. It may be well to review briefly these various actions and see what has come of them.

The Record as It Stands.

1. Proceedings were instituted against the Hotel Touraine and most of the leading hotels of Boston, either for violation of their liquor license or for the maintenance of screens.

In the case of the Touraine, the legislature, with the concurrence of the representatives of the temperance people, passed an act correcting a technical violation of the law by the Touraine.

In the cases of illegal screens, the only hotel which tested the matter in the courts was the Hotel Essex, and the Hotel Essex won.

It is to be noted that no action was taken by the district attorney against ordinary barrooms which maintained screens in violation of the law.

2. The inquiry into the corruption of the legislature has never gone any further in spite of Gethro's alleged confession. The district attorney has never substantiated his and Lawson's allegations of bribery. It is not unreasonable to suppose that if anything substantial had materialized the matter would not have been allowed to drop.

3. Grave charges of misappropriation of public moneys were first made more than a year ago by the Good Government association in the case of the Fenway contracts. The matter was carefully investigated by United States District Attorney Asa P. French, who discovered many interesting facts which were placed at the disposal of the district attorney. Mr. Moran has never used the evidence submitted to him and no public action has been taken.

4. In the Chelsea aldermanic charges the indictment was badly drawn, through the fault of the district attorney's office, and failed.

5. In the case of the ice dealers, 17 dealers were indicted, charged with conspiracy to fix the price of ice, but the case has never been tried.

6. In the Normal school case, investigation showed that the foundations of the Normal school were much stronger than the contract requirements.

7. In the Provident Securities and Banking case, the governor acted without the assistance of the district attorney.

8. In he matter of the dealers who used short weights, nothing has been done.

9. Mr. Moran introduced into the legislature a bill for the better detection of illegal operations, but the bill was so loosely drawn and so faulty that it was immediately rejected by the House.

A List of Broken Pledges.

Mr. Moran promised to investigate the actions of the city officials of Boston in various cases.

He promised to investigate the allegations of aldermanic bribery in the dock trust case. No public action has thus far been taken.

He promised to investigate the alleged pay-roll frauds at city hall. No public action thus far.

He promised to investigate the Fenway graft cases. No public action thus far.

He promised to investigate the deal by which Charles M. Draper resigned the chairmanship of the board of aldermen in favor of Alderman Cauley. No public action has been taken.

There were besides charges made against Mayor Fitzgerald by Congressman McNary; and charges that Mayor Fitzgerald, through a weekly paper controlled by him, was coercing city employes.

Mayor Fitzgerald has never been indicted. The mayor's paper supports Moran. The mayor presides at the opening Moran meeting in Faneuil hall. Every man may make his own deductions from these facts.

Mr. Moran promised in his campaign for district attorney to put Thomas W. Lawson and H. H. Rogers in prison for perjury alleged to have been committed in the gas trials. Rogers and Lawson are still at large. Lawson is an ardent supporter of Moran.

How Moran Is Regarded.

If Mr. Moran were the man he paints himself to be, he would deserve the support of all honest people, but one cannot find a reputable man who knows the conditions at the court house who believes Mr. Moran is honest in his pretensions.

A careful consideration of his record and an analysis of the reasons behind his actions cannot fail to lead an impartial observer to believe that the office of district attorney has not been conducted for the benefit of the people.

The last grand jury was discharged because Mr. Moran was on the stump. And yet there are still many cases which Mr. Moran has promised to bring before them.

This is characteristic of Mr. Moran's general attitude toward the duties of his office.

It is easy to make promises. With a little cleverness it is not difficult to advertise ones-self. And if one cares not for the opinion of reputable men it requires no courage to "dare."

Most men "dare" not affront the judgment of posterity and the dictates of honor. Evidently Mr. Moran cares nothing for these as long as he is successful at the polls.

THE EYEBROWS.

Some Superstitions and Odd Beliefs Concerning Them.

Notwithstanding their inconspicuousness, the eyebrows have been the center of a certain amount of lore and even superstition. But the chief point at which superstition or folklore is found in this conection is in those cases, not infrequent, where the eyebrows meet. Everywhere this meeting of the brows has been held to be ominous in one way or another.

In some of our southern counties folks say that it is good to have such brows, for the possessor will never have trouble; but this is a rare interpretation. As a rule, the meeting brows are held to be of evil omen. Readers of Charles Kingsley's "Two Years Ago" will remember Mrs. Harvey's face, which had been handsome and was still clever; "but the eyebrows," continues Kingsley, "crushed together downward above her nose and, rising high at the outer corners, indicated as surely as the restless down drop eye a character self conscious, furtive, capable of great inconsistencies, possibly of great deceits."

In the Icelandic sagas a man with meeting eyebrows is said to be one of the dreadful creatures known as were-wolves, and the same belief has been traced in Denmark and Germany; while in Greece, says Mr. Baring Gould, they are a sign that a man is a vampire. In horror there is little to choose between vampires and were-wolves. A fanciful reason which has been given for these superstitions is that the meeting brows resemble a butterfly, "the familiar type of a soul ready to fly off and enter some other body." This seems tolerably far fetched.

In Hungary gypsy women and men whose eyebrows grow together are supposed to have in special degree the power to enchantment, and as illiterate folk have a great dread of such mysterious powers, especially as they may be supposed to be directed against the well being or happiness of their children, it need hardly be said that a man whose brows meet is not a popular person. Even now there are parts of England where a belief in witchcraft still lingers, and not so very long ago in Northumberland there were people who regarded a person whose eyebrows met as a witch or warlock.

In the north of Aberdeenshire, according to the late Rev. Walter Gregor, who was a very competent authority on Scottish lore and customs, a "close-brot man"—that is, one whose eyebrows meet—was regarded as being immoral. Elsewhere in Scotland one with "close broos" was regarded as unlucky to be met as "first fit," while other folk went a good deal further and regarded the unlucky possessor of "close broos" as one foredoomed to be hanged.—London Globe.

An Inch or So Below.

"It's funny," began the long winded bore, "but nobody ever seems glad to see me."

"Well, and have you never found out the cause of your unpopularity?"

"No, I can't discover it."

"That's strange, because it's right under your very nose."—Philadelphia Press.

A Contingency.

"Haven't I a right to do as I like with my money?" inquired the multi-millionaire.

"You have," answered the sardonic person, "if your lawyer is smart enough to draw up a will that can't be contested."—Washington Star.

CAUCASIAN AND NEGRO.

They Are Fundamentally Opposite Extremes In Evolution.

The Caucasian has the subjective faculties well developed; the negro the objective. The Caucasian, and more particularly the Anglo-Saxon, is dominant and domineering and possessed primarily with determination, will power, self control, self government and all the attributes of the subjective self, with a high development of the ethical and aesthetic faculties and great reasoning powers. The negro is in direct contrast by reason of a certain lack of these powers, and a great development of the objective qualities. The negro is primarily affectionate, immensely emotional, then sensual, and, under provocation, passionate. There is love of outward show, of ostentation, of approbation. He loves melody and a rude kind of poetry and sonorous language. There is undeveloped artistic power and taste—negroes make good artisans and handicraftsmen. They are deficient in judgment, in the formation of new ideas from existing facts, in devising hypotheses and in making deductions in general. They are imitative rather than original, inventive or constructive. There is instability of character incident to lack of self control, especially in connection with the sexual relation, and there is a lack of orientation or recognition of position and condition of self and environment, evidenced in various ways, but by a peculiar "bumptiousness," so called by Professor Blackshear of Texas, this is particularly noticeable.

The white and the black races are antipodal, then, in cardinal points. The one has a large frontal region of the brain, the other a larger region behind; the one is subjective, the other objective; the one a great reasoner, the other pre-eminently emotional; the one domineering, but having great self control, the other meek and submissive, but violent and lacking self control when the passions are aroused; the one a very advanced race, the other a very backward one. The Caucasian and the negro are fundamentally opposite extremes in evolution.—Robert Bennett Bean in Century

PLANT PECULIARITIES.

No plant will produce flowers unless there is iron in the soil in which it grows.

All plants are provided with flowers, though sometimes these are so small and so hidden as to escape notice.

The bleeding heart, according to an eastern legend, originated in the drops of blood which fell from Christ's side at the crucifixion.

Every flower that has a perfume at all secretes a volatile oil, the evaporation of which constitutes the peculiar odor characteristic of the blossom.

The smallest flower known to the botanist is said to be that of the yeast plant. It is microscopic in size and is said to be only one-hundredth of a millimeter in diameter.

According to the poetical idea of Catullus, the rose was once white, but blushed red and remained so out of shame for allowing its thorns to inflict a wound on the feet of Venus.

A Turkish Story.

The Turk, as a rule, is not energetic, but he is capable of sudden bursts of activity. A writer in Cassell's Family Magazine gives an illustration:

He was going home late one night in Constantinople when a man ran by him, pursued by four zaptiehs. Directly they caught the man they belabored him vigorously with the butt ends of their guns. The Englishman interfered.

"If he is a thief, why not take him to prison and let him be tried properly? Don't half kill the man without a trial."

"O effendi," said the spokesman of the party, "we don't mind his being a thief. We're only hitting him because of the trouble he gave us to run after him." And that is an offense which the average Turk never forgives.

The Catlike Fox.

The fox is an excellent mouser. He will lie and watch for a field mouse in the long grass like a cat, pounce upon it, kill it with a bite and lay it on one side until he has caught another and another, when, picking them all up, as many as he can carry in his mouth, he will canter away with them to serve them out to the cubs. This fact was confirmed by witnesses in Scotland who were examined by a committee of the board of agriculture when taking evidence on the occasion of the plague of field voles on the lowland sheep farms in 1903.—London Graphic.

Our Voices Deepen.

The primitive inhabitants of Europe were all tenors; their descendants of the present time are baritones, and future generations will have semibass voices. The voice has a tendency to deepen with age. The tenor of twenty becomes the baritone of twenty-eight and the bass of thirty-six. The inferior races have higher pitched voices than the more cultured. The negro has a higher voice than the white man. Among white races, the fair complexioned man has a higher voice than his darker skinned brother. The former is usually a baritone or a tenor, the latter a contralto or bass. It is asserted that tenors are usually of slender build, whereas basses are stout, but there are too many exceptions to such a rule for it to be reliable. The same remark applies to the statement that thoughtful men have deep toned voices and vice versa. The tones of a voice are perceptibly higher before food after a meal, for which reason teams are generally cared for first at noon after dinner.—Chicago Tribune.

Pay Premiums Promptly.

Those who carry life insurance policies should be careful to see that the premiums are promptly paid. Neglect in this important matter has caused policies to be forfeited. It is best to pay premiums a few days before they are due. On the final day the policy holder may forget it or be called away, as many things can happen to cause neglect of payment.—Nashville American.

Embarrassing Attentions.

"A dog," said meandering Mike, "is one o' the few animals dat'll foller a man."

Plodding Pete seemed to consider this statement for a moment, says the Washington Star, and then answered:

"That's so. One was following me yesterday so fast I could hardly keep ahead of him."

Blaming the Weather.

"This is awfully sticky weather."

"Do you find it so?"

"Yes. Bilkins stuck me for another five this morning."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE GOLDEN FLEECE.

Most Highly Prized of the Surviving Orders of Chivalry.

Of all the orders of mediaeval chivalry which have survived the shock of successive revolutions on the continent of Europe since the great cataclysm of 1789, that of the Golden Fleece is perhaps the most distinguished and the most highly coveted by personages of royal birth or of illustrious patrician lineage.

The badge of the order is the figure of a sheep in embossed gold suspended from a heavy chain of gold. The full robes consist of a long mantle of crimson velvet, cut in the fashion of a sacerdotal cope, richly embroidered at the borders with emblematic devices of stars, half moons and fleeces in gold and lined with white satin, over a doublet and hose of crimson damask. The full robes also comprise a "chaperon," or hood, with a long flowing streamer of black satin, but this headgear has in modern times been generally dispensed with.

Originally the robes of the order, which was founded in 1429 by Philip the Good, duke of Burgundy, were of crimson cloth lined with white lamb's wool, and this circumstance has somewhat strengthened the theory that the golden fleece was instituted by Philip the Good in grateful recognition of the immense treasures which the Duke of Burgundy had acquired from the wool of the flocks reared on his vast estates in Flanders. Be it as it may, the woolen costume was changed in 1473 at a chapter held at Valenciennes for the more costly materials of velvet, taffeta, damask and gold embroidery.—London Telegraph.

SINGULAR CUSTOMS.

Bulgarian Ceremonies That Come From Pagan Rites.

The people of Varna, on the coast of the Black sea, in Bulgaria, have a singular custom which they observe at the feast of the Epiphany, which takes place on Jan. 6. The clergy, both Greeks and Bulgarians, accompanied by an immense crowd, go to the seashore, carrying with them a wooden cross. The cross is thrown by the clergy into the sea, and thereupon the strongest swimmers jump in after it. The best swimmer gets it, of course, and brings it in triumph to shore.

The Varna people have a still more singular salt water custom on the same day. After dark at night all the newly married men in the town are conducted, with bands of music and singing, to the shore and made to take three successive plunges into the icy water. They are then conducted home, where their brides, accompanied by their relatives and friends, have been awaiting them in state. After this there is feasting and merry making. These singular customs are believed to have a Pagan origin.

One of the most interesting places in New York to study human nature is at a counter in a photographer's shop where the customers come to get amateur photographs they have had developed and printed. The anxiety they display to get the products of their "shots" would seem to be out of all proportion to the results, when you catch a glimpse of them, and their disappointment if the prints are not ready is almost as keen, apparently, as if some important business transaction had fallen through. And when they do get the prints their faces are even more interesting. The satisfaction of these amateur photographers over a set of fairly good pictures is absolutely idiotic, and their dismay at a lot of failures is tragic. The frankness of these exhibitions is not the least interesting phase of the whole thing.—New York Press.

Firing a Distress Signal.

When a ship does not carry a cannon or mortar with which she can fire distress signals, a metal socket on the bridge or poop rail is used for that purpose. Into the socket a detonating rocket is placed, and inside this is a firing tube. A lanyard is hooked on to the tube, and a man, by giving the lanyard a sharp jerk, explodes the rocket. It contains a high explosive and on leaving the rail gives a loud report and another on reaching its highest altitude. Both reports are as loud as the report of a twelve pounder cannon. The socket is slipped in the rail at an angle to prevent the rocket touching the rigging.

A Spoiled Sermon.

A clergyman was unexpectedly called upon to preach before the students of a well known college. He chose a sermon from his "barrel" and without reading it went to the college chapel. He got on splendidly until near the close, when he amazed the boys with his peroration, beginning, "And now a word in conclusion to you who are mothers."

Several Dialects.

McCall—What sort of hybrid creature is that new butler of yours? Nuritch—Why, how do you mean? McCall—I called to see you the other day, and when I asked him what time I might catch you at home he said, "At haff pawst tin, sah."—Philadelphia Press.

Quite Regular.

"The last time I saw Gayley he wasn't very—er—regular in his habits."

"Oh, he's very regular now."

"Well, well, I didn't think he'd ever reform."

"He hasn't. His habits are all bad now."—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE ARAB.

An Artist In Manners Is This Son of the Orient.

In all matters of sentiment the Arab's instinct is sure. If you can appeal to him on any ground of hospitality or generosity, says the author of "In the Desert," you have a hold on him.

It used to be the boast of Arab poetry in its best days that it "never praised a man except for what was in him," and the habit of judging directly and without regard to surroundings has always been an instinct of the race. All those evidences of worldly prosperity and success which turn the heart of the Anglo-Saxon to water leave the Arab unmoved.

The Arab is an artist in manners. I remember a certain sheik, who was once my traveling companion on the Upper Nile, a tall, lean, keen faced man, of a complexion almost black, with a glitter on it like the sun polish on desert stones, who walked among the fellahs on the crowded deck like a chief among his slaves.

With him I shared the same narrow corner of the deck. He was strict in his religious observances and at the appointed hours would spread his mat on the deck, turn in the supposed direction of Mecca and then kneel and rise and kneel again, bowing with his forehead to the ground in the imposing attitudes of Moslem prayer.

Quick at detecting the least sign of consideration or respect, if we stopped talking or moved to make room, he would treasure up the courtesy and when his prayers were over turn and acknowledge it with a grave gesture and a smile that seemed no conventional grimace, but expressed the intention of a deliberate friendliness.

PALISADES FORMATION.

Allied In Time and Type to Mount Holyoke and Cape Blomidon.

The complete height of the cliff was much higher, originally, for the glacier that buried North America down to this latitude eroded billions of tons which went to the upbuilding of Long Island, trap bowlders being common in the soil of Brooklyn, and I have found on the top of the Palisades opposite Spuyten Duyvil glacial groovings and polishings that have survived the presumptive 15,000 years since the glacier melted. The outpour of this mass from a volcano whose crater we cannot so much as guess in this day was tremendous, and it cut the Hudson and Hackensack valleys asunder and pushed the harbor several miles to the southward, while related activities thrust above the surface, either as downpours or uppours, the thousand miles of basaltic hills that chain the Carolinas to the Bay of Fundy, so that our Palisades are allied in form and time to Mount Holyoke and Cape Blomidon.

To the mineralogist our Palisades do not yield as much of interest as we find in the rotting trap of Paterson, a few miles away, from which have been taken the largest prehnites in the world, sea green and wonderful; royal amethysts, balls of silky pectolite and quartz pseudomorphs that copy them; but we find in these cliffs occasional duplicates of the columns that make the Giant's causeway and Fingal's cave—geometric shapes of three, four, five, six and more sides, not a result of crystallization, as was once imagined, for trap is a rock, not a mineral, but of lateral shrinking when it has cooled.—Charles M. Skinner in Century.

No Pure Gold In Use.

"Gold when refined from all impurities," said a jeweler, "and alloys of inferior metals is denominated pure. This means gold of twenty-four carats, and this is the standard recognized by the mint master and dealers in gold. As a matter of fact, however, there is no gold so pure. Gold of twenty-two carats is about as pure as it can be got. It has two parts of silver or one part of silver and one part of copper. The copper darkens the color of gold, while silver lightens it in color. Twenty-three carat gold is occasionally seen, which means a half carat of silver and of copper. Ordinarily eighteen carat gold is the best gold than can be had. Certainly it is the best for jewelry, for pure gold, as it is called, is too soft and will wear away much faster than the owners of it desire.

Stoves.

Stoves which concealed the fire were in use in Greek and Roman households. The ancients also employed open tubes of metal or earthenware and, in addition, heated their rooms with charcoal braziers. Grates for the burning of coal were employed two centuries ago in Great Britain. Many thousands of patents have been taken out upon stoves and ranges since Franklin and Count Rumford pointed out the waste of fuel and of heat involved in open fireplaces.

The Two Lady Motorists.

The two great motors were pulled up in front of one of the big dry goods stores. One lady was entering her machine; the other was getting out.

"Hello, Gladys! Out for a spin?"

"Yes; glad to see you."

"Just ran across your husband a block above."

"You did? How can I ever thank you enough?"—New York Press.

The Effect.

"Mathilde, throw that poor beggar a crown."

"Ah, yes, he looks very unhappy."

"Not on that account, but the Meyers are watching us from their window opposite."—Wiener Salonwitzblatt.

A house is never perfectly furnished for enjoyment unless there is a child in it rising three years old and a kitten rising six weeks.—Southey.

WHAT A REPUBLICAN LEGISLATURE HAS DONE FOR THE MAN WHO TOILS.

THESE MEASURES HAVE BEEN PASSED BY THE REPUBLICAN LEGISLATURE OF 1906, AND SIGNED BY GOV. GUILD.

The eight hour day has been given to men engaged on a contract in which the state or a county is a party.
The employers' liability act has been extended.
Truant officers have been given the power to enter mills and take children out who are employed in violation of the law.
The rapacity of unscrupulous money lenders who would prey upon the wage earner has been curbed by a new law regulating the assignment of wages.
The weekly payment system has been extended, being now well nigh universal.
Free employment bureaus to aid those out of work are to be established.
The educational qualification for minor workers has been raised, thus ensuring to them that education which is the foundation of success in life.
The state board of education is directed to establish an employment bureau for teachers.
The law relative to the support of wives and minor children has been extended and the penalty increased.
Call firemen may be pensioned by cities which desire to take this course.
There are to be more stringent inspections of steam boilers, so that greater safeguards may be thrown about the people working in buildings where boilers are used.
Foundries are now compelled to provide sanitary conveniences for the welfare of their employes.
Wage earners who are quarantined on account of contagious diseases are to be compensated.
Several important amendments to the savings banks laws, making the savings of the people safer have been enacted.

Mr. and Mrs. Anson Burton have been at Portland, Me., on a visit.

Manager Nowell of the Stoneham Telephone Exchange, has been transferred to the management of the Winchester Exchange and commenced his duties there. Since Mr. Nowell has been here he has become extremely popular, and we predict the people of Winchester will take to him, as he is a genial good fellow and a good base ball player and manager. — [Stoneham Enterprise] Arthur G. Ledwith, the late mananer of the exchange, has been promoted to a similar position in Brighton.

The milkmen in Woburn and Winchester recently held a meeting and decided to make seven cents the standard price per quart for the coming winter. A high as ten cents had been charged in Winchester, while in Woburn the price varied from six to seven cents. —[Reading Chronicle.] As far as we know the price has been raised here to eight cents.

After reading the interesting account in another column of the final settlement of the old contention regarding the proper flowage level of Mystic lake, the thought, "blessed are the peacemakers," comes to the mind, for the final settlement of such a long drawn out quarrel is a public as well as a private benefit. In times past no doubt the whole community took part one side or the other in this old dispute. Mr. Whitney should receive congratulations for his success in at last settling this old quarrel which dates from colonial times as the matter was only growing more and more confusing as time went on. It is good to get such breeders of bitter disputes and hard feelings out of the way.

Just why organized labor should exert all its power to defeat Lieut. Gov. Eben S. Draper is a mystery. A recent visit to Hopedale and an inspection of the large works by the writer showed contentment among the 3000 workmen who appeared to be well satisfied with their employment. The town of Hopedale is one of the prettiest towns in the State, due to the liberality of the Drapers. It will be a sorry day in Massachusetts when public spirited men like the Drapers are forced into retirement.

The partamount issue in the election in Massachusetts this year is the honor of the commonwealth. Neither the tarriff, nor reciprocity, nor any of the other questions upon which the old parties have differed will be appreciably affected by the result. The thing for the voters to decide is, first of all, whether they will turn the government of the state over to Mr. Moran and his heterogeneous following, and commit this commonwealth to the fallacies and follies, the revolutionary doctrines and dangerous policies, which this movement represents.

The Winchester Rock and Brick Co. have started on the foundation of their buildings and spur track and expect to have them completed by the latter part of the fall. J. M. Ellis is doing the work.

AUTOMOBILE RUN DOWN.

Tuesday evening at about 6 o'clock while Mr. Walter H. Dotten was riding his automobile at Symmes corner, he was run into by Michael Bane of Woburn who was on his bicycle. Bane's wheel was wrecked, while one of the guards of the automobile was considerably twisted. Bane had no light on his bicycle, and says he saw those on the auto but supposed it would turn into Bacon street.

Mr. Dotten had hard work from running over him, when he saw the wheel approaching. Bane was taken by Mr. Dotten to Dr. Mead's where it was found he had sustained no injuries other than a bad shaking up, and latter he was taken to his home in the auto. If automobiles are obliged to show lights, why not bicycles as well?

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LECTURE.

By Judge Septimus J. Hanna, C. S. D., of Colorado Springs.

The annual lecture on Christian Science given under the auspices of the local Christian Science Church was held in the Town Hall Monday evening; a large and representative audience greeted the Lecturer and followed his remarks with close attention.

The Lecturer was introduced by Mr. Henry C. Nickerson, of Winchester who spoke as follows:

Friends: In behalf of the local Christian Science Church I bid you a cordial welcome.

Christian Science today has arrested the attention of thinking people throughout our land, and the large audiences attending these lectures attest the sincere interests in this subject. Not many years ago—less than 15 years—the Christian Science Churches numbered about 25; while today there are about 1000 Branch Churches and Societies throughout this and foreign countries.

The question is often asked, why this rapid growth? It is due to results. We ask you to judge Christian Science by what it accomplishes. It is not a religion of theories but one of works.

In the business world today, more than ever before, men are seeking connections which bring results, and their policy for the future is governed by the experiences of the past. It is not what one says that counts, but what he does—what he actually accomplishes. So in Christian Science, we ask you to judge by what is being done for good, physically and spiritually, rather than by what some one thinks about it.

We should not believe in Christian Science simply because a friend says it is true, neither should we condemn it from mere heresay. We should investigate for ourselves and have as the basis of our judgment, achievements.

It is the purpose of these lectures to give a more correct understanding of Christian Science, and the life and work of its Founder. The lecturer of this evening was for ten years Editor of the Christian Science periodicals and First Reader of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston; and is Vice-President of the Board of Education of the Massachusetts Metaphysical College, of which Mrs. Eddy is the president. During this time he has been closely associated with Mrs. Eddy, the discoverer and founder of Christian Science, and is therefore exceptionally well qualified to speak on this subject and elucidate its teachings.

Judge Hanna was one of the two men at the World's Congress of Religions at Chicago during the World's Fair who was allowed to talk overtime. He represented the Christian Scientists, and when he had spoken his allotted time, by unanimous consent, he was allotted thirty minutes additional, so interesting was his talk.

I take great pleasure in introducing my friend Judge Septimus J. Hanna, C. S. D., of Colorado Springs, a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, whose subject this evening is "Christian Science—the Religion of the Bible.

Ladies and Gentlemen:—I assume that there are some here who are unfamiliar with Christian Science,—some who have come for the first time to hear of it. I will address myself in part to these. I therefore say that Christian Science has a text-book entitled "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and its author is the Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy. It was first published in 1875. It is a treatise on healing through the power of God, or the divine Mind. Or, as we claim, it is a thorough exegesis of the Scriptural method of healing all manner of diseases, and of curing all manner of sin through the understanding of God as all-present, all-powerful, all-wise, and universal Mind. In short it is a spiritual interpretation of the Bible; hence its title: "Key to the Scriptures."

THE AUTHOR.

The author of a book of note and of value is a person of whom people desire to know, therefore I shall refer briefly to the life and character of Mrs. Eddy. It may not be amiss for me to say that for nearly ten years, as former First Reader in the Mother Church in Boston and editor of the official periodicals, I have had opportunities which enable me to speak intelligently of her life and character as well as of her labors and literary attainments.

Speaking from this vantage ground, I can truthfully say that, intellectually, she is one of the most alert persons I have ever known; that she labors incessantly and unselfishly for the cause to which she has devoted her life, and that, notwithstanding her years, she performs an amount of labor each day which, if known, would seem incredible, even if done by one yet in the adolescence of life. As to her religious character, I speak my profoundest conviction when I say I believe it to be in accord with the highest standard of Christian living.

NOW OWN THEIR HOUSES.

Thanks to the Winchester Co-operative Bank.

Within the present year two series of shares in the Winchester Co-operative Bank have matured, and another will mature in January. Those persons who had mortgage loans in the retired series of shares have now paid in full and own their property. When it is considered that the payments on the shares are about the same as is paid each month for rent of a house, the fortunate holders of pledged shares in the two series no doubt look upon the fact that they now own their houses as a windfall and as something that never would have happened but for the existence of the Winchester Cooperative Bank. The Bank has paid a dividend of five per cent. during the past year and it is in a very flourishing condition.

Next Monday evening the annual meeting of the shareholders will be held in the banking rooms, Lyceum Building, for the election of officers for the ensuing year.

A LITTLE CORRECTION.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Allow me to correct an error. In last week's STAR I stated that the amount of Rev. Zachariah Symmes' damages awarded him by the court in his 1657 suit against Edward Collins for flowing Mystic lake to an illegal height, was three pounds, thirteen shillings and eight pence. This is an error in copying the record as this amount was the "costs of court," which Collins had to pay in addition to the damages awarded Symmes, which was a smaller amount, "forty and one shillings" or two pound and one shilling. If Symmes paid his lawyer anything for his services he could not have realized much of an immediate cash result from his suit and the whole record shows that the cost of obtaining justice compared with the amount of justice received, was about the same "in good old colony times" as at present.

ARTHUR E. WHITNEY.

BARN BURNED.

The fire department was called out at two o'clock yesterday morning for a fire in a stable on Glenwood avenue owned by Martin Powers. The blaze was discovered by officer Harrold, who pulled in an alarm from Box 44, and before the alarm was through sounding Mr. Powers pulled in box 45, making a medley of signals, the whistle at times blowing twelve times in succession.

The barn was a total loss, partly insured. The firemen experienced some difficulty in saving the house, which was close by, but succeeded, although the the sides and roof were scorched.

The fire is thought to have been set, and had evidently been going some time when discovered.

WEAFER—MARTIN.

Mr. Dominic F. Weafer of Woburn and Miss Annie J. Martin, 40 Pickering street, Winchester, were married on the 24th, at the parochial residence of St. Mary's church, Rev. D. J. Keleher officiating.

The couple were attended by Mr. William McGuire, of Stoneham, as best man, Miss Mary Weafer, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the groom's parents, 18 Buckman street, Woburn. After a short trip they will make their home in Dorchester.

A Floating Bridge to Connect with the Plains.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The question of a more direct connection between Swanton street and the centre,—than via Washington street and via Main street as at present,—has been agitated more or less in the last dozen or fifteen years, and while the route across Judkins pond has I think always been conceded to be the most direct, the outlay involved in land purchase and construction of a bridge or a roadway, has thus far proved an insurmountable obstacle.

I have long had a notion that a pontoon or a floating bridge might meet the difficulty, but whenever I have mentioned the matter to friends I have been met with—"Your plan is all right but you will never get Whitney's consent." Well, the only way to determine that factor was to ascertain Mr. Whitney's attitude, and having sought an interview and presented the matter he replied without any hesitation,—"That strikes me as a good scheme. I believe the people 'on the plains' are entitled to consideration as well as other sections of the town, and they have been stood off long enough. Yes, you have my consent now, under proper arrangement." Well and good! The next step was to get a working plan and an approximate estimate of cost. I have tried to find some literature on this line but thus far have been unsuccesstul. In the Boston public library I am told there are about 100 to 150 works on bridges, but nothing so far as I can learn bearing on pontoon or floating structures. One gentleman whom I thought could aid me, said he doubted if the information sought could be found outside government archives at West Point.

Now here is an opportunity for some Tech. graduate, or our landscape architects, or any one who has had experience in this line, to distinguish himself and at the same time become a public benefactor by working out this problem, and this article is written with a view to enlisting the services of some one who has such knowledge and experience.

The conditions to be met are about like these:—

Bridge—for pedestrians only.

Length:—1200 feet from Winchester place to Spruce street, the direct connection to Swanton street.

Width:—say not less than 6 feet and not more than 8 feet between railings; suitable railings with posts set in the railings at regular intervals for electric lighting.

Buoyancy:—sufficient to sustain 75 to 100 lbs to the square foot. Sufficient to carry a horse and snowplow in winter, in order to give a clear walk and remove the weight of an accumulation of snow.

Guides:—In the shape of piles driven at intervals to keep the bridge in place, and allow it to adjust itself to higher or lower stages of water, or it might be anchored by heavy stones with chains riveted to them and attached to the bridge.

There are two openings under the R. R. roadbed but the current does not amount to much. I think provision would have to be made more for wind than for current displacement.

Now Mr. Whitney stands ready to cooperate, and the railroad officials will be only too glad to have any plan adopted that will keep the public off the roadbed, and I am sure the town will furnish the financial backing if a reasonable, economical, and practical design is submitted. There is time enough to prepare such before the meetings of the Appropriations Committee and its recommendation (including architects or engineers fees) submitted to the town and accompanied with a bid from a responsible party would, I believe, go through the March meeting without a dissenting vote. Three months' time would be sufficient for the completion of the bridge, and its dedication might perhaps be a feature of our next 4th of July celebration.

AUTOMOBILE STRUCK DOG.

An automobile owned by a Lawrence physician struck a large mastiff dog last Sunday on Cambridge street near the Boat Club, turning the car into the side of the road and wedging it between a tree and telegraph pole so tightly that it took several hours to remove it. The dog was hurt so badly that it was killed. Who its owner was is not known, as the animal had no collar. The occupants of the automobile were somewhat shaken up, but not injured.

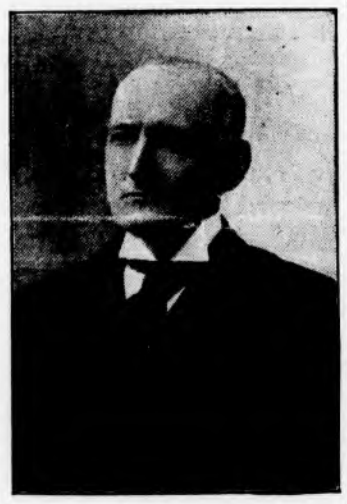

WINCHESTER HANDICRAFT SOCIETY.

A special meeting, to discuss the possibility of cooperation with the recently organized Winchester Improvement Association, will be held at the Handicrift Shop, Pleasant Street, this Friday evening, November 2, at 8 o'clock.

NOTABLE CAREER.

Re-election of Congressman McCall Demanded by District.

The important Congressional Committees which dominate legislation are as a rule only obtained by really able men and usually after a long service. Hon. Samuel W. McCall has been for seven years a member of the Committee on Ways and Means, the most historic and the greatest committee in the House, and is now nearly at its head, being separated from the chairmanship by only three places. In case of a revision of the tariff this place would be of transcendent importance to Massachusetts. By displacing him the district, and probably the state, would lose this position. The states which have kept their representatives longest in service have gained the greatest influence at Washington. The HON. SAMUEL W. MCCALL.

State of Maine, with only four members, has sometimes enjoyed a greater influence at Washington than some of the largest states in the Union because she had sent strong men to Congress and had kept them there.

During Mr. McCall's term of service he has borne a conspicuous part in some of the most important legislation ever before Congress. When President Roosevelt, once defeated in his battle for Cuban reciprocity, called a special session of Congress to consider that question alone, Mr. McCall closed the debate on behalf of the bill for the Committee on Ways and Means, and it finally became a law.

Two or three incidents will illustrate his standing in the House. Three years ago intense excitement was caused by charges connecting members of Congress with the Post Office Department scandals and a congressional investigation was ordered. It was necessary to appoint a committee of the highest character and the speaker selected Robert R. Hitt, one of the finest figures in Washington: Theodore C. Burton, who has no superior in ability in the House; Victor L. Metcalf, now a member of President Roosevelt's cabinet; three of the ablest Democrats, every man of whom had been upon the bench; and Mr. McCall was chosen chairman of this notable committee.

When in another Congress a committee of seven was appointed to investigate charges of corruption against senators and representatives in connection with the treaty of purchase of the Danish West Indies, Mr. McCall was appointed as one of its members.

When he took his seat after making his notable speech upon the railroad rate bill, Mr. Russell of Texas, one of the very ablest Democratic members and likely to be Mr. Williams's successor as leader took the floor to reply and began his speech as follows: "While I do not agree with the conclusions reached by the gentleman who has just taken his seat, the magnificence of his address, his splendid logic and the rhetoric with which it was adorned in my judgment add dignity and honor to the entire membership of this House." This declaration was received with loud applause upon both sides of the House, and Mr. Williams, the Democratic leader, replying to Mr. McCall, in the same debate, said of him: "If there is any man in the House that I admire it is he; he has the independence of an old Roman senator and he is always showing it, and showing it in this very case.

Mr. McCall had charge of the bill refunding the war taxes collected upon religious, educational and charitable institutions and it was voted to refund about $800,000 to these institutions, nearly one-third of the entire amount going to his district.

He also engineered through the House, in the face of strong opposition, the bill permitting the drawless bridge between Cambridge and Boston. This consent upon the part of the Government to obstructing a navigable stream made possible the Charles River dam and makes feasible pneumatic tubes from Boston to Cambridge and other cities north of the Charles river.

To fully cover Mr. McCall's record would require a reference to the most important legislation of the last fourteen years. He is known from one end of the country to the other and his ability and honestly are everywhere recognized. The New York Sun spoke of him editorially as "perhaps the most intellectual man in the House;" the San Francisco Bulletin referred to him as holding a position in Congress somewhat similar to that occupied by John Morely and James Bryce in the British parliament; Collier's Weekly said of his speech on the rate bill: "Right or wrong in his contention, Mr. McCall was so profoundly right in his spirit of independence that only admiration was returned to him from a press which did not share his views." President Tucker of Dartmouth College said of Mr. McCall's well known centennial oration on Daniel Webster that it was a "magnificent example of sustained speech, it made the "Centennial" a notable event and will make it memorable.

Mr. McCall has established himself in Washington as one of the well know congressional leaders and his district has honored itself signally in supporting this man of courage. At a time when emotional politics are so much in evidence his triumphal election is imperatively demanded by the good of the country.

CALUMET CLUB BOWLING TOURNAMENT.

The winter bowling tournament at the Calumet club began on Tuesday night, when four teams lined up for the race for first honors.

The scores were varied, and brought out the difference between the old and new men very noticably.

The match between the league team and team 2 resulted in a split, team 1 taking two strings, but with not enough margin to capture the totals. Captain Purrington was the honor man with a total of 298.

Team 4 captured all the points in sight in its game with team 3, Ayer and Lane of team 3 and Young of team 4, taking individual honors, and Russell getting the high single with 94.

The scores:

The sacrament of confirmation will be administered at St. Mary's Catholic Church next Sunday afternoon at 3 by Rt. Rev. Bishop Brady.

PRES. ELIOT ENDORSES MR. McCALL.

President Eliot of Harvard University is strongly in favor of the re-election of Congressman McCall, as the following letter to the Honorable David T. Dickinson will show:

HARVARD UNIVERSITY CAMBRIDGE,
November 1, 1906.

Dear Mr. Dickinson: In these days, when the Democratic party has no firm hold on any stable political principles and tends in many parts of the country to nominate erratic demagogues as candidates for high positions, a courageous, independent, conservative, forcible, thinker and speaker like Mr McCall renders a great service to the dominant party and the country by supplying in some measure the empty place of a vigorous opposition. It has been a great satisfaction to me for some years past to help return Mr. McCall to Congress, and I hope to continue to enjoy that satisfaction so long as I live. Very truly yours,

CHARLES W. ELIOT.

NEW OFFICERS FOR CALUMET CLUB.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LECTURE.

Yet, notwithstanding her highly spiritual nature, she is withal an intensely practical person. She keeps close watch of current affairs and aquaints herself with the world's doings. She is, moreover, a patriotic citizen of her native State and of her adopted city, contributing generously of her means toward their material welfare and upbuilding.

THE TENETS.

I shall next speak of the Church Tenets. There is in Boston a Mother Church, organized a number of years since, having a membership of more than forty thousand, composed of persons residing in almost every part of this country and of other countries. This membership is increasing at the rate of about 3,000 annually. The Mother Church has branch churches and societies to the number of nearly one thousand, also situated in almost every part of this country and of other countries. Some years since the Mother Church adopted a set of Church Tenets. These become also the tenets of all of her branches, and must be subscribed to and adopted by every person becoming a member either of the Mother Church or of any of her branches. These tenets furnish a fair index to the religious faith or belief of this movement, hence I shall refer to them in substance. They acknowledge the Scriptures to be the inspired word of God. They acknowledge the supremacy and infinity of God. They acknowledge Christ and his divinity, and declare there is but one Christ. They inculcate the omnipotence, omnipresence and omniscience of God; that God is Spirit; that man—the real, spiritual man—is made in the image and likeness of God according to the teaching of Genesis, and that this real man must, by the necessity of his relationship to God, reflect, or image forth, the divine character. The real and immortal man, therefore, does reflect God. The mortal man, or the unspiritual man, does not reflect God, and is not therefore His image and likeness.

The last of these tenets enjoins upon all who subscribe to them the necessity of striving, watching and praying to have in themselves the same Mind that was also in Christ Jesus, to love one another, and to be meek, merciful, just and pure.

Surely there can be no higher standard of Christianity. If there be a person on this earth today who can truly be said to have in himself the same Mind that was also in Christ Jesus, that person is a Christian. If there are persons who are sincerely striving, watching and praying to have that Mind, they are, in that sense, leading the Christian life. Those Christian Scientists who are thus earnestly striving are true to the church tenets and to their teaching. If there are those who are not so striving, they like all others have yet to attain to a higher standard of living.

THE SCRIPTURAL BASIS.

The foregoing indicates, in general terms, the Christianity of our faith. No unbiased mind will say that, in statement and theory, it does not embrace all the essentials of Bible teaching: but let us be more specific. All who believe in God at all agree that He is all-powerful, all-present, all-wise. All who believe in the Bible accept the statement of the first chapter of Genesis that God made man in His own image and likeness. We should endeavor to give these Bible truths their full weight, their deep significance. If we do so, we must believe that with God all things are possible. We must believe that if God is whole, His image and likeness reflects wholeness. We must believe that if God is pure, His image and likeness reflects purity. We must believe that if God is good, His image and likeness reflects goodness. We must believe that if God is Love, His image and likeness reflects love. We must believe that if God is Life, His image and likeness reflects life. We must believe that if God, in His wholeness, is free from sin, sickness and death, His image and likeness is likewise free. Otherwise the words "image and likeness" were false and meaningless—a misnomer. A full belief in the first chapter of Genesis, which is the record of the true, spiritual creation, puts upon us the necessity of recognizing God as the only creator of man, and man as the image and likeness of his creator forever and forever.

Paul expressed a clear discernment of the distinction between the real man and the false when, as recorded in Col. 3, he said: "But now ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not to one another, seeing ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him. . . . Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness and humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering, . . . and above all these things put on charity which is the bond of perfectness.

Here is distinctly shown the difference between the true man and the false, the immortal and the mortal, the perfect and the imperfect. Jesus referred to this difference when he said: "Ye must be born again," or "ye must be born anew," as it is in the revised version. He also referred to the true man when he said: "Be ye perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." That is, ye must be borne out of sin and imperfection into sinlessness and perfection, for this is the necessity of your birthright as the image and likeness of God.

If this Scripture is to be taken at its plain meaning, we have laid the foundation for further Scripture which shows God's power and purpose to transform the false into the true, by the destruction of the false. This is the only real transformation.

Hear the "sweet singer of Israel" in the 103 Psalm:

"Bless the Lord O my soul, and forget not all his benefits: Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies; who satisfieth thy mouth with good things, so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's." And listen to the prophet Jeremiah (33): "Call unto me, and I will answer thee, and show thee great and mighty things which thou knowest not; Behold I will bring it health and cure, and I will cure them, and will reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth."

Of old, as now, those who trusted to human aid, instead of the Divine, suffered the consequences of their lack of faith and understanding. In 16 Chron. we read: "And Asa in the thirty and ninth year of his reign was diseased in his feet, until his disease was exceeding great; and yet in his disease he sought not to the Lord, but to the physicians." What was the result? The record laconically tells us: "And Asa slept with his fathers, and died in the one and fortieth year of his reign." We note that Asa slept with his fathers, not his Father. How many since Asa's time have slept prematurely with their fathers for a like reason!

JESUS' TEACHING.

The Old Testament teachings, as indicated by the few citations made, furnish an abundant foundation for the New Testament doctrine of healing through the divine law, and especially the teaching and works of Jesus. I might quote extensively from the New Testament did time permit, but I shall confine the quotations to the sayings and precepts of the founder of the Christian religion. This should be sufficient authority for every professing Christian.

Jesus sent forth his twelve disciples to preach and to heal the sick. He gave them a commandment, called by some Bible commentators his Great Commission. In Matthew 10th, this commandment is thus recorded:—

"Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not; but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

"And as ye go preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand.

"Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils; freely ye have received, freely give.

"Provide neither gold nor silver, nor brass in your purses.

"Nor yet scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves; for the workman is worthy of his meat."

This commandment is a unit. It is not two commandments. There is in this language no warrant for any attempt to separate the commandment by declaring that the part relating to preaching was to be perpetuated, but the part relating to healing the sick was to be put aside, as having reference only to the time in which, and those to whom it was given. Even if, for the sake of argument, the kind of preaching mentioned in the commandment had been practiced, and a present kingdom of heaven had been preached, we yet maintain that the part relating to healing sickness is as plain and imperative as that pertaining to preaching. We should thus maintain if we rested the question alone upon the words I have quoted; but we are not compelled to do this. After his resurrection and just before his ascension Jesus gave to the same disciples to whom he gave his first great commandment (excepting Judas Iscariot who had betrayed him) a final commandment. This constitutes the two last verses of the Book of Matthew:—

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

"Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

This language is broad and unqualified. It comprehends all the commandments previously given to his disciples, and this of course, includes his first great commandment. It is a plain and unmistakable direction or instruction. Let me plainly ask: When was it ever repealed, countermanded, qualified, or changed in any manner, by Jesus or any one else of those having biblical authority to teach or preach? Where is the record thereof? We declare, therefore, on the most explicit biblical authority, that the part of the great commandment relating to healing the sick was as imperative as that pertaining to preaching. Healing sickness is, then, an essential and indispensable part of Christ's gospel. No right exists for the effort to put aside Jesus' commandment to heal the sick and to heal according to His teachings and His methods of healing. The same divine power that healed in Jesus time heals today, so far as it is understood and practiced. There is but one Truth, and that Truth is eternal unchangeable. The healing Christ never withdrew himself from the world. Jesus declared as the solemn conclusion of his final commandment: "And, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

We might well rest our contention here. But I feel impelled to call your attention to an utterance of Jesus yet more remarkable than any to which I have referred. In the 14th of John we read:—

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall He do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto the Father."

Marvellous words! When we think of the mighty works he performed we are almost overwhelmed by the deep solemnity of such an utterance. Jesus destroyed all forms of sin; healed all manner of sickness; walked the waves; raised the dead; and did many other wonderful works. Yet in words startling in their plainness He declares that those who believe on him shall do, not only the great works that He had done, but greater. Can this be? Is it possible that the believers in the great Nazarine are destined to do the mighty works he did and even mighter? What shall be our answer? If He meant what He said and was a true prophet, our answer must be Yes.

The Christian Scientist endeavors to awaken his patient spiritually and point out to him his true relationship to God. This is prayer in the highest sense of the word. Not alone the prayer of sincere desire and supplication, but more, the realization of God's all presence, all-power and all-Life.

This God is your Physician, as well as mine. We can go to him daily, hourly, momentarily, in sweet and silent prayer and if we pray aright, He will heal us of our diseases and remove from us our infirmities. We can know, in the very depths of our being, that He is our Physician, our Comforter, our Life, our Health, our All-in-all, and in the fullest and most absolute sense, a very present help in trouble; and that in Him indeed we live and move and have our being.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

THINKS HOURS ARE TOO MANY.

The following correspondence is self explanatory:

ST. JOHNSBURY, VT., 7, 13, '06.

Prest. Tuttle:

Dear Sir,—By advice of Chairman of Mass., R. R. Commission I wish to call your attention to the fact that the gatemen at Winchester, Mass., work 12 hours a day, 7 days a week. I believe this is all I need say to you, to have less hours for public safety for these men at that most dangerous spot.

I have spoken of this matter in our local paper, and your officials that live in our town ignore it.

Yours respectfully,
WHITFIELD TUCK.

Winchester, Mass.

WINCHESTER, 9, 20, '06.

Prest. Tuttle:

Dear Sir,—Hearing nothing from you, in reply to mine of 7, 13, and as the gatemen at the crossing in Winchester continue to work 12 hours a day, 7 days in the week, as public safety demands less hours for these men and more humane treatment for them, I again call your attention to this matter. If it is not changed by Oct. 1st I shall see the R. R. Commissioners about it.

Respectfully yours,
WHITFIELD TUCK.

BOSTON, Oct. 10th '06.

Mass. R. R. Commissioners:

Gentlemen,—Inclosed is a copy of a letter I sent Prest. Tuttle. I hope and expect you will see that these gatemen have less hours of labor, in protecting the lives of our citizens at this very dangerous crossing.

Yours, with much respect,
WHITFIELD TUCK.

BOSTON, October 19, 1906.

Whitfield Tuck, Esq.,
Winchester, Mass.

Dear Sir: Your communication with reference to employment of gatemen at Winchester was received, together with copy of letter sent by you to President Tuttle, and the matter will be given careful consideration.

Very truly yours,
JAMES F. JACKSON, Chairman.

ELECTRIC LIGHT NOTES.

Geo. A. Whittington has arranged with the Edison Electric Ill. Co. for the installation of 25 lamps in his house at 8 Woodside road.

R. C. Hawes will light his stable at 670 Main street, with 15 incandescent electric lights.

The First Baptist Church, has added 10 electric lights to the installation that is already being furnished with current by the Edison Co.

The residence of John Abbott, at 31 Dix street, will be illuminated with incandescent electric lights, the Edison Co having been asked to furnish 36.

The Yale street residence of W. P. Nickerson will soon have 35 incandescent electric lights in use.

F. C. Burnham will light his residence on Mystic Valley Parkway with electricity, 25 lamps being furnished by the Edison Co.

A TIMELY INQUIRY.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In order to get the town clock on the Congregational Church in running order again, will it be necessary to call a town meeting and instruct the selectmen to take charge of the clock hereafter, following out the same procedure as in the town stable matter? It seems as if the clock ought to go if there is any "go" in whoever has had charge of it these many years. It is not very complimentary to the liberal doner of the clock (which was originally "the best town clock that could be made" by the Howard Clock Co. of Boston) or to the town of Winchester, to have the clock stand still so long, neither is it convenient for the many people who have looked it in the face so many years and have rarely been disappointed in getting the correct time, to now be stared at by the clock without a look of life or animation in its face. Cannot the clock be put into the hands of the town engineer, tree warden or the board of health if it is subject to some chronic disorder which is too much for the selectmen to handle? It may be out of sorts with the looks of the high grade of the new proposed humpy railroad crossing as drawn by the town engineer for the selectmen or it may be getting "buggy" in its wheels or head work. Possibly it may be permanently tongue-tied or have the rickets, but whatever is the matter with our old time friend, please tell us, dear Twinkle STAR, how to proceed to get the clock on the move once more so that it may mark time as heretofore in the most approved manner. Jaynes' Emulsion of PURE Norwegian Cod Liver Oil
With Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda

GUARANTEED TO CURE OR MONEY REFUNDED

Is freshly prepared three times a week by the most modern emulsifying process and is one of the great triumphs of our laboratory. One of the most important features of a successful emulsion consists of its entering the system in a fresh condition. As JAYNES' EMULSION goes directly from the laboratory to the patient, the greatest possible benefit is derived from its use and the purchaser is sure of an emulsion containing the highest grade of Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, which we import direct. Jaynes' Emulsion is specially beneficial for deep-seated coughs, lung troubles, wasting diseases, etc. It is pleasant to take and rapidly develops flesh and strength.

We import more Norwegian Cod Liver Oil than any other retail drug house in the United States.

Regular $1.00 Size Bottle of Emulsion Sold by Us for 50 Cents

The ingredients of our own preparations and all drugs and chemicals sold by us are subjected to the most thorough tests by our Analytical Chemist, Professor W. L. Scoville, and we GUARANTEE them to be of the HIGHEST QUALITY OBTAINABLE.

London's Most Ancient Court.

The ancient court of hustings is of Saxon origin, and the name is derived from hus, a house, and thing, a matter of cause—that is, a house or hall of causes. Courts of the kind were established in all the great cities, and, as regards London, it is the supreme as well as the most ancient court and is the court of appeal from the sheriffs' court. In the earliest times it was held weekly, but it is now summoned only as occasion requires.

Consumption

¶ There is no specific for consumption. Fresh air, exercise, nourishing food and Scott's Emulsion will come pretty near curing it, if there is anything to build on. Millions of people throughout the world are living and in good health on one lung.

¶ From time immemorial the doctors prescribed cod liver oil for consumption. Of course the patient could not take it in its old form, hence it did very little good. They can take and tolerate it for a long time. There is no oil, not excepting butter, so easily digested and absorbed by the system as cod liver oil in the form of Scott's Emulsion, and that is the reason it is so helpful in consumption where its use must be continuous.

¶ We will send you a sample free.

¶ Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

YOU CANNOT ELIMINATE HEARST.

John B. Moran wants Hearstism eliminated from the state campaign of this year, and we are not surprised at it. But it will be very difficult to make the man of ordinary intelligence believe that Mr. Moran is not having the support of the Hearst machine and money. The only paper in Boston which is supporting him with any degree of warmth is the Hearst newspaper, he is canvassing with a Hearst nomination at his back, and immediately he was nominated he went to New York, to seek, as many suppose, financial aid from the Hearst treasury in that city. With these facts in view how can it be said to the people that Hearst must be eliminated from the contest.

What do the people of Massachusetts think of Hearst? Prior to the assassination of the late President McKinley the Hearst newspaper in New York said of the president:

"He is an abject, weak, incompetent poltroon. Did not the murder of Lincoln, uniting in sympathy the regard of all good people in the north and south, hasten the era of American good feeling and prevent the renewal of fighting between brothers. Institutions, like men, last until they die, and if bad institutions, like bad men can be got rid of only by killing them, the killing must be done."

A coarser criticism of a loved executive was never penned. Do the people of Massachusetts want to elect as governor a man at whose elbow will be one who not only justifies the assassination of one Republican president, but practically advises the assination of another? Heaven forbid.

Rev. William I. Lawrance, pastor of the Unitarian Church, announces a course of sermons on "Jesus, and the Men about Him," to begin with Nov 4th, and continue until Christmas. The sermon topics will be, James, the Practical; Peter, the impulsive; Paul, the Logical; John, the Loving; The [illegible] Synoptical Portrait of Jesus; [illegible] Ready [illegible] On [illegible] the [illegible] Exchange [illegible].

Benefits the Town.

If the Republicans of this town do their duty on election day the party will have its just representation at the several conventions next year, instead of two-thirds as was the case this year. The matter of representation at conventions may seem to be a trifling thing to many citizens, nevertheless it has a direct bearing regarding the town's influence.

Decrease in Voters.

For the first time in the history of Winchester this year shows a falling off in the number of voters. The reason for this was because of the United Shoe Machinery Co. leaving town and thus taking away many voters. The last registration showed 1552 names; since then 189 names have been dropped, and 96 added, showing a loss of 93. The total number of names now on the voting list is 1459.

The loss occasioned by the Shoe Machinery Co. leaving town will be more than made up during the coming year.

Rather Sudden.

After consideration, many citizens think the special town meeting of last week acted discourteously to the members of the Sewer Board in legislating them out of office so summarily. It would, perhaps, have been better to have given the members of the Board time to turn around and thus prepare their affairs for the change. Then, too, it would have given the members of the Water Board, who are hereafter to do this work, an opportunity to get in touch with prevailing conditions in the sewer department and not be obliged to ascertain for themselves how matters stand. Perhaps the best course would have been for the meeting to have given notice that the Board would be abolished at the end of the year, and to shape their affairs to that end.

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

The Epiphany Circle will hold its first meeting of the season next Monday, November 5, at 3 p. m. in the Choir Room. It is hoped that every member will be present.

The Woman's Guild will meet on Tuesday, Nov. 6 with Mrs. A. S. Higgins, corner of Church and Central streets at 2 30 p. m.

There will be the usual service of Evening Prayer on Wednesday at 5 p. m.

On Wednesday, November 7 there will be the annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary. The services will be in Trinity Church, Boston.

DEATHS BY ACCIDENT.

Between July 1st and August 31st, 1906, a leading life insurance company paid claims on the lives of:

34 POLICYHOLDERS WHO DIED OF TYPHOID FEVER
24 POLICYHOLDERS WHO DIED OF PNEUMONIA
85 POLICYHOLDERS WHO DIED BY ACCIDENT

In other words, fifty-eight policyholders died in eight weeks from typhoid fever and pneumonia. But in the same eight weeks EIGHTY-FIVE policyholders were killed in all sorts of accidents, and the Company paid claims under their policies amounting to $174,982.

Look at that list. The differing circumstances do not stand out as startlingly as they would if you could peruse the death papers in each case. You would then understand and have impressed upon you most vividly the chances there are for fatal accidents in most innocent and unexpected places. A man is killed in bed in a hotel by an explosion in the street. You'd think a person pretty safe in bed on the sixth floor of a hotel, would'nt you? A gentleman gets out of his automobile by the roadside at night, his lights are extinguished, a second machine dashes into him out of the darkness, and he is killed. Can people guard against these and similar accidents? Yes, and no. The automobilist might give up his car. The traveler might stay at home. But will they? Even then would they be safe? No, we must come and go and take life as we find it. People have to incur risks of some sort at every turn, and the risks apparently increase as time goes on. This is a rushing, roaring world, full of danger, and getting more hazardous every day, out of one hundred thousand so many people are going to be killed, so many injured, and the list will include both the careful and the careless. One of them may be you.

You can't help yourself against the accident, but you can avert the financial consequences, both to yourself and family with a "Travelers" Accident Policy. The policy with an ACCUMULATION, covering accidental death and dismemberment, $10,000 (maximum), $15.00 per year.

In what way can you get so much protection for so little cost.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Why do political figurers estimate future results by per centages? For instance, supposing Winchester cast a thousand Republican votes last year and five hundred Democratic, and they estimate fifty percent gain over last year's vote for the latter and thirty percent for the former, they then say that the Democrats have gained twenty per cent net. But this is the way it works out, Republicans five hundred majority last year, five hundred and fifty this year. Which gains?

Why do I favor Moran? Because I wan't a man who will travel outside the rut. Conservatism in politics means let things alone and that is why the people all over the country are tired of it. They want and are bound to have more radicalism, and if it goes too far the "stand patters" will be responsible for it.

I am suspicious of practically all the talk and news being made about the Governorship when the make up of the House and Senate is of vastly more importance, as is also true of the national congress compared with the presidency. You never see the corporations and great interests bothering about the governorship in Massachusetts, but they look after the legislators a great deal and in many cases run in their employees and officials to represent the dear, but careless, people.

A man once told a friend a story about a man who came home and told his wife he had met with great losses and was ruined. She comforted him and going up to her room soon returned with her apron heaping full of gold coins that she had saved up. As the listener appeared lost in wonder, the story teller said, "You don't believe it do you?" "Oh, it is not the amount of coin that staggers me, but what her apron strings could have been made of," he answered. Likewise it is not Mr. Whitney's wonderful achievment of agreeing with the State Board on the position for a brass bolt connected with that sacred river and water supply that surprises me, wonderful though it be, but rather what kind of a course of treatment or medicine could he have taken to have got into such a receptive state. However, judged by the length of his story, the money value to him must have been of very great moment as we may find out later on when the "brass bolt fixed for all time" play its part in the evidence. Who wouldn't own a water power?

I am glad to see a movement to get together for the general improvement of of the town. There is lots of talent in Winchester, but for a number of years it has been all split up into numerous clubs and societies of small range.

As the Republicans are to have a rally here, I trust "Sam." McCall will give us something more than a "ten minute talk," which is about all he has given us in this line for a long time, and he should not be let off in his home town so easily this time. We want something specific from him, too, about a reduction of the tariff duties, unless it is that this hoary old piratical schedule has become sacred through the enormity of and length of time of its sinning, and you are going to let the "stand patters" play their frozen role until the people arise in their might and smash it with free trade.

The change wiping out the sewer board and turning over its duties and obligations to the Water Board took place at once, just as soon as the town meeting adjourned, not next March, or any other future time, as some of the citizens are arguing. The Water Board should have met at once and arranged the pressing matters. This change is bound to prove a good one and more on the same line will follow.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Again will the unlimited resources of the management of the Castle Square be tested in the production of "Trilby" at the Castle Square next week. This play, it will be remembered, was dramatized by Paul Potter some ten years ago immediately upon the heels of its great success as a novel, and it brought a fortune to its authors and management and fame to more than one actress and actor who appeared in its leading roles. Wilton Lackaye as Svengali, and Virginia Harned as Trilby, both found themselves at the starting point of their careers through the popularity of the play, and the remarkably opportunity given them in these characters. "Trilby" on Monday will have its first stock company production at the Castle Square, an event long waited for by the many who have read Du Maurier's novel, or who saw the original production of the great play made therefrom. In the title role Miss Lawton will appear, and it is expected that her personality, her magnetism and her artistic skill will astonish our theatre goers. The entire membership of the stock company will make up a cast of even excellence and exceptional ability.

A TIMELY POLITICAL QUESTION.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

If Moran is elected governor, will he make the Winchester town clock go? If so, McGillicuddy, O'Shaughnessy, myself and all my boarders will vote for him as the town clock is all the clock we have in the house. Moran promises to make everything go our way if we will vote for him, and sure it would be a small thing for the like of him to set the town clock to going and ticking! Who knows but he would give me the job of oiling and winding the machine, therefore, Mr. Editor, let me know before next Tuesday if you think Moran, Coakley, Feeney and the like can hold a wake and blow the breath of life into the old clock after Moran is elected governor. He blows hard now in a promissory way, but do you think he and his wind bag can make the old clock go? If ye don't think so, myself and boarders will vote for Grandmother Bradford who is an older democrat and more "truly good" than Moran, so I am told. Ye can tell Moran this if ye like for I am an independent democrat now and belong to no party.

MICHAEL MCQUILKIN,
Formerly an Old-time Democrat.

THE THEATRE.

During the past two seasons the Castle Square Theatre under the management of the Boston Stage Society has gained a reputation extending far beyond the limits of our own city. It is not merely the home of a stock company; it is also a theatre in which fine productions are made with the care and lasting effect bestowed elsewhere upon plays that are staged for the purpose of holding the attention of the public for a season or longer. Yet the plays produced at the Castle Square run but a single week, for it is the policy of the management to give its patrons something new and elaborate with the arrival of each successive Monday.

These reflections are aroused by the production of "Julius Caesar" at the Castle Square during the past week, it being the first of the series of classic plays to be given at intervals at this house during the winter. The scenery, painted with fine imagination and illusion by Fred J. Gibson from designs especially prepared by Frank Chouteau Brown added not a little to the the dramatic effect of the great tragedy—certainly the greatest of Shakespeare's historical plays—and the performance by the members of the stock company proved again the adaptability of these players to every form of drama, be it ancient or modern, serious or comic.

W. H. S. NOTES.

On November 7th, next Wednesday the first inter-class basket ball games will take place. 1907 will play 1908 and 1909 1910. A week from that, November 14, the winners will play for the championship.

At a meeting of the A. A. on Tuesday it was voted to accept the amendments and changes drawn up for the constitution by the committee which was appointed.

THE CAMPAIGN.

Crowds Which Greet Moran Much Like Bryan Year.

SOME CASES WHERE HE FAILED.

Has Had More Assistance Than Any Former District Attorney.

The gubernatorial campaign in Massachusetts is now at its height. Both candidates for governor are making a strenuous canvass and nearly every night both are upon the stump.

It has been thus far a campaign unusual in many respects. Governor Guild has made splendid addresses and wherever he has appeared has been given an extremely cordial greeting. The crowds which have attended the Moran rallies have been extremely suggestive of the crowds which appeared in Massachusetts in 1896 wherever William Jennings Bryan spoke in his contest for the presidency against William McKinley. The strength and following of a candidate is not always indicated by the attendance at his rallies. Governor Guild has asked Mr. Moran a good many embarrassing questions and pointed to his record as district attorney with telling effect.

Among the various promises which Mr. Moran has made with such prodigality, one would suppose that there was one set at least that he would keep.

He has promised that the poor man should be protected and the rich criminal fearlessly pursued.

Has He Kept His Word?

Has he kept his word? Take these cases as an illustration. The worst enemies of the poor are those swindlers who start fraudulent companies and sham banks to rob the poor of their little savings. In the last year or two these vermin have been particularly active and some of them have been pretty thoroughly exposed.

There were the Ubero companies; the Hanover bank case: the Provident Securities case; the Preferred Mercantile company; the Haight & Freese case; the cases of the Italian banks in the North End of Boston, and many others less notorious.

Here if anywhere is a class of cases where, if the district attorney really cared for the poor man, he could have put in some good work.

What has Mr. Moran done in these cases? Since he became district attorney, one swindler of this class, and one only, has been put behind the bars. That was Borges, whose indictment was found by Mr. Sughrue, and the work of preparing and trying the case was done outside the district attorney's office by Frederick H. Chase, Sughrue's first assistant. And yet Moran denounced Sughrue as incompetent and corrupt.

In all other cases Mr. Moran has done simply nothing. In the Preferred Mercantile case, where in a little over a month twelve thousand dollars were stolen, in addition to thousands of dollars before, the two Stillings brothers, who were at the bottom of the swindle, pleaded guilty in the United States court for fraudulent use of the mail. A part of this testimony against the Stillings brothers has been in the district attorney's office ever since Mr. Moran came there and he has not stirred in the matter.

Here Is the Record.

The same thing is true in the other cases. In the matter of Haight & Freese, where over a million dollars was stolen and the victims were numbered by thousands, he announced during his campaign for district attorney in a letter dated Aug. 4, 1905, which was printed in the daily press, that if Sughrue did not prosecute this case he would do so, but to date he has made no move to carry out his promise.

In the Hanover bank case the directors stuffed the bank's assets with worthless securities and bled their depositors to the tune of thirty thousand dollars, over twelve thousand of which was in small deposits. The facts have for months been open to Mr. Moran as they have to all the world, but again Moran has done nothing.

The story is the same in the Provident Securities case. There the swindlers got away with about one hundred and ninety-five thousand dollars, the property of seven thousand persons. Receivers went to Moran months ago, begged him to press his criminal investigation, and have kept urging him to do so ever since. But Moran has done nothing.

After much pressure from the receivers he finally did appoint a lawyer to investigate the case, but that investigation has languished week after week and month after month. Meantime the poor depositors are kept waiting for their money.

Mr. Moran says that the receivers are trying to get him to use the district attorney's office to collect debts. This is a wilful perversion of the truth. The receivers have only asked Mr. Moran to investigate a criminal case and to prosecute the guilty parties. This he has not done.

In the case of the Italian banks, the story is the same. Nothing whatever has been done. Not one criminal has been brought to justice.

John B. Flanagan's Case.

The case of John B. Flanagan [illegible] other case of the same kind Flanagan was indicted [illegible] keeping a comm[illegible] ically for keeping a bucket-shop. Shortly afterwards he testified before the committee on rules of the general court. And then Moran announced with a great flourish of trumpets that it would be impossible for him to prosecute Flanagan, as he had been given an immunity bath by the legislature. Mr. Moran makes himself a judge of whether Flanagan is immune or not. Good lawyers think that Flanagan would not be immune and that it is not the district attorney's business to go about setting up immunity for the protection of criminals. It is the criminals' business to prove they are immune.

If John B. Moran were a fraction of the man he pretends to be, he would push the Flanagan case for all it is worth and put it up to the courts to proclaim him immune, if immune he is.

Does he care little for the enforcement of the law? It looks so. What he wants is to get what advertisement he can for himself, and when he had once used Flanagan for an advertisement he naturally ceased to care about his case.

If Flanagan was given an immunity bath, it was not by the legislature, but by John B. Moran, and while that bath was given the man who held the soap was Tim Coakley, Moran's most prominent political supporter and brother-in-law to his late assistant, Joe Dennison, and Mr. Flanagan's personal counsel. His appearance for him in the criminal case is on file in the superior court.

He Has Plenty of Excuses.

Mr. Moran retorts to all statements like these that the legislature wouldn't give him enough assistants. As a matter of fact the legislature gave him an additional district attorney and in order that he might secure more competent men the salary of all his assistants was increased. Furthermore, it was provided that the "district attorney for the Suffolk district may, if in his opinion the interests of the commonwealth so require, employ additional legal assistants with the approval of the chief justice of the superior court."

So it will be seen that the excuse of lack of proper facilities is merely an excuse and has no foundation in fact. A man who has time to run for governor, who has time to get into successive controversies with the police commission, board of aldermen, legislature, governor, political committees and politicians of all degrees, who has time to bring before the grand jury a petty scuffle between a Harvard student and a policeman, has plenty of time to do his duty if he chooses and the truth seems to be that he does not want to.

When Mr. Moran was elected district attorney his only idea was to use that office to make himself governor. He has already announced that if he is elected governor he will use that office to make himself president.

Unfortunately the people are saddled with him for another year as district attorney. There seems nothing in the way in which he has used his office of district attorney, to encourage the people to elect him governor in order that he may run a campaign for the presidency.

QUEER LOVEMAKING.

A South American Bird Which Wins Its Mate by Dancing.

There is a bird in South America that makes love with its feet. It is a handsome creature, but walks clumsily, and the only sound it can utter is a hoarse cluck. It dances, however, in a way that wins admiration from the females of its sex, though its antics only serve as an incentive to laughter to human beings who see them.

This bird, known as the cock of the rock, lives in the northern mountainous portion of South America. It is about the size of a large chicken.

The entire bird—body, head wings and tail—is blood red in color, with the exception of the tail feathers, which have a narrow band of brown across them near the ends which are tipped with buff. On the head is a crest of feathers like a great red ball, which contracts or expands at the pleasure of its owner.

When the mating season comes seven to ten males seek some secluded spot where there is a level patch of ground and clear it of any sticks, stones or leaves, stamping down the dirt till it is hard and level.

Then they call the females, who stand at the edges of this novel arena. One at a time the males then perform a most curious dance. Each dancer will first strut up and down a few times and then, to the apparent delight of the rest, commence to caper around in an extremely ludicrous manner, spreading his tail and wings, puffing up his crest, bowing to the others and at the same time keeping up a hopping gait until he is exhausted.

When all the males have danced each female will choose a mate, and the happy pairs depart to begin housekeeping.

ARTIFICIAL FLOWERS.

Each Part of the Larger Ones Is Made by Specialists.

Artificial flowers were invented by pious nuns. In the Italian convents the altars and shrines were up to the end of the eighteenth century decorated with artificial flowers, laboriously put together, of paper, parchment and other stiff materials. In a Venetian warehouse the most wonderful productions of natural flowers are exhibited in glass cases, and in many cases, not only the richest and most brilliant colors, but the very scent of the flowers has been stolen from nature, for some of the artificial flowers are steeped in the perfume distilled from the flower which it represents. Last century a Swiss invented a machine for [illegible] the leaves and petals [illegible] be used for the [illegible] hyacinths, lilies of the valley and other small flowers. In larger petals the irregularities of manual work are preferred to the stiff and correct forms produced by machinery. This material of which the petals are made is woven in special factories. The scissors and other tools used by the girls employed as well as the presses in which the veins are traced on the leaves are of a shape specially adapted to the work. Each part of a flower is made by specialists. In one room, for instance, only stalks of flowers and leaves are made; in another, fruits and berries of all kinds are cast if they are wax or blown if made of glass. The cleverest workers are employed in making blossoms of the single petals and bouquets, wreaths and garlands of the single blossoms.—Dundee Advertiser.

First Tariff Duties.

If you turn to a map of Spain, you will take note at its southern point and running out into the [illegible] of Gibraltar of a promontory which from its position is admirably adapted for commanding the entrance of the Mediterranean sea and watching the entrance and exit of all ships. A [illegible] stands upon this promontory, called now, as it was called in the time of the Moorish domination in Spain, Tarifa. The name is of Moorish origin. It was the custom of the Moors to watch from this point all merchant ships going into or coming out of the midland sea and to levy duties according to a fixed scale on all merchandise contained therein. This duty was called from the place where it was levied "tarifa," or tariff.

Arnold's Comment.

As school inspector Matthew Arnold was examining a class in geography one day, and, holding up the poker with which he was about to stir the fire, he asked if any child could tell him where it was manufactured. There was a long silence, broken by the schoolmistress, who remarked nervously that such information was not mentioned in Cornwell's geography. "No," said Arnold: "Cornwell's an ass!"

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, uric acid, catarrh of the bladder and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work and in private practice, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all good druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, address, Binghamton, N. Y., on

SACRED CROCODILES.

The Famous Shrine and the "Labyriath" In Egypt.

The crocodile, one of the most sacred animals of the east, has given its name to several ancient sites. Of the various cities of crocodiles the names of which have been handed down to us by Herodotus, Pliny and Strabo, perhaps the most striking was the "Crocodilopolis" of the ancient Egyptian province of Fayum, which, according to tradition, was built by that pharaoh who "made the lives of the children of Israel bitter with hard service." This province lies within an almost complete circle of hills—a little oasis in the midst of the desert, where roses and grapes mingle with figs and olives and luxuriant palm trees grow almost into forests. Its capital is Medinet, and a little to the north of the city are a number of irregularly shaped mounds. Beneath these are the ruins of the pharaoh built "Crocodilopolis," the "City of Crocodiles," later called Arsinoe and the shrine of the sacred crocodile of the neighboring Lake Moeris, which was then 450 miles in circumference. This lake held the sacred crocodiles, and as each died in turn it was buried in one of the 1,500 underground sepulchers of the world famed "labyrinth" at hand, side by side with the embalmed bodies of successive pharaohs.

PERIL IN ATHLETICS

PHYSICAL EXERCISE SHOULD BE TAKEN IN MODERATION.

Muscle Building Is Not Necessary to Good Health, and Severe Training Weakens the Heart and Nerves and Lowers Vitality.

Once beyond the bounds of moderation, physical exercise and physical training not only weaken the heart for a lifetime, predispose to pneumonia, cause pulmonary tuberculosis and make extra possible a dozen other ills, but they unfit a man from being the ideal husband and father.

Dr. Robert E. Coughlin of Brooklyn, says the New York Times, has been collecting statistics upon and following the careers of athletes for years. He examined the contestants in amateur boxing matches, and the abnormal development of the best of them struck him. Magnificently developed as to their muscles, they were far from being men of normal health and strength. Beyond a certain point the muscular training was at the expense of their vitality. It took away from the heart and lungs. There was scarcely an organ of the system not affected and made less efficient. It seemed worth while to explore further into the cause.

"In regard to the benefit to be derived from athletics," says the doctor, "one has only to remember the physiology of exercise to become convinced of the fact that exercise, per se, may be very beneficial. The point to bear in mind is to advise the person to stop before fatigue becomes evident. We can do this readily when the athlete is interested in games for the mere exercise, but such advice cannot be offered when his aim is to excel in an athletic contest. Here is where athletics do great harm, and it would be a safe rule to advise against all forms of athletics in the nature of a contest.

"Athletics may be said to be beneficial until the heart begins to be markedly hypertrophied. This is the danger signal."

Hypertrophied is the medical man's way of saying enlarged—that is, the walls or muscles of the heart increase in size. Though this is the "danger signal," there is no real danger here, only a warning. The danger comes when, in consequence of additional exertion, the heart dilates, its interior grows larger, displacing the delicate machinery, causing the valves to leak. Then come "murmurs," and though a man may live for years with weakened valves he may die any day and any moment.

Does physical exercise, then, build up the general health and make a better man out of a man? There seems to be a question, with some scientific men saying today very emphatically, "Not unless that physical exercise is very moderate indeed."

Health, one of the big English authorities (Sir Michael Foster) puts it, does not exist. It is like happiness. Each has a goal or limit which, while seemingly attainable, eludes perfect possession. The body consists of a number of mechanisms which have the closest and most exact relations, and as they approximate to harmony there is health, but when disordered there is ill health.

Not necessarily does a man by physical training and much exercise become a better man, nor does he even get better health. Here is the striking evidence of it in scientific statements of the day.

To obtain good health, muscle building is not a necessity. One cannot judge of a person's health by the size and hardness of the muscles. We have seen that the converse may be true. To obtain health one must not be in a perfectly trained condition owing to the effects of severe training on the nervous system. There is no evidence to prove that athletics and muscle building improve the constitution. One should always keep in mind the fact that built up or hypertrophied muscle has a tendency to degenerate. The heart, being a muscular organ, shares in this tendency.

But the athlete is a man who goes through the severest physical strain and training. If he boxes, runs, is a gymnast, a football player, a wrestler, an expert at baseball or tennis, any sport requiring violent exercise and the constant keeping in trim for it, all the rest of his body is sacrificed for the overdevelopment of these special muscles, and the rest of it must somehow suffer.

All the body should develop together, as it were. Body and mind should be built up evenly. If overathletics does nothing else it produces a wearing and tearing nervous strain.

When it comes to the actual athlete, the man who specializes on some form of physical force and muscle power, these conditions are greatly aggravated. Severe athletic training and muscle building, it is now an acknowledged fact of science, are at the expense of the nervous and glandular systems.

"An experienced athlete," says one authority, "gave as his opinion that a man sacrifices a certain part of his life every time he enters a contest of any kind. He also said that a man when 'fit,' as expressed by athletes, is in an abnormally nervous condition. In other words, he can never remain at ease for a minute at a time and, like the caged lion, is forever on the move during his waking moments. It has been noticed by observers that athletes are often sickly and particularly susceptible to constipation and appendicitis."

SEE THE DERBY ONCE.

The Horse Race Incident Is by Long Odds the Least of It.

It is a matter of twenty odd miles from London to Epsom, in whose vicinity the historic race course lies, and samples of almost every curious thing there is in old England are to be seen along the various roadways. If there were but one road to Epsom, half of the procession that starts from London on the morning of Derby day would be left struggling in the outskirts of the city long after the great race had been run. But there are many, though none too many, since each is packed to the point of discomfort from early dawn until far into the night.

The Derby is a thing for the foreigner to see once and ever afterward to hold in grateful memory, because it is an experience that could never repeat itself to the satisfaction of the mere onlooker. Primarily it is, of course, a horse race, but the race, which occupies such a fleeting breath of time, is by long odds the least of it. Otherwise it is an expression of Britishism such as may not be witnessed upon any other occasion. It is the one day in the year, I believe, on which English society levels itself out upon the first principle of the brotherhood of man. "Rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief, doctor, lawyer, merchant, chief," without distinction and with perfect camaraderie, come together with the evident if unconscious purpose of proving that to be merely British is all that any true Briton can reasonably desire.

The foreigners are the only spectators. Everybody else is "in the cast," as it were, and it is difficult to judge whether the king, with his nobles and their bevy of brilliantly attired ladies, or the coster in his donkey cart, with "the missus and the kids," is the leading actor. Perhaps it would be better to call it a variety show and to decide that each in his "turn" is a star in his own particular performance.—Leslie's Weekly.

MOHAMMED'S BLOODY HAND

History of the Imprint on a Pillar In the Church of St. Sophia.

In the course of our exploration in Constantinople we visited a building in an obscure and poor quarter of Stamboul inhabited solely by Mohammedans.

It is called the Mosque Kahrie, but it is or was a church dedicated to the Blessed Virgin. The beauty of the mosque ceiling and walls not even centuries of neglect have been able to obliterate.

When we returned to the great Church of St. Sophia, now a mosque, and saw again the print of the bloody hand of Mohammed, which is pointed out high up on the wall of that once Christian church, we understand its significance better than we had at first sight.

Mohammed II, after advancing his outposts gradually and stealthily had finally, as if in a night, crossed the Bosporus from Asia and raised his forts on the European side of the stream. Just the day before, on a trip up the Bosporus, we had seen the ruins of those fortifications.

The rulers of the city had protested in vain against this encroachment. When the Moslems finally attacked the city the Christians fled in terror to St. Sophia. An ancient legend, firmly believed, promised that this sanctuary was absolutely safe.

Mohammed proved the fallacy of their trust by breaking down the doors, murdering those who had sought safety there, men, women and children—so many of them that finally, forcing his horse over the great pile of dead bodies, away up on the side of a pillar he planted his bloody hand on the clear wall in token of his victory over the Christians. That gory hand still overshadows the fairest portion of southeastern Europe.—Rosary Magazine.

Warning Him.

"I am sorry," said the poet, "but I am obliged to call your attention to the fact that a line in one of my recent compositions was entirely perverted and the meaning painfully distorted by the compositor."

"Young man," replied the editor, "that compositor has gone through more poems than you ever wrote or even read. He has put in his life setting up poetry of all kinds, spring and autumn styles and heavier goods for winter. He may have changed your poem, but when you say he harmed it you presume. When a man of his experience makes up his mind to change a piece of poetry a person in your position should not attempt to criticise."

The Art of Glove Cutting.

The cutters of the great glove houses in Brussels and in France earn even higher wages than the cutters of the most fashionable tailors in London and New York. So difficult is this art of cutting gloves that most of the principal cutters are known to the trade by name and by fame, and the peculiar knives which they use in the business are so highly prized that they are handed down from generation to generation as heirlooms.

The Poultry Business.

Billfuzz—See that sharp looking man over there? He has made a fortune out of the poultry business. Jubb—Is that so? He doesn't look like a man who raised chickens. Billfuzz—Raise chickens? Of course he doesn't. He writes books telling other people how much they can make by raising them.

"Moran is Unfit"

Read What Leaders of John B. Moran's Own Party Say of Him:

"We feel obliged to state our conviction of the fundamental unfitness of Mr. Moran to fill the high and dignified office of governor of Massachusetts. The obligations of good citizenship are superior to those of partisanship; we are citizens of an honorable commonwealth charged with our share of the duty of maintaining and advancing her standards of government even before we are Democrats."—J. A. Sullivan, Josiah Quincy, Arthur Lyman, J. C. Burke, E. L. Arundel, Nicholas J. Skerrett.

Mr. Moran as a Leader.

Congressman John A. Sullivan, a member of Mr. Moran's own party, says that Moran's assumption of leadership is certainly ominous of consequences, and he likens it to being whirled madly about in the delirious circles of the tarentella while in the grasp of a political acrobat.

DO YOU WANT A POLITICAL ACROBAT IN THE GOVERNOR'S CHAIR?

Mr. Moran as a Public Official.

Speaking again Mr. Sullivan says: "If his manner of conducting grand jury proceedings is to be taken hereafter as the official standard in Massachusetts well may those honest citizens who value reputation above all things else exclaim: 'God Save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.'"

The secretary of the Boston Bar Association shows that during Moran's term as district attorney the cases pending have more than doubled, the indictments pending have more than trebled. His predecessor reduced the number of cases pending more than one-half. He has released 100 more criminals than his predecessor. Many less cases have come to successful conviction. The expenses of the office have been increased 30 per cent.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Mr. Luther A. Ford has sold his "Wayside Farm" on Ridge street to Mr. William Erwin of Arlington, who took possession Nov 1st. This farm is a part of the old Hutchinson domain. The house was built by Mr. William A. Dodge, who married Elizabeth W. Hutchinson, in the early 40's, and occupied by him some ten years when he moved to the village where he is pleasantly remembered by the older residents. Here he lived in the "Gardner Symmes house," then standing on Church street but since moved to Wildwood street. After Mr. Dodge moved away from "the hill" the place passed into the possession of Jacob H. Hutchinson. It has been occupied six or eight years by Mr. Ford. We are sorry to lose such good neighbors and our best wishes attend them. Mr. Ford has bought a stock farm in Bedford and is already in the enjoyment of its fertile acres.

Mrs E. M. Messenger entertained a few of her friends on Hallowe'en night. The occasion was observed in a most befitting manner and sports appropriate to the night were indulged in after all had passed before the spooks and ghosts. The decorations were weird faces with electric eyes, flowers, nuts, etc. Mrs. Theo. P. Wilson won first prize in the doughnut contest— a witch's broom—ard Miss Bertha Fisher won the card prize of another broom. Plenty of sweet cider and other goodies served to the guests kept in mind the harvest festival.

The annual meeting of the Winchester Equal Suffrage League was held at 64 Church street on October 24 at 3 p. m. The President, Mrs. L. L. Blood, after many years of faithful service feeling unable to longer continue, tendered her resignation which was reluctantly accepted. A ballot was presented containing the following names:—For President, Miss Sarah M. Nowell; Vice Presidents, Mrs. Blood, Mrs. Bunting, Mrs. Rowe; Treasurer, Miss Annie C. Nowell; Secretary, Miss Maria Murdock. All were elected.

The Medford Mercury has ascertained the fact that Mr. James M. Marden, the Democratic nominee for Senator for this district, is a resident of Roxbury and that he has taken up a temporary residence in Medford in order to become elegible for this office. On which fact the Mercury comments of as follows: "Can it be possible that the Democratic party of the Sixth Middlesex Senatorial District, embracing such populous, flourishing and influential places as Winchester, Woburn, Arlington, Stoneham, Wakefield and Medford, is reduced to such an extremity that it is obliged to import a candidate from Boston in order to get a man suitable for the nomination for Senator?"

Our neighbor Winchester is confronted with a grade crossing problem, and is embarrassed by riches in the way of plans proposed for its solution. Woburn has grade crossings, but at present there seems to be little talk of abolishing any of them. The crossing on Main street is liable to be the scene of an accident, and as the city grows it becomes more and more likely. At the present time this crossing could be done away at a less cost than at a future time. Let us fall into line and join the anti grade crossing crusade.—[Woburn News.

Miss Ruth Lawrence gave a Hallowe'en party to 40 of her young friends Wednesday evening. The lower floor of the house was transformed into a camp in the woods. Fir trees, a camp fire, cushions and a tent where dwelt a wonderful witch who delighted the young people with fortunes and stories made a pretty scene. The ghost was on the front piazza to greet the guests, and pumpkin faces smiled from all over the house. The sports were those suited to the occasion and the good old fashioned Virginia reel wound up a very jolly evening. Refreshments were served consisting of nuts, cornballs, cake, etc. Miss Kate Robbins was fine in her make up of the witch.

THE WINCHESTER STAR.

VOL. XXVI. NO. 19. WINCHESTER, MASS., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1906. PRICE, FIVE CENTS

WINCHESTER'S ATTRACTIONS UNEQUALLED.

The view of the "man in the street" that Winchester real estate is "all right" finds confirmation from several authoritative sources. "To one who knows this beautiful suburban town," says a well known real estate dealer, with its hills and plains, its lakes and streams, its forests and fields, the reason for its steady and continuous growth is clearly manifest, for no town within the limits of greater Boston, if in the commonwealth, has greater, if equal, natural attractions. To its natural advantages a liberal town policy has added an excellent and abunddant water supply, good roads, fine public buildings and a fine park and playground. These, with schools second to none in the state, churches of all denominations and clubs of various kinds to meet the social demands of all, leave little wanting to make the place an ideal one for those seeking a thome outside the bustle of the city.

"That this is recognized by some is attested be the new houses erected yearly, largely by persons who purchase land and build to satisfy their needs and fancies. There has never been a boom in Winchester real estate; neither has there been much speculative building or development. A few high-class houses, usually two or three yearly, have been built by a prominent citizen, who finds much pleasure, if not adequate profit, in erecting houses that are testimonials of exquisite taste and skilful workmanship These places find a ready market, and become the homes of well-to-do people who become permanent citizens.

"The growth of Winchester has been slow, but steady and continuous. In the year ending with April, 1906, according to the assessors list, but 20 new dwelling houses were erected in the town. The report for the current year will probably show about the same number. At present there are no indications that 1907 will bring other than normal development and growth. Land values have steadily increased, but are not yet high, and many choice lots are available at prices that should attract the home builder."

Even more enthusiastic regarding Winchester is Mr. George Adams Woods of 15 State street, member of the real estate exchange. "Winchester," he said, "situated eight miles from Boston, within three quarters of an hour by trolley and 16 mintues by train, offers the ideal suburban home to the man who wants to live in a real country and yet be within easy distance of his office. The growth and development of Winchester have been along gradual, natural lines, with a sure and steady appreciation. The newer part of the town, known as the West side, has been developed in the past ten years under careful restrictions, and the properties vary in size from 10,000 square feet to three acres, and in value from $6000 to $60,000.

"The East side of the town is the older part, lying on a side hill, with a beautiful westerly exposure and charming places. Throughout the town almost every one owns his own home, there being, out of some 1600 houses, not 10 houses to rent at the present time.

"The sale of Rangeley, which consists of a park of 26 acres, the very heart of the town, the development of which is to be carried out on a broad and conservative basis; the opening up of Myopia hill, in lots of from one to four acres, and the acquisition by the Country Club of its new grounds, are some of the more noticeable developments which are an indication of progress in the very best possible direction.

"The town is first and foremost, a place of residence for people of moderate means, and every citizen of Winchester takes the greatest possible interest in his home place and in the town as a whole. This means a permanent interest which is extremely desirable socially. Newcomers are cordially welcomed as permanent acquisitions and are at once included in the various interests.

"The means of communication with Boston are excellent, there being 41 trains daily each way, and two lines of electrics, with cars running every 15 minutes each way. The town is one of the most healthful places in the state, has churches of all denominations, a social club of 200 members and a waiting list, a country club which owns some 60 odd acres, and has one of the prettiest nine-hole golf courses in New England, and a boat club of the most attractive architecture, built of stone and cement, with storage for over 70 boats and canoes. Winchester has its own system of water, with reservoirs entirely surrounded by the Fells, the metropolitan sewerage system, good roads and fine schools. Land is worth from 15 cents to 50 cents per foot and prices have doubled in the last ten years.

"Take it all in all, no place offers the country home to compare with New England, no state has such attractive suburbs as Boston and no town out of Boston can surpass Winchester for the man who wants a home of moderate cost."—[Boston Herald.

THE SINGING EVANGELIST.

Mr. Lawrence Greenwood, singing evangelist, who begins a series of meetings in the Methodist Church, Winchester, this coming Sunday, comes fresh from a very interesting and unique work in the city of Lynn. In the early summer a series of open air meetings was opened by several of the churches and conducted on the grounds of the Friends Meeting House, where hundreds of people met through the entire season. So widespread became the interest in this particular effort that it was deemed best to continue the meetings if some available place could be secured. The manager of the Lynn Theatre was addressed on the subject, and seeing the general drift and influence of the meetings made it possible for the committee to continue them in that place. The pastors of the city were called together, plans set betore them for making this a meeting of the people, by the people and for the people, and with enthusiastic unanimity decided to unite in the movement. Ever since the opening of the series the theater has been taxed to its utmost capacity, and people of all grades have been moved to take the stand for righteousness. Meetings have been held at noon in the shops and factories, and in every direction there are words of thankfulness expressed for the good that the meetings have done. A peculiar element in the meetings has been the work among the men. Mr. Greenwood is no stranger to this section of New England, nor to Winchester, having conducted a few services in the open air during the past summer under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. on Winchester Common. Mr. Greenwood was formerly associated with Rev. B. Fay Mills, whose work fifteen years ago in Winchester was so favorably known. Mr. Greenwood combines both preacher and singer, and his visit to Winchester is expected to bring refreshment to all who attend the services. While held in the Methodist Church, everybody will be welcome. The meetings will begin next Sunday, November 11, morning and evening, and during the week every evening except Saturday.

ST. JOSEPH'S PARISH.

Montvale for the first time in its history has a resident priest, Rev. P. T. Higgins, last Sunday taking charge of St. Joseph's parish, which has been set apart from St. Mary's parish of Winchester.

Fr. Higgins addressed the children, who in the afternoon, to the number of 80, received the Sacrament of Confirmation from Bishop Brady.

For the present Fr. Higgins is making his home at the residence of Mrs. Annie Martin, 97 Washington street. It is his intention to build a rectory in Montvale, the work to commence as soon as a site is purchased.

As a local historian not many people can beat Arthur E. Whitney, judging from his interesting article in the STAR last week. Manner and matter were both interesting.—[Woburn Journal.

THE ELECTION IN WINCHESTER.

Fine Weather and Interest Brings Out Large Vote.

Republicans Carry Ticket By Large Margin.

Eleven hundred and forty-eight votes were polled in this town in Tuesday's election. The fine weather and the interest in the contest for Governor were both responsible for the largest vote since the record ballot of the presidential year—1904, when 1351 votes were cast. At that time the voting strength of the town was some 100 more than at this election, it being 1459 this year. The honor for the largest individual vote went to Samuel W. McCall of this town, candidate on the Republican ticket for Representative in Congress for this district. Mr. Whitfield Tuck of this town, candidate for Representative in the General Court, received 315 votes to his opponent's—Barker B. Howard of Medford—706.

The polls were opened at six o'clock by George Adams Woods, chairman of the Selectmen, who read the warrant and voting commenced. The vote was steady throughout the day. At nine o'clock 709 votes had been cast against 761 in 1904, and until just before the polls closed at half past four the balloting was continuous. The vote cast last year was 967.

The Republican voters carried everything on the ticket in town and polled a large vote, the majority of those not visiting the polls being of other parties.

Owing to the fact that Moran's name appeared upon the ballot under three different political designations, when his name was marked more than one time the return was made of one vote, but with no political designation, accounting for the 20 undesignated votes given him.

The tellers and ballot clerks for the election were Charles Rooney, Frederick Browning, Eben Caldwell, John F. O'Connor, T. Price Wilson, W. F. Fitch, Robert Sullivan, Dr. J. F. McCarthy, Edwin Robinson, William Adriance and Chas. A. Grant, Edw. O'Connor. The election officers and selectmen were served with a substantial collation at noon by Dill.

ELECTION NOTES.

The Calumet Club was the rendezvous of almost the entire male population of the town Tuesday night. Through the courtesy of Mr. Charles F. Ames, a special wire was run to the club house, and until twelve o'clock the returns were given to the large crowd of members and guests. During the evening a substantial lunch was served.

The large vote given to Hon. Samuel W. McCall was no surprise and almost every citizen testified to his popularity by voting for him. He easily led the ballot.

Mr. Edward A. Brackett was seen at the polls Tuesday as active and spry as ever.

The ballot box needs repairing. For several years past it has been erratic, registering about one in five and occasionally refusing to accept a ballot.

Marden of Medford, candidate for senator, was at the polls Tuesday noon.

Col. N. A. Richardson was not seen at the polls this year. His regularity of past years caused his absence to be very noticeable. His health, however, would not permit his voting.

WEDDED 40 YEARS AGO.

Surrounded by seven surviving children of the 12 who had blessed their married life, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Burke Saturday evening received the congratulations of a host of friends and relatives who joined with them in the observance of the 40th anniversary of their wedding. The affair took place at the home of their daughter, at 82 Middlesex street.

Stephen Burke and Annie Joyce were married in county Galway, Ire., 40 years ago Saturday. A few weeks later they crossed the ocean to their new home and settled in Gloucester. For upward of 40 years he has followed the sea until within a year, when he was induced to give up his fishing trips much to his regret.

Mr. Burke is 61 years old and a fine specimen of rugged manhood. His wife is one year his junior. Both are remarkably active and in good health. Both come of long lived families, among whom are many who passed the age of four score.

Their seven children who are living were present that evening and jointly presented the old folks with a purse of money. They are Mrs. Edward McKenzie and Miss Josie Burke of this town, Mrs. John McCarthy, Mrs. Agnes O'Donnell, Mrs. Joseph Celeste, Mrs. James McDermott and Stephen Burke, all of South Boston, where Mr. and Mrs. Burke resided for many years.

VISITED BIG BAKERY.

About fifteen Winchester merchants visited the big Ward Corbey Bakery at Cambridgeport on Wednesday evening upon invitation of that company. The journey each way was made in a tally-ho, the start being at 7, and the return at 12 o'clock. An inspection of the large building and a collation were enjoyed by the party.

Among those who took the trip were:

J. W. Thompson,
F. M. Melvin,
J. C. Adams,
W. O. Blaisdell,
Albert McLellan,
Geo. Dupee,
Chas. S. Adams,
Fred Galiant,
Mr. Evans,
Nathan Blaisdell,
Percy Johnson,
Chas. Haggerty,
J. Winslow Richardson,
Harry Morrill,
O. W. Hinds.

The Winchester firemen are to hold their annual ball and hose coupling contest on Dec. 7th. Preparations for the event are now under way.

BASKET BALL.

In the first two inter-class basket-ball games played Wednesday, 1909 defeated 1910 16 to 13 and 1907, 1908 18 to 11.

The Freshman surprised everybody with their good showing, the score at the end of the first half being 8 to 8, though in the end 1909 won out on superior team play. Capt. Seeley of 1909 was the star of the game making 11 of his team's 13 points, his shooting on free tries from fouls being exceptionally fine. Capt. Cameron and Foster played the best for 1909.

The summary:

1909		1910
Cameron (Capt.) lf		rg Main
Foster	lf
Collins rf		lg Sheridan
Foster c		c (Capt.) Seeley
Cameron c
Ames lg		rf Hamilton
DeBussey rg		lf Tuck

Goals made by Cameron 3, Foster 3, Collins 2, Seeley 3, Tuck. Goals from fouls, Seeley 5. Fouls called on Collins 5, Cameron 3, Ames, Seeley. Referee and Umpire, Crawford. Timer, Petts. Time, 15 minute halves.

The game between 1907 and 1908 was won by the former on its superior team work and the latters lack of "covering up." The game was at no point as close as that of 1909 and 1910. Goff of 1908 caged the most baskets, while Grant and Atherton played best for 1907.

The summary:

1907		1908
Atherton lf		rg Barr
Grant rf		lg Thompson (Capt.)
Larivee c		c Howe
Webber (Capt.) lg		rf Welch
Little rg		lf Howe

Goals made by Grant 9, Atherton 3, Webber, Little, Larivee. Goal from foul, Goffe. Fouls called on, Webber, Grant, Welch, Barr. Umpire and referee, Crawford. Timer, Petts. Time, 15 minute halves.

W. H. S. NOTES.

The inter-class basket ball game for the championship will be played next Wednesday afternoon, between 1907 and 1909, the former having defeated 1908, and the latter 1910. The teams will line-up: 1907, Atherton left forward, Grant right forward, Larivee centre, Webber (Capt.) left guard and either Little or Symmes right guard; 1909, de Bussy right guard, Ames left guard, Foster centre, Collins right forward and Cameron (Capt.) left forward.

At the regular meeting of the Athletic Association, Tuesday, the secretary's and treasurer's reports for the last two months were read and accepted.

Spanish Politeness.

It has been said that the French are the most polite people in the world, writes our lady correspondent in San Sebastian, but I do not think any one who really knows them will agree. However, they have some charming little ways, and when they are rude it is because they are deep down thoroughly selfish. My personal opinion is that the Spaniard is about the most delightfully polite person one can possibly encounter. If you ask your way in the street of some ordinary woman, she will almost certainly go out of her way to accompany you down the street and to carefully put you on the right road. They are very cheerful and gay, but they are never vulgar, as we understand the word in England. Even the men in the streets who stand and frankly stare at a pretty girl do it in a light hearted, pleasant way which does not give offense. As to the manners of Spanish men belonging to the best society, they are almost perfect. Watch a Spaniard of distinction address his mother or any elderly lady and you will see a manner which is tender and caressing and at the same time exquisitely protective. — London Tribune.

An Unexpected Owner.

Nearly all the giddy youth of the neighborhood attended the charity bazaar, and one by one they drifted to a stall where a tiny, shapely, scented gray kid glove reposed on a satin cushion. Attached to the cushion was a notice written in a delicate feminine hand, which ran, "The owner of this glove will, at 7:30 this evening, be pleased to kiss any person who purchases a sixpenny ticket beforehand."

Tickets were purchased by the score, and at 7:30 a long row of sheepish, not to say doggish, young bloods were assembled outside the stall.

Then, punctual to the moment, old Tom Porson, the local pork butcher, who weighs twenty stone and is almost as beautiful as a side of bacon, stepped to the front of the stall.

"Now, young gents," he said in his best "buy, buy, buy," tones, "this 'ere glove belongs to me. I bought it this morning. Now I'm ready for you. Come on. Don't be bashful. One at a time!"

But nobody came on.—London Telegraph.

Hard Water.

A farm woman in Pennsylvania once said to me, "I never hear any one sing 'The Old Oaken Bucket' without a shudder." For fifteen years she had done the cooking and washing for a family of six with no other water supply than what she had hauled out of a well nearly thirty feet deep by means of a bucket. Baths in winter were almost out of the question, and even in the summer they were regarded as an occasion of more than ordinary importance, for which preparations had to be made hours ahead of the great event. A cubic foot of water weighs sixty-two and a half pounds, and in all these years the number of tons this woman had lifted had made poetical allusions to "iron bound" and "moss covered" buckets a good deal like saying "rope" to a man about to be hanged.—Farming.

Johnson on Actors.

Although he wrote plays, Johnson claimed not to be fond of players. When Boswell suggested that we might respect a great actor Johnson cried: "What, sir, a fellow who claps a bump on his back and a bump on his legs and cries, 'I am Richard III?' Nay, sir; a ballad singer is a higher man." No doubt Boswell had Garrick in mind when, after hearing Johnson say that he looked on players as no better than dancing dogs, he timidly suggested, "But, sir, you will allow that some players are better than others." "Yes, sir, as some dogs dance better than others."

A Black Mast.

Most trading steamers which wish to study economy and effect have their aft mast painted black. If they did not the mast would soon be sullied by smoke and would look very dirty in consequence. The smoke from the vessel's funnel is carried backward by the forward motion of the vessel, and the mast would look grimy if it was painted any other color than black.

Let Him Right In.

A minister, addressing a meeting of the London Bible society, of which the Marquis of Anglesey was president, said that St. Peter refused to admit the marquis as a peer or as Wellington's old officer or lord lieutenant of Ireland or the leader of the Horse guards at Waterloo, but let him right in as soon as he knew that he was president of the Bible society.

Be First In Attack.

An old Scotch drillmaster, so the story goes, taught his pupils the art of thrusting with the saber until they were quite proficient.

"Now teach us to parry," said they.

"Oh," said he, "you must do the thrusting and let your enemy do the parrying."

Her Opportunity.

Wife—I had better take that hat for 45 shillings. Husband—But I've only got £2 with me now. I'll have to owe them the odd 5 shillings. Wife—Oh, then, I'll take this one for 3 guineas. Five shillings is too insignificant a sum to owe.

What Saved Him.

Miss Opper—I will never marry you. Derkelton—Oh, heavens, I would blow my brains out if we were not in the midst of the busy season and I have so much to do!—Fliegende Blatter.

LONGER HOURS FOR ELECTRIC POWER.

In this district the power circuit of this Company will be in operation hereafter from six in the morning until ten at night. During all the time between these hours the electric current will be available by users of electric power at a touch of the switch without further trouble or any delay. If power is to be wanted at any other time of the night a request to us by telephone or otherwise will secure full service and supply.

This change means an increase of facilities and a further accommodation to users of electric power.

If you use power at all you ought to learn of the convenience, safety, reliability and economy of electric power. Will you write our Sales Agent, or call, or telephone "Oxford 1150, Collect?"

The Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston, 3 Head Place, Boston.

VACCINATION.

The question as to how long certificates issued by physicians declaring a patient unfit for vaccination shall be valid may be tried in the courts of the county soon. There are 60 such certificates in the hands of the Rockland school board and some are a year or so old. The subjects of these have been notified that unless they have new certificates they cannot attend school, but their parents have declined to allow their children to cease their attendance and the matter has been turned over to the town counsel. The parents say the public statutes do not specify how long a certificate is valid and the school committee has taken the ground that while a certificate may be valid for a time, it does not follow that it is to stand for an indefinite period. —[Hingham Journal.

NEW B. & N. CAR.

The first of the semi-convertible cars sent over the Woburn section of the Boston & Northern attracted much attention as it passed through Winchester the latter part of last week. These cars will be used on the through line to Lowell and other distant places having connection with Boston.

The doors are opened by air pressure controlled by the motorman. When the door is opened the step is lowered and when the door closes the step folds up, eliminating the chances of being hurt by getting on a moving car.

USES OF ELECTRIC POWER.

The firm of Blanchard Kendall & Company have been using electric power, and in response to a recent inquiry they wrote the Edison Company as follows:

In reply to your inquiry as to how our new motor which you furnished us about a year ago has suited us, will say that it gives us entire satisfaction and we are entirely satisfied with the power which you have furnished us.

Yours truly,
BLANCHARD, KENDALL & Co.

Chief of Police McIntosh appeared in the local court last Thursday with a batch of seven youngsters alleged to have been "shooting craps" last Sunday on Cedar street, Winchester. Judge Johnson said he had no doubt of the guilt of the boys, who ranged in age from 13 to 17 years, but handed down a verdict of "not guilty" owing to the lack of absolute proof. This very matter illustrates the difficulty of the police. Knowing the prevalence of these outdoor crap games, of which you will hear people growling about the laxity of the police, yet the department finds difficulty in getting convictions. The court must be shown proof positive that the defendant is guilty —[Woburn Times.

A QUESTION OF AUTHORITY.

Arlington Advocate Scores Secret Societies in Schools.

How much truth there is in the printed interviews in the papers in regard to secret societies among the pupils of High schools in this vicinity, we of course cannot vouch for. But certain principles are involved in the controversy relative to these secret societies on which we have certain strong views. The attitude of pupils of these secret societies, as expressed in printed interviews in the papers, is entirely wrong and unwarranted. They say, to put it plainly that it is none of the business of the School Committee: that the societies cannot be investigated because they are secret and have no connection with school work. These young people are entirely wrong and their attitude shows that their training in home and school is more than wrong. In the first place they are the wards of the town or city wherever they may live. Citizens are taxed to pay for their education, not their parents, many of whom who have the largest number of children, only pay a poll tax of two dollars. The school committee represents the town that furnishes the money to meet this great expense of educating the young, therefore they are an august body and one of authority. They, backed by the town, are the only ones to establish the policy of our schools. If they say there shall be no secret societies in our public schools, that should end it.

Because children are brought up without restraint or discipline in homes and become a law unto themselves, is no reason why public institutions should recognize their presumptions. They are not free agents, for they are accepting the generous bounty of town and state, and in so doing are under certain obligations and restraints. They are not a law unto themselves in the school, if they are in their homes. It is in the power of the school board to stop anything which savors of insubordination. Any pupil who does any thing contrary to the rules of the school can be expelled from the privileges of the school. They can have the option of the great privilege of a free and broad education if they are willing to abide by the conditions—if not they can get out. This is the point and the issue in a nut shell.

We speak very strongly of this matter, as it bears so directly on so many others. The present rearing of children is breeding seditions and anarchy—the paramount importance of the individual doing as he pleases, no matter what his obligations or indebtedness are to others. Just think for a moment of the absurbidity of parents allowing young people whose ages vary from 14 to 18 years to become members of secret clubs. It is all wrong on the face of it. It is not in accordance with ethics, common sense or good taste. From our point of view it is rediculous to countenance secret societies in the public school. The college is quite another matter—they are not public institutions paid for by the community; their students are older and they are in a measure placed on their own responsibility, wherein as far as they do right they are free agents. The sooner public school children learn they have certain duties and obligations to others, the nobler and more helpful men and women they will make. The lack of discipline and home training is appalling and is a menace to the ideals of American citizenship. It is to be seen in the public schools, in the Sunday Schools and in public places, and infests every department of society.

THE COST OF A BOY.

Somebody has figured out that the average boy who is dependent upon his parents for a livelihood until he reaches the age of 21 years costs them four thousand dollars, says the Watertown Tribune Enterprise. On this basis of calculation a brood, for instance of six boys, would represent an outlay of $24,000 by the time they get away from the home roost. The question arises does it pay to raise boys and are there no other crops that would prove more profitable? If a boy turns out to be a cigarette fiend with a breath like a turkey buzzard and a laugh that would make the untutored donkey feel perfectly at home in his society and with an untrammeled and unconquerable desire to avoid work, it is safe to say that his parents might have invested their $4,000 at a much better advantage. But if the boy grows up to manhood with the lesson well learned that wealth and success grow on bushes watered by the sweat of one's brow the parents need not begrudge whatever they have spent on him, for he will be a source of increasing pride and joy to their hearts, and when they grow old and their hands tremble and their legs wabble and their step is slow and faltering they have two strong arms to lean upon and help them over all the rough places that lie in their twilight path.

TRADE AT HOME.

This is the time of year when the big mail order houses flood the country with elaborate, handsome catalogues quoting attractive prices on all kinds of goods, especially low prices on certain standard articles as "trade drawers" for other goods. In speaking of this the Quincy Patriots well says that in the majority of cases purchasers find out afterwards that the saving over buying at home, if any, is so small that it has been hardly worth the bother of sending. And there is the further important fact not to be lost sight of, that these mail order houses benefit our town not the least, either in paying taxes supporting local industries or giving employment to local workmen. It is a pretty good rule to follow: support those people who help to support you.

REDUCTION IN FARES.

The reduction in fares which the Boston & Maine is to put in operation the first of the coming year is of interest aside from the pecuniary benefits it will be to patrons of the road, in that it is entirely voluntary. It has not been ordered by any court or commission but is a concession on the part of the company to its patrons which it deems is warranted by business conditions. The reduction in passenger rates will amount to an average of one-half cent per mile and brings the fares to a flat two cent basis. All parts of the road's vast territory south of Bellows Falls, Vt., and Concord, N. H., will be affected by the change. This includes the great manufacturing cities, agricultural sections and tourists centers and practically every corner of New England will benefit by the new policy which will give to points distant from Boston the same two-cent rate that has been in force within the suburban district.

The Paragon park enterprise at Nantasket Beach this season has been a financial failure. It's debts are $55,000 and only $6,000 in cash ready to meet the obligations. The heaviest creditors, 175 in number, have ordered an investigation into the company's books. At a meeting of the creditors in Boston recently it was decided to commission an investigation committee who will look into the matter before taking action. Wm. Prior, of the firm of Johnson & Prior of Faneuil hall market, is chairman of this committee. This probe is to begin at once after which another session of creditors will be held. Mrs. Georgiana Miller, a creditor to the extent of $2 821, has asked for the appointment of a receiver. Paragon park was built and operated by the Eastern Park Construction Company, which also owns the Rockland House.

Your stomach churns and digests the food you eat an l it foul, or torpid, or out of order, your whole system suffers from blood poison. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea keeps you well. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. A. B. Grover.

The Sturgis law and its enforcement is said to have been a hard pill for Maine to swallow in some sections of the state. Three years ago there was a surplus of $35,500 in the treasury of Kennebunk County, and today it is said there is not one cent left of that surplus. Three years ago the county tax was $30,000 and the present year it is $47,000. It is claimed that the Sturgis law and its enforcement costs the people of Maine more than all the sheriffs of the counties in the state, and more than $100 a day, Sundays included. Kennebec County having exceeded its legal $10,000 debt limit Augusta banks have refused to loan it more funds.

Those misguided enthusiasts who are talking about the danger to this country from foreign immigration, will do well to consider the statement made in yesterday's papers that a new school has been started in the Back Bay district, and because there are no children in the neighborhood, will have to be discontinued, and compare it with the other fact that the city cannot build schools fast enough in the North end to accommodate the children.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one [illegible] for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Lincoln and His Beard.

It was a child who persuaded Abraham Lincoln to wear a beard. Up to the time he was nominated for president he had always been smooth shaven. A little girl living in Chautauqua county, N. Y., who greatly admired him, made up her mind that he would look better if he wore whiskers and with youthful directness wrote and told him so. He answered her by return mail:

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 19, 1860.

Miss Grace Bedell:

My Dear Little Miss—Your very agreeable letter of the 15th is received. I regret the necessity of saying I have no daughter. I have three sons—one seventeen, one nine and one seven years of age. They, with their mother, constitute my whole family. As to the whiskers, never having worn any, do you not think people would call it a piece of silly affectation if I were to begin it now? Your very sincere well wisher.

A. LINCOLN.

Evidently on second thought he decided to follow her advice. On his way to Washington his train stopped at the town where she lived. He asked if she were in the crowd gathered at the station to meet him. Of course she was, and willing hands forced a way for her through the mass of people. When she reached the car Mr. Lincoln stepped from the train, kissed her and showed her that he had taken her advice.—St. Nicholas.

The Arabs' Hasheesh.

"Intoxication from eating a dish of liver was once my portion," said an orientalist. "It happened in the Sahara. I was spending the winter at El Kantara. In February I made a caravan trip over the desert along the great caravan route that runs from Biskra to Timbuktu. The third day out we reached an oasis of date palms. We got coffee at the baked mud cafe. We dined on red fish and gazelle steak, and for an entree was served this infernal liver. It was liver powdered with kiff. Kiff is hasheesh. It is made of hemp, and it makes you drunk. The Arabs mix it with their tobacco, and they bread liver with it, and they drop it in coffee. Thus they eat, drink and smoke their kiff. I ate their kiff and imagined my arm to be a mile long. I thought my foot as big as a mountain. My voice, when I spoke, sounded in my ears like the roar of a thousand thunders. In a word, I was kiff drunk, and it was two days before I was fit to resume my journey across the gold colored sands."

Little Economies.

"I once made up my mind," said a London man, "that I would become the possessor of a good gold watch. I saved up the money for it in this way: When I felt like eating a shilling luncheon, as I often did, I kept it down to tenpence. I put the twopence saved toward my watch fund. You will hardly believe me, but with little economies like this I had in less than six months saved enough to buy my gold watch." "But," said a listener, "where is your gold watch? You are wearing a poor little gun metal thing." "Well," was the reply, "when I found how easily I could get along without shilling luncheons I concluded I could get along with a ten shilling watch instead of a ten pound one. So that the watch fund grew until it purchased for me my own house."—London Mail.

Duststorms That Bury Forests.

Travelers in Tibet describe the wonderful storms of dust that occur in Kashgaria, near the foot of the Kuen-Lun mountains. The dust in the air is sometimes so dense that complete darkness prevails. Occasionally rain falls during such a storm, but the raindrops evaporate during their descent, and the dust carried with them falls in lumps. Entire forests of poplar trees are buried in dust hillocks forty feet high. These deposits of dust are afterward moved on by the wind, but the trees that have been buried die, even after their disinterment.

A Beheading Stone.

The old beheading stone at Stirling, England, was protected in 1887 by public subscription, raised at the instance of the Stirling Natural History and Archeological society. It was then inclosed in an iron cage. There is another relic of public execution in Stirling in the museum of the Smith institute in that city. It is the bowl which the public executioner used when he went around the market taking a measure of meal from every farmer's sack.

Impossible Diagnosis.

"The boy has evidently been eating too much between meals," said the doctor.

"Nonsense!" replied the boy's father. "A boy can't eat in his sleep."

"How do you mean?"

"I mean that each of his meals begins when he gets up in the morning and ends when he goes to bed."—Philadelphia Ledger.

COLOR COMBINATIONS.

How They Were Cleverly Used In Exposing a Fraud.

In a large factory in which were employed several hundred persons one of the workmen in wielding his hammer carelessly allowed it to slip from his hand. It flew halfway across the room and struck a fellow workman in the left eye. The man afterward averred that his eye was blinded by the blow, although a careful examination failed to reveal any injury, there being not a scratch visible.

He brought a suit in the courts for compensation for the loss of half of his eyesight, and refused all offers of compromise. Under the law the owner of the factory was responsible for an injury resulting from an accident of this kind.

The day of the trial arrived, and in open court an eminent oculist, retained by the defense, examined the alleged injured member and gave it as his opinion that it was as good as the right eye.

Upon the plaintiff's loud protest of his inability to see with his left eye the oculist proved him a perjurer and satisfied the court and jury of the falsity of his claim. He did it simply by knowing that the colors green and red combined make black.

He prepared a black card, on which a few words were written in green ink. Then the plaintiff was ordered to put on a pair of spectacles with two different glasses, the one for the right eye being red, and the one for the left eye consisting of ordinary glass. Then the card was handed to him, and he was ordered to read the writing on it through the glasses.

This he did without hesitation, and the cheat was at once exposed. Owing to the effect which the colored glass must have had upon the green writing the sound right eye fitted with the red glass could not possibly distinguish the writing on the black surface of the card, while the left eye, which he pretended was sightless, was the one with which the reading had to be done.—London Standard.

THE SWISS ARMY.

Always Ready For War Service at a Moment's Notice.

The total population of Switzerland is rather less than half the population of London alone, yet the plucky little republic can throw into the field at a moment's notice four completely equipped and trained army corps to Germany's and France's twenty and England's nominal eight. In proportion to her population as compared with Switzerland, England should possess fifty.

Every ablebodied Swiss is, ipso facto, a member of the army from eighteen to forty-four, yet never does one hear the least complaint made by a Swiss of whatever social class at the trifling sacrifice of time that his military duties demand. To watch a Swiss battalion on its way to maneuvers in camp or on its return is to watch as contented, serviceable and cheerful a lot of men as one could wish to meet.

The only serious tax upon the time of the soldiers is the first two months of hard training as a recruit. Afterward sixteen days in camp every other year is all that is required of him. Between whiles he shoots with his comrades—every little village has its shooting range—because he loves it, and devotes a certain amount of time voluntarily to the physical exercises he is taught at school to keep himself fit. On first joining he is carefully examined as regards his suitability for this or that branch of the service and is drafted into that for which he is best fitted, and he invariably takes as great a pride in his regiment, battery or squadron as could any voluntarily enlisted man in our smartest corps at home.

The Swiss army comprises 100 battalions of infantry and twenty-four squadrons of cavalry, with the necessary ordnance and departmental corps, while the artillery includes forty-eight field batteries, ten batteries of position and two excellent mountain batteries.—Pall Mall Gazette.

First Thermometer.

The first thermometer was made in 1621 by a Dutch physicist named Cornelius Van Drebbell and consisted of a tube filled with air, closed at its upper end and dipping at its other extremity, which was open, in a bottle of nitric acid diluted with water. As the temperature rose or fell the air in the tube increased or grew less in volume and consequently the liquid descended or rose. This instrument is now known as an air thermometer, but as its measurements were based on no fixed principle it was of little use.

No Relative of His.

Duncan, aged two and a half, had been naughty. To punish him his mother tied him in his high chair and kept him there for one hour, by the clock. His father got home before the hour was quite up and asked the youngster why he was tied up.

"Father," replied Duncan, pointing an accusing finger at his mother, "I'm completely surprised at that lady."

Impoverished Soil

Impoverished soil, like impoverished blood, needs a proper fertilizer. A chemist by analyzing the soil can tell you what fertilizer to use for different products.

If your blood is impoverished your doctor will tell you what you need to fertilize it and give it the rich, red corpuscles that are lacking in it. It may be you need a tonic, but more likely you need a concentrated fat food, and fat is the element lacking in your system.

There is no fat food that is so easily digested and assimilated as

TYROLESE CUSTOMS.

Peculiar Manner In Which Proposals of Marriage Are Made.

There is an old custom prevailing among the Tyrolese regarding proposals of marriage. The first time a young man pays a visit as avowed lover he brings with him a bottle of wine, of which he pours out a glass and presents it to the object of his desires.

If she accepts it the whole affair is settled. Very often the girl has not yet made up her mind, and then she will take refuge in excuses so as not to drink the wine and yet not refuse it point blank, for that is considered a gross insult, proving that she has been merely trifling with the affections of her lover.

She will, for instance, maintain that the wine "looks sour" or that wine disagrees with her or that she is afraid of getting tipsy or that the priest has forbidden her to take any—in fact, she makes use of any subterfuge that presents itself at that moment.

The purport of these excuses is that she has not come to a decision and that the wine offering is premature.

This strange custom, dating very far back—according to one account, it was known as early as the ninth century—is called "bringing the wine" and is synonymous with the act of proposing.

Shy lovers, loath to make sure of their case beforehand, find it a very happy institution. Not a word need be spoken, and the girl is spared the painful "No" of civilization.

If any of the wine is spilled or the glass or bottle broken it is considered a most unhappy omen—in fact, there is a peasant's saying for an unhappy marriage, "They have spilled the wine between them."

Holy Saturday In Naples.

Naples celebrates in a curious manner Lent and the end of Passion week. Ropes are stretched from house to house across the streets in the ancient districts on the day of the carnival, and dolls made of rags, wearing the traditional Neapolitan costume and carrying a distaff and bobbin, are suspended from these ropes. At the feet of the spinner is attached an orange containing seven feathers, corresponding to the seven weeks of Lent. Each week one feather is plucked, so that only one remains at Holy Saturday. Then, as soon as the cannon of Fort St. Elmo and the church bells announce the noon hour and the resurrection of Christ, firecrackers, which have been tied in long strings to the orange at the dolls' feet are lighted, and the Quaresima figure explodes amid the cries of the crowd, wherein pious formulas and profane phrases alternate.

Blow of a Swordfish.

A remarkable illustration of the force with which a swordfish strikes a blow has recently been reported. While repairing a ship recently which had completed a long voyage in Pacific waters a sword was found which had successfully pierced a sheathing one inch thick, a three inch plank and beyond that four and a half inches of firm timber. It has been estimated that it would require nine strokes of a hammer weighing twenty-five pounds to drive an iron bolt of six-foot shape the same distance.—Shanghai Times.

Encouraged.

A schoolteacher gave this sweeping answer was made by a pupil in a history lesson:

"How many wars," she asked the pupil, "did England fight with Spain?"

"Six," the pupil answered.

"Six?" said the teacher. "Enumerate them, please."

"One, two, three, four, five, six," said the little girl.

Louis XV.'s Flawed Diamond.

"Comte," said Louis XV. to the Count de St. Germain, "will you help me to gain 4,000 francs? I have got here a diamond with a flaw, valued at 6,000 francs. It would be worth 10,000 if it were flawless." After having the diamond carefully weighed Louis handed it to the count, who examined it minutely and replied, "It might be done, sire, if you will allow me to keep the stone for a month." A month later he brought back the diamond almost inappreciably less in weight, but flawless. The jeweler to whom a friend of Louis offered it for sale gave 9,000 francs for it, but the king repurchased it as a curiosity.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, uric acid, catarrh of the bladder and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work and in private practice, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all good druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

The Election.

The large Republican vote on election day was brought about because of the Moran-Hearst peril—one of the greatest dangers before this country today. Many Democrats also voted against Moran because they did not believe in him. Not for many years have their been so many votes cast as on Tuesday, and then only in the case of the election of President. The total number of votes cast was 1148 out of a registration of 1449, and of these Gov. Guild had 759 and Moran 336. Last year the total vote was 966, Guild having 554 and Bartlett, 357, so that it will be seen that Moran ran behind the Democratic vote of a year ago. Guild's total would have have been larger, but for the loss to the town of about 100 voters during the present year.

The biggest surprise was the small vote given Deitrick in his contest against Congressman McCall, and the latter's handsome endorsement by his townsmen, he receiving 913 votes to 157 for Deitrick. When occasion is necessary the Republican voters can be depended upon, and Tuesday was their opportunity and they made the most of it.

Citizens Should Atttend.

The lack of interest by the citizens in the hearings thus far held in regard to the important matter of abolishing the grade crossing is to be regretted. The hearings thus far have been attended by less than a half dozen citizens who had no property interests in the matter, only the future of the town. The others present were landscape engineers and owners of property likely to be affected by any changes brought about through this important work. Citizens who have the future only of the town in view should be present at the next hearing which takes place Saturday, Nov. 17, in the Tremont Building, Boston, at 10 o'clock. This may be the last opportunity that the citizens will have to express their opinion Unless some interest is shown, there may be cause for deep regret later on. Don't let this important matter, which is to have such a potent bearing on the town's future, go by default.

WATER THE STREETS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Not only all of the merchants in town, but many private citizens would be very thankful for the watering cart service to start up again. The great quantity of fine dust blown about town for the past few weeks has ruined goods and house fittings alike. Why is it the same year after year, in spring and fall?

THE ONLY WAY.

Nothing has ever yet been devised which is capable of accomplishing on behalf of the family the protection afforded by a life insurance policy. The individual cannot insure himself for he cannot discount in himself the risk of death even within one year.

It is only through a great number of individuals grouped together, selected by medical examination, paying a rate that experience and statistics have proven sufficient and by the accumulation of the surplus payments at interest in gilt edged securities that the result can be absolutely obtained.

Every man owes it to himself to save, but if he has a family he owes it to them to insure.

The proposition is so self-evident that the least consideration should make it plain to every man's understanding. It is a duty which he takes upon himself when he marries or brings children into the world, and it is a duty that cannot be honorably avoided.

MR. F. H. RAND SPEAKS THE TRUTH.

At the annual dinner of the junior class, Bursar F. H. Rand of the Institute of Technology last Saturday evening called the attention of Technology men to the political situation and the interest as educated men that they should take in it. There were 137 men present. Mr. Rand said in part:

"The present is a most critical period in our national life. The great danger in this country today is the arraying of class against class, the poor against the rich. Left alone, each would work out its own salvation, but unfortunately we have even in our midst, men who are ever ready to seize the opportunities such conditions offer for their own advancement and to sow the seeds of discord and discontent that cannot but bring forth a crop of misery and sorrow.

"They and their journals, in their rabid denunciations of the accumulations of captial by thrift and brains, stop but little short of direct incitement to predatory and homicidal anarchy. Thousands are brought to believe that they are abused, and that the men who furnish the capital that makes possible the carrying on of the great industries that furnish them with higher wages and shorter hours than are enjoyed by the people of any other country are their worst enemies.

"What is the remedy? Is it to be found in the election to high office of such men as Moran and Hearst, or is it to be found in the proper restriction and control by Congress? These questions affect you whether you will or no, and as educated men, as worthy sons of Technology, you should so study them that your decision shall be intelligent and for the best interests of the community and the state."

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

Reports that come to us of the condition of society in San Francisco are enough to arouse good people to the importance of a more lively interest in temperance work. We can only quote a few items.

Law-abiding San Francisco is at the point of desperation. Murders, holdups thievery, invasions of private property have continued day and night in all sections of the city. The police seem unable to check lawlessness. Crime has been on the increase since the saloon traffic reopened after a spell of prohibition following the earthquake and fire.—[Los Angeles Herald.

The work of the thugs in San Francisco has caused all to arm themselves with revolvers, and yesterday the sales of small arm was estimated at 6,100. The dealers are of the opinion that 19,000 revolvers have been sold since the reign of terror started. An agitation for the general closing of the saloons is being started. The persons back of this movement want the bar-room shut until the carnival of crime is over..—[Los Angeles Examiner.

Four more crimes have been added in the last twenty-four hours to the list of murders, assaults, holdups and robberies, making since Aug. 1, an appalling total of seventy-eight.—[San Francisco Chronicle.

WHAT IS THE TROUBLE?

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

How much longer are the patrons of the Arlington line of electrics going to submit to the way this division is run, or rather I should say is not run, without making a vigorous protest? There seems to be nothing but trouble, trouble, trouble on this line all the time. For instance last Saturday a slight mishap befell one of the cars near the Country Club about three o'clock in the afternoon. The result was traffic was not restored again for nearly four hours. Of course accidents will happen on any road but the troubles which are constantly occurring on this line seem to indicate mismanagement somewhere. Would it not be a wise move for our "Town Fathers" to interview the Boston & Northern officials in Boston and demand this line be operated as successfully as the North Woburn division is?

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

As a light romantic comedy, "Monsieur Beaucaire" is unequalled. It caused endless delight as a novel, and it made Booth Tarkington's reputation at a bound. When Richard Mansfield saw the dramatic possibilities in it, a play was made from it at once by the author, and everywhere Mr. Mansfield was hailed as an ideal representative of the volatile hero. As presented at the Castle Square next week, "Monsieur Beaucaire" will lose none of its mirth-giving qualities. The title role will be played by Howell Hansel, and his personality and skill will enable him to follow successfully in his predecessor's footsteps. The cast will be a long one, and it will include the full membership of the Castle Square stock company, while the scenery will be magnificent.

For the following week, "Que Vadis" is announced with "The Prodigal Son," Hall Caine's famous drama, scheduled for the week thereafter.

The engagement is announced of Miss Lena Lariver of Thompson street and Mr. Telesphore Laliberte of Montreal.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Without intending any criticism of those who have held the position in the past, I move that the Chief of Police be appointed the gate ballot clerk at the next election.

How many more warnings does the Republican party need before it makes some of the desired changes? Can it figure out any great strength from the election results?

They say it was a big vote. Well, by the census of '05 there were in Massachusetts 674,174 men who could register, and as Tuesday's vote was about 425,000 it shows that only two thirds of the possible vote was recorded, leaving about 250,000 more to draw from. Even of the registered vote about 150,000 did not vote.

The Great Objector was present before the opening of the polls looking for trouole as usual and threatening to make it unless his views of things were carried out, but as the officials gave in to him I suppose he was happy. I would advise him however to read section 333 of chapter 11 of the Revised Laws before it is too late.

Don't waste any sentiment over the sewer board, Mr. Editor, it has been the fifth wheel to the coach for a long time and it was high time for a change. What we should do next is to consolidate the street department with the water and sewer department.

Now that Cross street is being macadamized the concrete sidewalks and paths about the Washington schoolhouse, which are not only unsightly but dangerous, should be repaired. Our School Committee ought to take more interest in its grounds for certainly slovenly looking ones do not educate upwards.

Grade crossing abolition hearing 17th inst, when more action should be demanded from those who have been backward heretofore. Progress has become slow and the hearings stupid and the Commissioners should be waked up by a louder call for action. What are they there for?

THE WORK OF "GYPSY SMITH"

Winchester, Nov. 7, 1906.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Permit one who has attended a number of the uplifting meetings now in progress in Tremont Temple at noon and in the evenings every day except Saturdays, under the lead of "Gipsy Smith," the poor lad whom God has raised from a nomad's tent to "sit among princes," to call the attention of any of your readers who have not yet realized the richness of the spiritual opportunity there presented to the privileges afforded by those meetings which are held under Interdenominational auspices. "Gypsy" Smith, whose manner is as fresh and breezy as the English moorlands from which he sprang, whose first music was that of the larks and linnets of the heather, speaks out of the fullness of his heart a gospel message old yet new, dealing fearlessly with sin, and calling to righteousness in tones of orphic sweetness. The genuineness and personal humility of this English visitor disarm criticism, while his appeal to men to accept Jesus Christ as their Saviour and to yield themselves unreservedly to God are proving irresistible to many hearts. Mr. Smith has a message, and it deserves a hearing.

He lays supreme emphasis on the things that are worth while. In the simple, thrilling addresses he makes, and in the songs that he sings, there is the note of reality, and the echo of a heavenly strain. It will do anybody good, no matter of what particular phase of belief he may be, to hear "Gipsy" Smith. This, let it be said again, is a rare opportunity, soon to go by—now is the time to improve it. Make time for this great interest. Let trivial pleasure-seeking, the questionable amusement of the moment, go, that this speaker from God, on the real ends of all living, may have a hearing, that the prize of eternal life be not lost for the sake of some poor worldly bauble. and that we may know that there is a prophet among us.

TEST FOR IMPURE AIR.

Most people judge whether air is bad or not by the smell, and in some instances only a strong smell convinces. Object lessons are always effective. By exposing lime-water in a room with bad air a chalk-like precipitate will form which will be startlingly impressive, especially to persons having some knowledge of chemistry. Care must be taken, however, to have pure lime water. The quality of the commercial product is uncertain.

To prepare it yourself, pour water enough for complete slacking over the lime, cover the dish carefully and allow it to stand 24 hours. Drain off water, cover the lime again and allow it to stand over night. Drain and cover the third time, and then remove the water carefully for use in experiments. Distilled water is preferable, and care must be taken to keep out all impurities by covering the dishes.

In making the test, expose a quantity of the lime-water in a convenient place under any source of impure air and keep the air in the room as still as possible. The carbon-dioxide, or suffocating carbonic acid gas that falls from a source of impure air will strike the lime-water and deposit a white powder in the dish. No such noticeable impurity results from electric lights, though the presence of persons in a room will make the air slightly impure even where electricity is used.

An Oversight.

The STAR disavows the unjust and suspicious inuendoes which appeared in last week's issue in a contribution signed "Observations" regarding Mr. Whitney's mecernary motives and selfish designs against the public good in successfully bringing about an agreement with the state authorities regarding the future flowage line of Mystic Lake. We cannot see how such an agreement (which is simply the peaceable ending of a long quarrel affecting the flowing of back-water onto the Whitney mill) is in any way a menace to the public or will ever cost the public one cent any more than Mr. Whitney installing a new water wheel or digging the washings out of his mill pond would "bleed" the public one dollar. In the press of business the article in question was not reviewed by the editor and he did not know its objectional character until after it was printed in the paper. The historical side of the long controversy is the only side interesting to or affecting the public and as such Mr. Whitney's original account of the settlement is just the kind of communications the STAR is glad to receive. We are sorry the article was so unfairly reviewed and Mr. Whitney's motives so unkindly and unjustly criticised by our correspondent without our notice and free cutting out. Of course the personal criticisms in the article do not affect Mr. Whitney's reputation among those who know him, but new people in town might be influenced by their bold aspersions. The STAR does not intend that any such personal matter shall appear in its columns Whenever it does, we candidly acknowledge the mistake and do our best to guard against a repetition.

ACTORS' NIGHT AT THE CASTLE SQUARE.

A series of special performances during the coming winter to be known as "Actors' Nights" begins this week with a complimentary testimonial to Miss Thais Lawton. It is not in the nature of a benefit performance, but rather a sort of "evening at home" in which the actor or actress will welcome the friends who care to testify their appreciation by their attendance. A card-bowl is placed in the lobby and all patrons who wish to "leave cards" for the host of the evening may be sure that their cards will reach their destination and be welcomed as an evidence of friendly interest. On "Miss Lawton's Night" all the members of the company, the attaches of the theatre and the hosts of friends of the talented leading woman of the company united in doing her honor. Miss Lawton, though a comparative stranger, has won golden opinions by her splendid work and even in the few weeks in which she has been here she has made many friends, who are anxious to show their appreciation of her worth. To make this occasion even more memorable every person was given an autographed artotype portrait of Miss Lawton, printed on India tint paper with her own account of herself written by her manager's request, and there was played for the first time in public the "Thais Lawton March" composed expressly for this occasion, dedicated to Miss Lawton. The second Actors' Night will be announced later.

Mrs. Charles Stillman was in Worcester for a few days last week.

MAUDE ADAMS AT THE HOLLIS.

Admirers of Miss Maude Adams, particularly for the delightful performance which she gives in J. M. Barrie's wonderful creation, "Peter Pan," cannot but be interested in the announcement that her present performances of "Peter Pan" at the Hollis St. Theatre, Boston, constitute the only New England appearances she will ever make as "Peter Pan." Miss Adams and Mr. Barrie's beautiful idyll of eternal youth are now so famous throughout the country and have been looked for with such expectancy ever since their run in New York all last season, that it seems almost a public service to circulate the fact that it will be only possible to see the "Peter Pan" of Maude Adams during the present Boston engagement.

For the convenience of out-of-town playgoers the performance of "Peter Pan" begins promptly at 8 evenings and finishes at 10 45. The Wednesday and Saturday matinees begin promptly at 2 and end at 4 45. This allows ample time for non-residents of Boston to see the entire performance with comfort. There will be but four more weeks of "Peter Pan" at the Hollis St. Theatre.

SPECIAL MATINEES AT PARK THEATRE.

Shoppers who have occasion to visit Boston next week will have an opportunity of seeing a remarkable new play under curious conditions, for the latest effort of Mr. C. Haddon Chambers, "Sir Anthony," which is described as a comedy dealing with suburban life is to be given its first performance on any stage next Monday afternoon, Nov. 12th, at the Park Theatre. During the week the play will be seen on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons only, and it is to be interpreted by a specially engaged company which will include William Norris, Herbert Standing, Verner Clarges, Joseph Twohey, Helen Lowell, Maud Crichton, Olive Wyndham, Mrs. Cooper Cliffs and Eda Bruna. The piece is under the direction of Liebler & Co., and has been given a splendid and appropriate scenic equipment.

MR. AMBROSE SURPRISED.

Friends of Mr. Michael C. Ambrose to the number of seventy-five, called at his home on Main street, last Friday night, and tendered him a surprise party. As a balm to ease his feelings over the inexpectedness of their visit they left behind them a handsome art square.

The affair was managed by Messrs. James Hammond and J. G. Perry, friends of Mr. Ambrose, and the evening was full of entertainment for all. A collation was served and a musical program by Miss Bertha Callahan, Mabel Coty, Anna Cederburg, Mrs. Alice Callahan and Isaac Budreau was much enjoyed. Mr. Ambrose is one of the popular employees at the Winchester Laundry.

THE GOOD COUNTERFEIT

By JEROME P. GORIN

Copyright, 1906, by Jerome P. Gorin

IN the year 189— there were two banks in B—ville, a thriving little city situated within 200 miles of New York; one a rather insignificant affair; the other, Bethany Bros., a remarkably wealthy and prosperous concern for so small a place.

Friday morning, Oct. 5, when Mr. Charles, the old cashier for Bethany Bros., endeavored to open the big safe the lock would not respond to his manipulations, and the hour for commencing business found Bethany Bros. in the embarrassing predicament of having no money with which to pay checks.

Early in the morning a stranger called, wanting change for a hundred dollar bill. He stood around quite awhile listening to the bankers' excuses to customers and others.

"The lock won't work. We can't open the safe," repeated James Bethany for the fiftieth time, "but a man from the safe makers will be here at 7 o'clock, and tomorrow we will be all right."

The safe was in plain sight, and, as usual, the maker's name was lettered on it.

The stranger expressed sympathy and showed his interest by asking many questions and telling of similar cases that had come to his knowledge. He took the noon train for New York, but before leaving he sent a long telegram in cipher to one William West, 11 R— street, New York.

The fact that he sent a telegram did not come out, however, until after the mischief had been done.

At 7 o'clock that evening both the Bethany brothers and Mr. Charles were at the railroad station, and when the train stopped a man, carrying a large and a small valise, stepped off. On being accosted by James Bethany he said he was the person expected.

After he had eaten supper all four repaired to the bank.

It was 3 o'clock in the morning before the safe was opened and the lock put in order and oiled.

"Gracious!" exclaimed Mr. Charles, "I didn't suppose it would take half so long."

The expert explained that it was a very fine lock, almost never getting out of order, but when once it did go wrong was very difficult to manipulate and adjust.

He set it on a new combination and gave the numbers on a card to Mr. Charles.

When all was finished he presented a form of receipt, printed expressly for his firm, which Bethany Bros. signed, showing that he had done the work, how long it took, what was the matter, etc. The bill for his services and expenses, he said, would be sent by mail. Then the man, whose name was Meinert, went to bed at the hotel. The next day, Saturday, at noon, he left for New York.

The bank opened as usual Saturday. And to dispel any doubt as to its solvency the counter was piled high with currency.

Monday morning when Mr. Charles opened the safe he found only a few dollars in specie and a slip of paper on which was scrawled, "You should change your name to E. Z. Mark & Brother."

After the first shock was over, which caused consternation bordering on panic in the town, telephonic communication was had with the safe makers and the New York police.

The Bangup Safe company said that their man had not yet returned, but they wouldn't listen for a moment to any doubts of his honesty.

The next day they telephoned that Meinert had reported at the office in such condition that he could hardly walk or talk.

His story was as follows:

"On the train, in the seat just in front of me, were two men, who from their conversation I learned were in the L— Safe company. One of them was going to Elmira on the same errand as my own, to open a safe. The other was a salesman on his way to Chicago. He asked me for a match and gave me a cigar. They were extremely pleasant, and pretty soon we were all three talking safe business. After smoking the cigar I don't remember anything except vaguely that one of them got off the train with me and we had something to drink. When I came to my senses Monday afternoon I was in a cheap hotel in Buffalo. I couldn't move or speak, but a doctor came and got me on my feet. The landlord said a man claiming to be my brother brought me there early Saturday morning in a cab, saying I was on a spree; that he had to go to Cleveland, but would be back Tuesday. He paid three days' board for me. When I found my satchels were missing I suspected that one of the men had taken my place at B—ville and that the bank had been robbed. All my money was gone, so the landlord bought me a ticket to New York and put me on the train. I was very foolish and shall never get over it."

The amount stolen was in the neighborhood of $80,000.

It didn't take me—I. M. Sharp of the detective firm of Good & Sharp—two minutes to evolve the correct theory of the way the thing had been done.

The stranger who wanted a hundred dollar bill changed was the head of a gang of three bank burglars. His business was to go about the country locating banks easy to rob and that would probably yield a good haul. He happened into Bethany Bros. just in the nick of time, took in the situation at a glance and telegraphed his pal, West, full information and instructions. West and the other member of the gang shadowed Meinert from the Bangup people's office to the train, bought two tickets to Buffalo, planted themselves in the seat in front of Meinert and lured him into conversation. They were provided with drugged cigars and liquor, and, as they expected, Meinert fell into the trap. After gaining possession of his satchels and credentials the rest was easy. One of them took Meinert to Buffalo, so thoroughly drugged that he could not regain consciousness for two or three days. Then the other personated him at B—ville. The gang leader did not go to New York, but got off about halfway and boarded the train his pals and Meinert had taken. He went a few miles beyond B—ville and joined the man who had taken Meinert's place, on the noon train Saturday, both getting off at the next station. There they bought a cheap horse and buggy and Saturday night drove into B—ville and committed the robbery, which, as they had the combination of the safe, was the easiest sort of an affair. Monday morning, when the crime was discovered, they were in Chicago, New York, Canada or anywhere else they chose to go.

The case was plain enough, but catching the criminals and recovering part of the money was not accomplished for months and was brought about only through a sad incident—a lapse of honesty.

As has been said, the robbers took all the money except some small change—that is, all the good money. There were a number of counterfeit bills in the safe that had been accumulating for years which the robbers apparently didn't think they needed, although they evidently had handled them.

While looking sadly over these bills, the only ones left, Mr. Charles exclaimed:

"Why, they took the good counterfeit twenty—the Wilkesbarre bill!"

"What's that?" I asked quickly.

Mr. Charles repeated what he had said, adding that the bill in question was the best counterfeit he had ever seen.

I PUT A PISTOL TO HIS HEAD.

"Do you remember the number?" I inquired.

"We have it in the letter book," he replied. "We sent the bill once to the Wilkesbarre bank to see what they thought of it."

On looking it up he found that the number I wanted was 127.

"The upper left hand corner was torn off, and there was a letter S written in ink on the back in the lower left hand corner," said Mr. Charles.

I jotted all that down, but observed:

"I can't believe they would take a bill marked like that, and a counterfeit to boot."

"It was there last week," asserted Mr. Charles, "for I remember showing it to a traveling man from Boston who had a counterfeit five passed on him the day before. He wanted my opinion of the five, and then I showed him the Wilkesbarre twenty and put it back on the pile of bad money in this pigeonhole."

From the moment the bill was first mentioned one of the clerks, a young man who had been with the bank about a year, seemed ill at ease. He turned pale and finally blurted out:

"Yes, they took it, but it was in the middle of a package of good money. I took $20 of good money Saturday and substituted the counterfeit for it. I thought I could replace it today." And he burst into tears.

So they did take it, said I to myself, and, what is better, they don't know they have it and may pass it out, not noticing that it is bad.

Bethany Bros. were members of a bankers' association that vigorously prosecuted bank crooks, and through it nearly every bank in the country was asked to look out for the counterfeit twenty, fully described in their circular, and to keep the matter from the newspapers so that the robbers would not be notified, in which case they would of course destroy the bill.

I wrote the treasury department at Washington requesting immediate information if the bill should ever be sent to them.

Ten months to a day after the date of the robbery I received word from Washington that they were returning the counterfeit twenty to a bank in a town on Cape Cod.

The next day I stepped up to the cashier of that bank and showed him the message.

"That bill was deposited," said he, "by Mr. Bixby, who keeps a little hotel around the corner, and he redeemed it a few minutes ago. He told me he got it from a minister who is spending his vacation here. The way I remembered whom I got it from is the corner was torn off, and I charged 10 cents for that. Mr. Bixby didn't want to pay it, but when I showed him a package of mutilated currency I was putting up that day to send to Washington for redemption he said he guessed it was only fair to pay something toward the expense of having it redeemed."

On inquiry I learned that this bank was not in the association and had not received the circular.

Then I called on Mr. Bixby.

Mr. Bixby said he had given the bill back to the minister and pointed him out to me sitting on the veranda.

The minister had the counterfeit in his hand and was looking ruefully at it when I introduced myself.

"I got this the other day," said he, "from a man whom I married in the parlor of the hotel. He was a stranger here—so am I—and he asked the landlord to direct him to a clergyman's house, saying he wished to be married. The woman was with him, and as I was standing by Mr. Bixby referred him to me. We got the license, I performed the ceremony and he gave me this bill as a fee. I never saw him before and don't know where he is staying or whether he is still in town or not."

His description of the man tallied fairly well with the appearance of one of the gang, and as he felt sure he would know him if he saw him again we started out to walk about the town, which was fairly swarming with summer boarders. Stopping at the office where the marriage license had been procured, I compared the signature with the writing on the slip left in the safe and decided they had both been written by the same hand. The name signed was William Weston, not quite, or rather a little more than, William West.

We failed to find him, and I returned to the hotel for supper.

He's gone, I concluded dejectedly. Then a thought struck me. He may have designs on a bank here. If so, this being Saturday, tonight is the very time he would select to do the job.

As there was only one bank of any consequence in the place—the one that had had the counterfeit twenty—I went at once to the cashier's house. He was not at home, but would be at 10 o'clock. I waited till he came.

"Yes," said he in response to my questions; "such a man as you describe came into the bank the other day with a cheap time lock appliance which he said would work as well as the very costly ones. He argued that as my bank is situated no sane burglar would attempt to blow open the safe, therefore the danger was that I might be compelled to open it at the muzzle of a gun. As there have been so many cases like that recently, I let him show me how his device worked. He put it on and set it for ten minutes. In five minutes I tried to open the safe, but could not, after ten minutes it opened. Thursday and again Friday he set it for 8 o'clock the next morning, and it worked all right both times. This afternoon when we closed he oiled everything up and set the thing for 8 o'clock Monday morning. If it works all right I am to pay him $20 for it."

"You opened the safe several times in his presence?" I asked.

"Yes, sir," replied the cashier.

"The inner compartment where you keep your cash too?"

"No; only the outer door. At first he wanted to put the appliance on the inner lock also, but—"

"Then the combination is the same on both locks," I interrupted.

"How do you know that?" asked he in astonishment.

"How did you happen to tell the man so?" was my reply.

He stared at me in amazement.

"Come to think, I do tell him. He said to me, 'Of course the inner combination is different from the outer,' and I said it was at first, but as I got confused sometimes with two sets of figures I had it changed to correspond with the outer one."

"And after that he didn't think it necessary to have his contrivance on the inner lock?"

"No, sir. He said if they couldn't open the outer door they couldn't the inner, of course."

"Quite evident," I replied.

"He stood behind you pretty close when you opened the safe two or three times?" I asked.

"Yes, sir. But he would have to have a remarkable memory to remember the combination. It took me two weeks to memorize it. It is quite complicated," said he with a tinge of pride in his tone.

"His memory would suffice, but he didn't trust to it," said I. "You don't know, I suppose, whether he had his hands in his pockets while you were working the combination?"

"Yes; he did," spoke up the cashier's [illegible] who was employed in the bank. "He kept his hands in his side coat pockets all the time."

"And he had a little pad in his pocket on which he wrote the numbers as well as how many turns to the right or left after each number. He's got the combination all right," said I.

The old cashier looked at me curiously and doubtingly.

"And some time tonight," I continued, "he will open the safe, but we will catch him in the act."

"But the time lock is set for Monday morning," he replied dubiously.

I suppressed a smile and asked him who set it.

"The man set it himself. Mr. Mulright, his name is," he answered innocently.

I could see that he didn't more than half agree with me in my suspicions, or else his old New England pride was aroused and he wouldn't admit that he had been gulled by a sharper.

However, at 1 o'clock that night Mr. Mulright forced a back window of the bank, opened the outer door of the safe and was working rapidly at the inner when I put a pistol to his head and requested him politely to elevate his hands.

A few minutes before I had slipped up behind his accomplice watching outside and choked him so quickly he couldn't utter a warning cry. It didn't require ten seconds to confirm my suspicions that the accomplice was his woman companion in male attire, and more or less of a green hand at that.

The pair turned state's evidence, and before long we caught the rest of the gang.

About $18,000 of the $20,000 stolen was finally recovered.

Peculiar Light Giving Animals.

A peculiar light giving animal found in southern Californian waters is the heteropod. The heteropods, dazzling white and almost shapeless, can often be seen floating on the clear water. Their bodies are almost transparent, and they have in addition to a long tail a powerful sucker, by which they cling to seaweed. When these creatures are irritated they seem to emit a light from all over the body, though one writer describes one in which the light—red in this case—seemed to radiate from the center of the animal. Of all the light giving animals the salpa is said to be the most wonderful. Like the heteropod, this animal is provided with claspers that enable it to fasten to seaweed and rocks. So plentiful are they in Californian waters that the Santa Catalina channel, which is from eighteen to twenty miles wide and about forty-five miles long, is at times literally covered with them as far as the eye can reach. Covering the entire surface and gleaming like gems in the sunlight, they present a beautiful picture. These animals constitute a delicacy much sought for by whales. Some of them shed a silvery light, while others yield blue and others red light.

Rivers That Flow Backward.

Near Argostoli, a town on one of the Greek islands, four little torrents of sea water, rolling on an average fifty-five gallons a second, penetrate into the fissures of the cliffs, flow rapidly inland and finally gradually disappear into the crevices of the soil. Two of these water courses are sufficiently powerful to turn all the year round the wheels of two mills constructed by an enterprising Englishman. This seems at first sight absurd on the face of it, but it is quite easily explained. The hills of the island are of soft, calcareous rock, full of fissures, and suck up water like immense sponges. In consequence the pools in their subterranean caverns are always lower than the surrounding sea, so to restore the balance these little brooks, fed by the waves, are always descending inland. The curious yet natural result of the constant evaporation of the sea water is that gigantic masses of salt crystals are constantly forming in the caves.—Strand Magazine.

Straw Rope Swings.

Korea is perhaps the oldest country in the world, and the customs and actions that go to make up the daily life of the people are not at all governed by the logic or tradition which moves us on our enlightened way. They have no clearly regulated sports, nothing apparently that could be likened to a national game. They pass most of their recreation hours swinging in straw rope swings and seem entirely happy in the sport. The straw rope, if well made, is extremely durable and can stand considerable weight, as may be judged when three ablebodied young men impose their weight upon the swing, standing on the shoulders of one another after the manner of acrobats. It may be very fine pastime, but the average American, it is safe to say, would find in it very little appeal.

The Old Greek Divorce Law.

A clergyman was railing against divorce. "We ought to have the divorce law that was enforced in ancient Greece," he said. "If that old Greek clause was tacked to every separation, I am persuaded that divorces would fall off 60 to 70 per cent. This law was that when a man got a divorce he could not under any circumstances marry another woman younger than his ex-wife. An innocent law, a brief law, not much to look at, but how many divorce suits would be nipped in the bud if all husbands knew that after the separation they could not marry younger women than the wives they had cast off!"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Water on the Veldt.

Water is sometimes very scarce and precious on the South African veldt, according to a writer, who says: "In our veldt cottage we had no well, only large tanks, and about August our condition usually became desperate. If you washed your hands you carried the precious fluid out to pour it on some thirsty plant or vegetable; the bath water the same, part of it being first saved to scrub floors. Cabbage and potato water was allowed to cool and then used for the garden or to wash the dogs in first, so that these waters did three duties."

Enthusiast to the End.

An enthusiastic French physician, while dying, made careful observations of his condition, detailing his symptoms to his son and attending physician in order that they might make a record of them. At the very end, when he was on the point of passing away, he surprised the friends at his bedside by saying, "You see I am dying."

Helped Out.

The Father—So you think you can support my daughter? The Suitor—I'm quite sure I can, sir, if you will help us out. The Father—I'll help you out all right, all right! Whereupon the suitor dashed madly down the front steps with the father a close second in the race.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Mistake.

The chairman told me at the meeting that I was out of order."

"Well, wasn't he right?"

"No. I saw a doctor on the way home, and he told me that I was never in better shape in my life."

A Difference.

Guest (going over the picture gallery and halting before a portrait)—And is this the old master? Servant—No, sir. Sure, that's the auld missus.—London Magazine.

The Endless Procession.

A myriad of men are born. They labor and sweat and struggle for bread; they squabble and scold and fight; they scramble for little mean advantages over each other; age creeps upon them; infirmities follow; shames and humiliations bring down their prides and their vanities; those they love are taken from them, and the joy of life is turned to aching grief. The burden of pain, care, misery, grows heavier year by year; at length ambition is dead, pride is dead; vanity is dead; longing for release is in their place. It comes at last—the only unpoisoned gift earth ever had for them—and they vanish from a world where they were of no consequence; where they achieved nothing; where they were a mistake and a failure and a foolishness. There they have left no sign that they have existed—a world which will lament them a day and forget them forever. Then another myriad takes their place, and copies all they did, and goes along the same profitless road, and vanishes as they vanished—to make room for another, and another, and a million other myriads, to follow the same arid path through the same desert and accomplish what the first myriad and all the myriads that came after it accomplished—nothing.—From Mark Twain's Autobiography in North American Review.

Origin of the Balloon.

The word balloon means "a large ball." To Montgolfier of Annonay, France, the invention of the balloon is credited. It is said that he was led to turn his attention to balloon making from the following incident: A French laundress, wishing to dry a petticoat quickly, placed it on a basket work frame over a stove. To prevent the heat from escaping by the opening at the top of the petticoat she drew the belt strings closely together and tied them. Gradually the garment dried and became lighter, and as the stove continued to give out heat and rarefy the air concentrated under the basket work frame the petticoat began to move and finally rose in the air. This so astonished the laundress that she ran to her neighbors and asked them to come and witness the strange sight. Montgolfier was among those that came in. The petticoat suspended in midair suggested greater things to him, and he returned home with "something to think about." He at once began studying works on different kinds of atmosphere, and the invention of the balloon was the result.

No Excuses Accepted.

French officials are said to be particularly strict in their discipline of tourists. A lately returned traveler tells several more or less apocryphal stories to illustrate the state of affairs. An American lost his footing, slipped down an embankment and fell into a small, shallow pond. As he scrambled, dripping, up the embankment to the footpath he was confronted by an arm of the law.

"Your name? Your address?" demanded this uncompromising person, notebook in hand.

"But I fell," began the astonished American. "I only"—

The man waved his arm. "It is forbidden to bathe in this lake," he said firmly. "I am not here to listen to extenuating circumstances."

A Quotation.

A correspondent wrote to a newspaper to ask the author of this couplet:

How much the fool who has been sent to Rome
Excels the fool who has been kept at home!

He had barely written when he answered his own query, having found the source of the lines and how he had misquoted them. They are from Cowper's "Progress of Error" and read:

How much a dunce that hath been sent to roam
Excels a dunce that hath been kept at home!

We are not sure but that, as is frequently the case with misquotations, the popular version is better than the poet's.—New York Tribune.

Brains of Great Men.

Brains of great men vary very much. It is found that men of encyclopedic mind have large and heavy brains—Gladstone had to wear a very big hat—with an enormous bed of gray matter and numerous convolutions. On the other hand, men whose genius is concentrated upon one line of thought are of small brain and, consequently have small heads. Newton, Byron and Cromwell were in this class.—Kansas City Journal.

Latchkey as a Source of Trouble.

Ever since some mechanically inclined person, with an almost diabolical instinct for making mischief, invented a form of spring lock which can be opened on the inside by a knob and on the outside only by a key there has been trouble. The latchkey from the first has been a domestic storm center. It has divided family circles and even broken up homes.—London Telegraph.

The Best.

There is a legend, says an English writer, to the effect that after Lord Stanley came into the house of peers a lady somewhat indiscreetly asked Lord Brougham at a dinner party who was the best speaker in the house of lords and that Lord Brougham promptly and emphatically answered, "Lord Stanley, madam, is the second best."

Hasty Conclusion.

Tommy paused a moment in the work of demolition.

"This is good wuke, all right," he said.

"How do you know?" asked Johnny.

"I've found a few things on it I didn't go Tribune.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

An appeal was made to the charitably inclined last winter to contribute to the support of a family of little children and an aged grandmother while the mother had treatment at the Rutland Sanatorium. The responses to that appeal have been very generous, and as a result the mother has returned to her family much improved in health after eight months at the Sanatorium and the family has been well taken care of. It is not advisable for the mother to go out to do heavy work at present, both on account of her own condition and the care of the children. Some further help will be needed and those who are willing are asked to send what amount they wish, to Mr. Geo. H. Carter, Town Hall, or Mrs. M. A. Cummings, 69 Church street, who will see to it that the money is carefully and properly expended.

A lot of land in Wedgemere park, containing 13,000 square feet, located on Foxcroft road, has been sold; also the adjoining lot, corner of Yale street. The land was sold for the Botson Co-operative Bank to parties who intend improving the same.

Mr. Charles M. Rust who was taken to a sanatorium last week, has not shown any indications of improvement.

Mr. Thomas W. Lawson voted here on election day.

Master Lyman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Smith of Wilson street, has been quite ill this week with pneumonia. Strong hopes are held out that he will recover, although yet quite ill.

Stanley Weld, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Weld, who has been quite ill with tonsilitis, is convalescing.

On entering Newth's hardware store last Saturday afternoon, Kenneth Park left his wheel leaning against the curbstone, and when he went to get it, a few minutes later, it was gone. Search was made by the police, and late in the evening it was found near the boulevard on Main street where it had been left by the thief.

The Boston & Northern street railway has sent in another petition for a location in the Middlesex Fells and a hearing will be given some time this fall. The matter will come up without reference to the company's first petition for a similar location, which was granted by the board but not accepted by the railway company. The Boston Elevated has not renewed its petition. In the event that it fails to meet the extension proposed by the Boston & Northern the latter company will not build, as its line would end in about the centre of the wooded space. If the Elevated persists in holding off, the Park Commission may complete the line of communication through the reservation.

AMATEUR BOSTON PIN LEAGUE.

The first match in the Amateur Boston Pin League of the Calumet Club was rolled on Monday evening with the Newtowne Club on the home alleys, the local team winning three of the four points scored in the match and narrowly missing a clean sweep.

The second string proved the only hindrance, and close bowling on both sides resulted in a tie, Newtowne taking the point on the roll-off. The total of 1414 was very good for this time of the year. Keith was the honor man for the evening with a single of 118 and a total of 312. Purrington and Richardson each put in singles of 100.

DEATH OF WINCHESTER'S OLDEST RESIDENT.

By the death of Mrs. Sarah F. Church last Saturday, Winchester's oldest resident passed away. Mrs. Church was 93 years of age, and for many years had held the distinction of being the oldest woman in town, Mr. William Chaffee, up to the time of his death last summer, being a few years her senior.

Mrs. Church died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Louisa Richards on Mt. Vernon street, Saturday, her demise being due to heart trouble and infirmities due to her age. She retained her mental faculties to a remarkable degree.

Sarah (Fernald) Church was born in Kittery, Me., her parents being Stephen and Alice (Carter) Fernald. She had lived in this town for about 60 years having been a member of the Congregational Church since 1867. Her husband was Cephus Church, for many years of the firm of Church & Lane, makers of pianos on Canal street. He died in 1875 During his residence in town he was twice a member of the Board of Selectmen, and was a Mason of prominence, in Woburn and later in Winchester, being treasurer in each lodge.

Mrs. Church leaves one brother, Cyrus Fernald of Kittery, Me., now in his 90th year, and an adopted daughter, Mrs. Louisa Richards of this town.

Funeral services were held from her late home on Tuesday, at 2.30 p. m., conducted by Rev. D. A. Newton, pastor of the Congregational Church, assisted by Rev. Henry E. Hodge, of the First Baptist Church. During the services the duets, "Nearer My God to Thee," "Abide With Me" and "Watching and Waiting For Me" were sung by Miss Marion Rice and Miss Daisie MacLellan. The burial was in Wildwood.

Many beautiful floral tributes were sent by friends and acquaintances, including a wreath of green fern and tea roses from Dr. B. T. Church, Mrs. Church being one of his first patients in this town.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE.

The Union Thanksgiving Service this year will be held at the Unitarian Church. They will be two in number. The first will occur on Sunday evening, November 25th, the Baptist, Congregational, Episcopal, Methodist and Unitarian churches uniting. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Ruen Thomas, D. D., of the Harvard Church, Brookline, Mass. Music by a male quartette.

The second service will be held on Thanksgiving morning, at 10.30 o'clock. The Rev. D. Augustine Newton, D. D., will preach. Mrs. Carolyn D. Reed, of Arlington, will sing, and Miss Mary Kellogg violinist, will play. The interest of all citizens of the town is solicited for these gatherings. They are held as an expression of an appreciation of our common interest in moral and religious things, and should be thought of as meetings of citizens, gathering in their religious capacity.

WILL HAVE NOTABLE GUESTS.

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans will be the chief guest of honor at the dinner of the Western Society of Boston at the Hotel Brunswick on Friday evening, Nov. 16. The Hon. John D. Long will also be a guest. Among others to be present will be Rear Admiral A. S Snow, Rear Admiral J. F. Merry (retired), Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard, the Rev. Charles E. Park of the First Church, Boston. General Morris Schaff, and the Rev. George L. Perin. Mr. F. B. Tracy of this town is the secretary of the Western Society, and was instrumental in its formation. It membersnip is made up of men who have been residents of the Western States.

MUCH SURPRISED.

About thirty of the neighbors of Mr William T. Dotten surprised him on Tuesday evening reminded him that he was sixty-two years old that day. The affair was a complete surprise to Mr. Dotten and also to his wife, neither of them having had even a hint of the good time coming. Two handsome chairs were presented them, the spokesman being Mr. John H. Carter. After a pleasant social time a generous collation was served. Mrs. Robert Kingston furnished the music. The genial host is willing now to acknowledge that sometimes a complete surprise can be carried out.

A MODEL DAIRY.

The State Board of Health in its bulletin for October, says that the diary of Mr. Stephen Thompson in this town is worthy of commendation. Mr. Thompson's dairy is one of the best in the State and contains all the modern hygienic improvements. His herd of cows are selected for their special fitness, and a visit to his dairy is well worth taking, to see the buildings, cows and the means taken to have the milk pure and free from contaminating influences.

THE GRADE CROSSING.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Your recent editorial calling attention to the interest, or rather lack of interest, in the grade crossing question is much to be commended. A public interest should be created and brought to bear on the commission at the next hearing, Saturday, November, 17, in favor of some practicable plan.

The labored attempt to popularize the "mole hill" effect recently published, is one of the best arguments for the adoption of some plan more simple than that recommended by the Board of Selectmen. No plan should be approved which does not contemplate improving the landscape conditions over conditions now existing in and near the centre. Let the best plan be backed by the citizens, then have that plan urged on the commission with a strong public sentiment behind it.

It would seem that all citizens ought to agree on that plan which contemplates the abolition of the crossing along lines that tend to improve rather than injure the physical appearance of the centre of our town.

If any one plan presented to the commission fulfills that qualification more than another, at an equal or less expense, should not that plan be favored for adoption? To the writer's mind the Vinal plan is far ahead of any yet presented in meeting and overcoming the difficulties to be met. It has been called an old plan and a discarded idea, but the fact remains, it is a new plan both in conception and execution and it was not even on paper thirty days before the time it was submitted to the Commission at a recent hearing.

Some few features that would be common to all educated civil engineers in meeting such a problem may have been adopted in its make-up similar to some features of other plans, but this does not detract from its originality or lessen its value in solving the problem. Its advantages are so apparent on its face that a layman can see at a glance what it does and what possibilities it opens for the future in the development of the centre of the town along the lines of the beautiful and artistic. It will stand examination and criticism and the more it is pulled to pieces the more this writer believes it will draw and hold the attention of public spirited citizens. If it will not stand criticism it should be thrown aside for what will.

It would seem that the expense required to fill the centre of the town to the depth and extent contemplated by the Selectmen's plan could be used to far greater advantage when spread over the surface, and much more will be obtained for the money in this direction than can ever be hoped for by burying so much under ground.

12TH ANNIVERSARY.

The twelfth anniversary of the institution of Waterfield Lodge, 231, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, was held in Harmony Hall, Monday evening. There was a large attendance and the exercises were among the most pleasing ever held by the Lodge.

The exercises opened with introductory remarks by Noble Grand Geo. F. Arnold which were closely listened to This was followed with a musical program by the Adelphi Quartette, and readings by Miss Eva A. Stowers. The next feature on the program was a delicious banquet provided by a caterer.

After an hour had been passed in eating and conversation, the evening closed with dancing. The committee having the anniversary in charge was composed of Messrs. Geo. A. Ambler, E. S. Barker and Harry McNear.

RUMMAGE SALE.

The officers of the Home for Aged People in Winchester wish to extend their hearty thanks to the very many kind and generous friends of the Home, who contributed to the success of the Rummage Sale of November, 1906. First mention should be made of Mr. Charles A. Lane, the general manager of the affair. He systematized the details and gave days and nights to their execution, all in good nature, good judgement and with great efficiency. Many of the townspeople gave of their precious time and personal labors. Material came in from all quarters.

The Town Hall proved an ideal place to hold the sale. The attendance was large. Appreciative and ready buyers brought the essential funds, and were pleased with their purchases.

The realization is fully seven hundred dollars. We trust many pleasant memories may attend the numerous helpers of the worthy cause.

For the Directors of the Home,
ALFRED S. HALL, President,
HENRY C. ORDWAY, Treasurer.

Now is the time to make your calendars for Christmas. We have the card and the pads in great variety. Wilson the Stationer.

CALUMET CLUB BOWLING TOURNAMENT.

The bowling in the house tournament is now steadying down, and some of the teams not heretofore recorded as winners are coming to the front. Team 1 is making a good showing, notwithstanding the large handicap which it gives some of the lower rated teams. Other teams are also making a strong showing.

On Friday evening team 9 took a drop, losing all four points in its game with team 11, the latter team rolling a fine game. On the same evening team 10 dropped three points to team 12 in a rather slow game, team 12's handicap of 16 pins just saving it. The record for the three string total held by Purrington was tied in these games by Wilson, who rolled 329 flat; with his handicap equalling Purrington's 338.

The Tigers parted with three points on Wednesday night, the winners being team 8 captained by D. N. Skillings, jr. The honors went to Gendron and Fitch of the Tigers, who won the first string, but were badly beaten in the other two.

Teams 6 and 7 divided the honors in their match, each taking two points. Team 6 had the best of the argument however, as their single of 499 is the highest yet. Caldwell, captain of the team rolled a fine game, with a total of 315.

THE RUMMAGE SALE.

All roads led to the Town Hall on Friday and Saturday last, while the long heralded rummage sale for the Old People's Home was held. The sale was one of the most successful ever held by the institution and was generously patronized by rich and poor alike, irrespective of creed, class or color. For the past two weeks through the kindness of store keepers and expressmen, the various articles which almost every house-wife in town had been collecting for weeks for the sale were gathered in preparation for the event. The first day's receipts amounted to more than $500, and a large amount was taken during the second day.

The purchasers carried away everything imaginable from the hall. The small boy with an ancient fish line, the woman wheeling the baby carriage and the man with his stove were all in evidence. The interior of the hall was filled with the long tables upon which the articles were placed, and a large and competent committee were in charge of them.

Among those who were interested in the affair were: Chas. A. Lane, Alfred S. Hall, Henry C. Ordway, J. H. Dwinell, J. K. Murdock, Mrs. T. E. Thompson, Mrs. P. G. Moody, Mrs. C. F. A Currier, Mrs. M. W. Jones, Mrs. Henry Smalley, Mrs. W. I Kendall, Mrs. M. A. Cummings, Mrs. W. B. French, Mrs. Preston Pond, Mrs. Anthony Kelley, Mrs. George B. Lawrence, Mrs. F. M. White, Mrs. N. H. Taylor, Mrs. R. M. Armstrong, Mrs. N. A. Knapp, Mrs. Lilley Eaton, Mrs. George Goddu, Mrs. C. A. Lane, Miss Caroline L. Pond, Miss Alice Symmes, Miss Ella M. Towne Miss Florence L. Ripley, Miss Elise Belcher, Miss Leslie Taylor, Miss Carrie Billings, Miss Edith Billings, Mrs. C. E. Kendall, Mrs. W. F. Smart, Mrs. F. A. Newth, Mrs. F. H. Bowles, Mrs. N. T. Appolonio, Mrs. F. F. Carpenter, Mrs. H. E. Wellington, Mrs. A. Burton, Mrs. G. S. Littlefield, Mrs. Samuel Smith, Mrs. H. E. Butters, Mrs. C. E. Sweet, Mrs. Louis Claflin. Mrs. Fred Clark, Mrs. H. C. Sanborn, Mrs. C. L. Kerr, Miss Mary Hubbard, Miss Emily Symmes, Miss Keyes, Miss Purrington, Miss Daisie McClellan, Miss Bacon, Miss Stevens, Miss Edith Hinds, Miss Marion Cole, Miss Dorothy Lawrence.

The committee in charge are much indebted to the townspeople at large for the success of the sale. The proceeds from the sale were about $750.

WINCHESTER SALES.

M. H. Dutch has sold for Franklin Rolfe 12,000 feet of land with dwelling house numbered 14 Harrison street, assessed value $4600. The price paid was much in excess of this. The purchaser L. D. Pushee, will make improvements and occupy at once.

E. F. Sanborn has sold to Geo. E. Cooledge about 5000 feet of land, with dwelling house, numbered 16 Maxwell road. Mr. Cooledge has taken possession.

C. D. Adams has sold the estate numbered 10 Dix street, to H. W. Emery, who buys for a home. The property is assessed on about $7000, but price received was largely in excess of that sum.

Agreements have been signed for the sale of 9000 feet of land with the new house recently completed by H. C. Ordway at 70 Walnut street. The purchaser whose name is withheld until title is passed, will occupy the premises. Sale was made by M. H. Dutch.

The gentleman who purchased the Rolfe house is a member of a large paint factory in Weymouth.

UNITARIAN SOCIETY MEETING.

The 41st annual meeting of the Winchester Unitarian Society was held last week at the church. Supper was served in Metcalf Hall by the wives of the standing committee under the leadership of Mrs. Ralph E. Joslin. The business meeting was held around the tables after the supper. The following officers were elected: Capt. P. A. Nickerson, Lewis Parkhurst, D. W. Pratt, John L. Ayer, Chas. C. Rogers and C. E. Miller, standing committee; Charles F. Dutch clerk; Edgar W. Metcalf, treas.: Mrs. George Everett Pratt, chairman of hospitality committee; Mrs. S. H. Folsom, Mrs. John Symmes and Miss Alice F. Symmes, home charity committee. The year just closed has been the most successful in the history of the society.

WINCHESTER COUNTRY CLUB.

The one club match scheduled for last Saturday, will be played tomorrow.

Very few members still frequent the club owing to the lateness of the season and the coldness of the weather, it being too cold to play tennis, and rather difficult to play golf with cold hands. The season ends on Thanksgiving morning with a team match, after one of the most successful seasons in the history of the club.

BASKET BALL.

In the final game for the inter-class basket ball championship on Wednesday, 1907 easily defeated 1909, 31 to 10. At no point of the game was '07 in danger. The score at the end of the first half was 13 to 6, however, in the second, the seniors easily drew away from the Sophomores, through the excellent basket shooting of Grant and Atherton, Grant caging four and Atherton three, in all eighteen points being scored by 1907 in this half. Collins of 1909 threw the first basket of the game, but 1907 quickly evened this and drew ahead.

The game was extremely conspicuous on account of the number of fouls openly made, which were not called.

Grant, Larivee, and Atherton put up the best game for the seniors, while Collins excelled for the Sophomores.

The '07 team work was excellent, while that of 1909 was not much in evidence. Both teams had hard luck in shooting baskets, the ball very often hitting the inside rim and bouncing out.

The summary:

1907	1909
Grant rf	lb Sharon
Atherton lf	rb Ames
Larivee c	c Dover
Little rg	Cameron (Capt.) lf
Symmes rb
Webber (Capt.) lb	rf Collins

Place, W. H. S. Gymnasium. Goals made by Grant 5, Larivee 4, Atherton 3, Webber 2, Symmes, Collins 3, Sharon, Cameron. Goal from foul, Grant. Fouls called on, Cameron 2, Sharon, Ames. Referee and Umpire, G. Parker '08. Timer, Petts '08. 15 and 20 minute halves.

W. H. S. 2nd WINTHROP H. S 1910.

Monday afternoon, the High school second team defeated the 1910 team of Winthrop H. S 16 to 11. Winthrop made a great start in the first half, and kept the lead throughout the half, the score then being 11 to 8 in their favor. In the second half, Cameron and Thompson went in for the second team, which took a decided brace, keeping Winthrop from scoring, largely through Thompson's work. The game was won for the local team in the last five minutes by Collins throwing two baskets and Sharon one, thus winning the opening game of the High school basket ball season. Both teams had good team work, but the superior skill which the second team displayed at the last of the game, had much to do towards the final score.

Thompson and Collins played the best for the High school team, while Smith and Tailacq did the best work for Winthrop.

The summary:

W. H. S. 2nd	WINTHROP H. S. '10
Collins rf	lb Paine
Goffe lf	rb Tailacq
Cameron c	c Anderson
Sharon
Welch rb	lf Stillwell
Sharon lb	rf Smith

Place, Winchester H. S. Gymnasium. Score, W. H. S. 2nd 14, Winthrop H. S. '10 11. Goals made by Collins 3, Sharon 3, Goffe, Thompson, Smith 4, Stillwell. Goals from fouls, Stillwell. Fouls called on, Welch 4, Collins 2, Cameron, Smith 2, Stillwell 2, Tailacq 2, Anderson. Refree, Grant, Mobbs. Umpires, Grant, Mobbs. Timer, Petts. Time, 15 minute halves.

COMPLAINS OF SERVICE.

Winchester, Nov. 15, 1906.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

A great many citizens have asked me the reason for the poor service from the Edison Electric Co. for some time. Many do not know that the service from Boston that we were promised has not been put in. Sunday after being cut off entirely on the east side of Winchester until about twelve o'clock I tried in vain to find out a satisfactory reason, or when we are likely to get current, and wrote to Mr. W. H. Atkins, General Superintendent of the company. He said in his letter of the 12th inst. that "I do not think you will have any cause of complaint of poor service in the future." Monday night and Tuesday night up to seven o'clock in the evening the service was no better, and on the east side of the town it is almost impossible to see to read at times, the current varies so. If this cannot be helped can the committee on Municipal lighting tell us what they do?

Yours truly,
NATHANIEL M. NICHOLS,
Custodian of Schools.

THE WINCHESTER HANDICRAFT SOCIETY.

A meeting of members of the Winchester Handicraft Society and their friends will be held at the shop on Pleasant street, the former Episcopal Church building, on Tuesday evening, November 20 at eight o'clock, to discuss the possibility of enlarging the work of the society.

The committee appointed by the conference which met recently at the home of Mr. Edwin Ginn, will make a report.

It is hoped, in view of the importance of the arts and crafts and village improvement movements to Winchester, that there may be a large attendance at this meeting.

F. W. COBURN,
Secretary-Treasurer.

CARD OF THANKS.

The family of the late Mrs. Sarah F. Church wish to express their appreciation to the neighbors and friends for their kind help and floral offerings in her last illness and death.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Miss Dorothy Temple Brown is to give a lecture under the patronage of Mrs. Edwin Ginn on Tuesday, Nov. 27th, at eight o'clock at the "Terrace of Oaks," Mrs. Ginn's home. The subject will be "Up the Nile to Wady Halfa."

The first meeting of the November Group to prepare for the monthly social at the First Cong. Church, was held in the vestry on Tuesday afternoon. Miss Alice Richardson and Miss Jessie Marsh are chairmen.

A plan of the parkway bridge, near Wedgemere station has been received by the town engineering department to be added to its collection of plans for reference and safe keeping. It was donated Arthur E. Whitney. The plan shows the exact location of the composition bolt, lately described in the STAR, marking high water level of Mystic lake. The bolt is one and one quarter inches in diameter and is set into the northerly stone abutment six inches deep. It projects three inches from the stone work and the upper side is faced off level one inch wide by three inches long. This upper face is exactly sixteen feet, three inches above Boston city base and marks high water level of the lake. It will also serve as a reliable base line for future engineering work in the locality by the town or state or private individuals. Such plans are very acceptable and useful to the town engineers.

Mrs. J. P. Bunting had charge of the cake table at the Charity Club fair at the Vendome last week.

Miss Florence Millard, formerly of Lloyd street, was visiting friends in town this week.

Mr. Fred Clark was on a Western trip last week, returning to Winchester on Saturday.

Miss Annette Purrington will spend the winter with her sister, Mrs. M. A. Cummings.

Mr. Elmer Randlett has been confined to his home this week a few days with tonsilitis.

THE DEMAND FOR ELECTRICITY.

Hermann Dudley Murphy has added the equivalent of eight 16 c. p. lamps to the electric installation in his place on Highland avenue.

Eight electric incandescent lamps will soon be installed in the residence of T. Quigley Jr., at 18 Lake street.

Robert Goldberg, the optician at 9 Pleasant street, has arranged to light his store with electricity. The Edison Company will furnish six lamps.

The residence of H. M. Hunter at 22 Park avenue is to have a complete electric light installation. There will be the equivalent of fifty 16 c. p. lamps supplied by the Edison Electric Illuminating Company.

J. A. Laraway will light his apartment at 18 Mt. Pleasant street with electricity.

J. H. Winn & Sons have added 12 lights to their electric installation on Washington street.

Charles J. Ramsdell has arranged for the complete lighting of his apartment at 3 Lakeview road. There will be the equivalent of forty 16 c. p. lamps.

John M. Macleod who lives at 11 Yale street has arranged for the installation of forty incandescent electric lights.

F. A. Newth has arranged with The Edison Electric Illuminating Company for the lighting of his hardward store at 570 Main street. The installation will be equivalent to thirty 16 c. p. lamps.

The Winchester Laundry Co. has added still further to the electric lighting installation in their plant by the installation of the equivalent of thirteen 16 c. p. electric lamps.

RUSSELL--PRENTICE.

The wedding of Mr. Frederick Adams Russell, formerly of this town and Miss Mary Lanman Prentice of New York took place Wednesday afternoon at three at Saint Bartholomew's Church at the latter place. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Leighton Parks, formerly of Boston.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Russell of this town and a number of Winchester people attended the ceremony. Miss Elizabeth Clarke of New York was the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Bertha Russell of this town, sister of the groom, the Misses Helen and Mildred Harbeck, Miss Ethel Mallard and Miss Dorothy Smith of New York.

Mr. James W. Russell, jr., brother of the groom, was the best man.

The ushers were James Nowell of this town, Walworth Pierce and Robert Leeson of Boston, Guy Van Amringe, Theron Strong and Timothy Hoxie of New York.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Buckingham. Mr. and Mrs. Russell will live in New York.

Among the Winchester people who attended were: Mr. and Mrs. James W. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Russell, jr., Mrs. David N. Skillings, Mr. D. Nelson Skillings, Mr. and Mrs Lewis Parkhurst and Miss Bertha Russell.

PROTECTIVE RESEMBLANCE.

Mimicry of Color and Form Common Among Insects.

An official of the National museum at Washington who has made many trips abroad in the interest of that institution states that in South American forests the butterflies and the birds are equally brilliant in their colors, but that the butterflies, being weaker, fall a prey to the birds. One very bright hued species of butterfly, however, is not disturbed by the birds on account of the disagreeable odor that it emits. Singularly enough, some other groups of butterflies, which resemble in color the species just described, also escape persecution by the birds, although they emit no odor. It is evident that the similarity of color deceives the birds, and thus serves as a shield for the butterflies. This sort of mimicry of color and form, which naturalists call "protective resemblance," is not very uncommon among insects.

Another form of "protective resemblance" which exhibits much contrivance and skill is sometimes found among birds. Some birds hide their eggs among stones that resemble the eggs in form and color. The little "bottle tit" in England weaves a bottle shaped nest out of moss, lichens and spiders' webs, and when placed in a tree or bush the nest so closely resembles its surroundings that it can hardly be detected. The color and appearance of the nest are imitations of the prevailing color and appearance of the particular tree in which it is placed.

THE GOLDEN CROSS.

Bavaria's Famous Hotel Is the Oldest In Europe.

The Goldenes Kreuz (Golden Cross) at Regensburg (Ratisbon), in Bavaria, is the oldest hotel in Europe. King Ferdinand I. halted at it on his way to his coronation in 1531, and no other hotel in Europe possesses records of such great antiquity as the Golden Cross at Ratisbon does or can boast of having had so many royal visitors as have enjoyed its hospitality. The existing visitors' books, which date from 1819, contain the names of more than 500 imperial, royal and princely personages. The room is shown where in 1865 the late Prince Bismarck, at that time Prussian premier, slept when he came with his sovereign to hold the conference which was the last attempt to prevent war between Austria and Prussia. The negotiations were held in the "small hall" of the hotel, under the presidency of King William of Prussia. The host is equally proud of the autographs of Schiller and other men of letters which he possesses. The author of "Wilhelm Tell" wrote the words, "Und eine heimath ist es" ("It is indeed a home"), in memory of his stay there, and no landlord could wish for a better advertisement.—London Telegraph.

Linnaeus and His Works.

How much sleep do men need? Jeremy Taylor was content with three hours, Baxter with four, Wesley with six. Bismarck and Gladstone needed eight, but Goethe, Napoleon, Mirabeau and Humboldt professed that they could get along very well with less. Linnaeus, the naturalist, was one of those who robbed themselves of sleep during their earlier years and made up for it later in life. In his wakeful periods during his old age he would retire to his library, take down one of his own works and read it with a sigh of regret. "How very fine!" he would murmur. "What would I not have given to be able to write a book like this!"

The Milky Way.

The milky way in the heavens is composed of myriads of fixed stars, but it is not true that they have any influence that anybody knows of on the direction of the wind or other element of the weather of the earth. Their apparent changes of position are due only to the changes of position by the earth in its daily and annual revolutions. The stars in the milky way are so far from the earth that it takes thousands of years for the light from them to reach us.

DEER KILLED BY DOG.

Workmen engaged in putting in a cellar on the Herbert Cox farm over in the Hill District last Saturday afternoon were startled by peculiar sounds coming from the direction of the woods nearby. The sound indicated that a fierce battle was going on between a dog and some other animal. The men, James Shea, Thomas Quinn and John Kelley, who are employed by Michael Kelley, stood looking in the direction in which the sound came, and in a few moments the combatants came out into the open.

It was then discovered that the battle was between a dog and a young deer. The dog made several unsuccessful attempts to grab the deer by the throat, and when seen by the men the dog had a hold on the tail of the deer and the deer was making frantic efforts to throw the dog off.

The men after a struggle succeeded in freeing the deer from the clutches of the dog. The frightened and wounded animal was carried to the barn of Mr. Cox, but before the men arrived it died from the effects of the wounds and fright. The three men did not think at the time to look at the name on the collar, thinking that the deer would be all right in a short time.

Some person carried off the carcass of the deer during the night, and Game Commissioner Brackett is trying to find out who shot the deer, as an investigation has shown it had been shot, and also who carried it away from the barn.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

At the October meeting of the W. C. T. U. an appeal from Rev. Charles C. Pierce, D.D., Washington, D. C., was read. He has been Chaplain of the Artillery Corps, but last summer was transferred from Fort Myer to Washington Barracks to be Chaplain of the Corps of Engineers. His appeal was for aid in fitting up a room as an attractive place for worship also to keep up the music and illustrative work. A small sum was voted to be given in the name of our Soldiers and Sailor's departments.

The treasurer reported at the last meeting that the money had been sent.

Our work is world wide and reports of the delegates to the World's Convention recently held in Tremont Temple showed that the assistance of the white ribboners in America had been appeciated.

One evening was partly given up for one minute speeches from delegates and it was remarkable that so much could be told of conditions and plans in an hour's time. Baroness von Hansen of Germany told of the interest taken by the Emperor in the temperance movement. He has ordered every soldier supplied with a manuel entitled "Alcohol and the Capability of Bearing Arms," and as in Germany military service is required of every male citizen, this means that temperance sentiment will be widely disseminated.

From another source comes the following: The educational committee of the Berlin City Council has issued a memorandum to mothers pointing out the dangers attending the practice of giving children beer or wine to drink even in small quantities. It mentions the fact that there are 12,000 persons in German madhouses whose minds have become unhinged in consequence of excessive drinking and that in one year 200 persons are received into one Berlin hospital suffering from delirium tremens.

ADVERTISING PAYS.

If there is any reason that can be learned from the campaign just closed it is that "advertising pays." John B. Lewis, jr., of Reading, made up his mind early in the campaign that he could defeat George A. Shackford for re-election. His election Tuesday showed that he hit the nail on the head by continually advertising how good a candidate John B. Lewis, jr., would make in preference to George A. Shackford.

He made it known at every possible point that the choice for the people was John B. Lewis, jr. Every reader of newspapers in this district read Mr. Lewis' statements regarding his candidacy. The very characteristics he spoke so much about, his "progressiveness, and aggressiveness" won for him the "success" he had advertised as the third word in his battle cry.—[Woburn Times.

McCALL'S FORESIGHT.

Sam. McCall must be credited with more foresight than the people who thought they were competent to give him advice. He allowed some time ago that he had a good fight on his hands with Deitrick, but the republicans would not admit it. The more he talked about the need of their getting out and doing something, the more they laughed at him. In despair he went into the field and did the work himself and it was none too soon. The vote which elected him was a good healthy vote, but the fact that Deitrick carried the city of Cambridge was a fair evidence of what he could have done had he been allowed an uninterrupted swing. BARNEY GILMORE IS COMING.

Barney Gilmore in the comedy drama, "A Rocky Road to Dublin" written by Daniel L. Hart, author of "The Parish Priest," ect., will be the attraction at the Boston Grand Opera House for next week. The name of the play might suggest slap sticks and rough and tumble comedy, but there is nothing of the kind in "A Rocky Road to Dublin." Instead there is a coherent, interesting story, sane, well-written dialogue and ably drawn character studies to please the intelligent Irish.

Barney Gilmore as the hero, Robert Daley, has a very congenial role. He sings capitally, plays the harp artistically, acts with a nice appreciation of ready Irish wit and looks every inch the young Irish gentleman. Frank Lavarnie plays the part of an American; George Hassell a scheming Englishman; John D. Griffin, a fine old actor, as old "Jarvie"; Isis Maynard as the Boston Widow, and Mina Shirley as the blond haired heroine, is not only beautiful to look upon, but wears costly gowns. Other roles are well cared for by Lessie Laseur, Emily Green, Virginia Murray, Major Laird and Patrick Touhey. A real Irish jaunting car, a genuine harp and Irish bag pipes and a realistic Irish picnic are some of the attractive features in "A Rocky Road to Dublin."

Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

B. & M. TO INSTALL BLOCK SIGNAL SYSTEM.

The Boston & Maine railroad management has decided to install a block signal system on practically every mile of the road. Various devices have been studied with a view to securing the most effective and reliable appliances in the guarding of life and property, and it was finally agreed to adopt what is known as the automatic block signal system controlled by the Union Switch & Signal Company.

The contract calls for all the material necessary to equip at least 1000 miles of track. The work will involve an expenditure of $700,000 and is one of the largest single contracts for automatic block signalling that has ever been placed by any company.

President Tuttle in explaining further the purposes of the company in making so heavy an expenditure, said that "the first contract will be for the equipment of all of the company's double track lines, and we expect that the work will be concluded during the coming year. When that work is done we intend to go on systematically and regularly in equiping the balance of the single track main lines and the branches."

Senator-elect [illegible] Riley, being questioned by the Boston Post, stated he was not in favor of women and minors working before six in the morning or after six o'clock in the evening. Thereupon he was classified in the list of those in favor of the "Overtime Bill." Should there be provisions attached to the bill which in his opinion would nullify the good in it, and such is not without the probabilities, and he does not vote for it, then he may become a target for villification and abuse. It is not a fair use to make of his reply. But the lines upon which some of the daily journals of the day are conducted are such that a legislator for his peace of mind should have a thick epidermis.—[Reading Chronicle.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

The meeting of The Fortnightly was held this week in the Calumet Hall on Monday.

A committee was appointed to secure subscriptions to the Federation Bulletin and a report of the meeting of the Autumn Federation at Peabody was read.

The program for the afternoon consisted of a lecture on Forestry by the Hon. John M. Woods of Somerville, which was listened to with interest by those present, and songs by Miss Dasie McLellan, "The Year's at the Spring," and "To Blossom." Miss Hattie Snow accompanied her.

What a pity it is that the State Civil Service Board is always so poverty stricken that it must beg the newspapers to help it out when announcing its meetings, etc. It is a shame to the state to compel one of its leading boards to always pose as a supplicant for charity. It should have an appropriation of its own for its legitimate expenses and thus be relieved of asking all the newspapers of the state to support it and its work. The exercise of sweet charity should not be asked of papers in so rich a state as Massachusetts. It lowers the state and its work.

SIMPLE MEDICINES.

Remedies That May Be Found In Nature's Drug Stores.

If chemists and druggists disappeared from the face of the earth humanity could still worry along with the simple remedies which nature yields, practically ready made. There is nothing to beat rhubarb juice as a cure for gout or rheumatism except water from medicinal springs. All kinds of scurvy and blood poisoning yield to the juice of lemons or of limes, which are the greatest blood purifiers in existence. Even doctors acknowledge that natural, fresh cream from cows' milk can give points to cod liver oil and similar nasty liquids in treating consumption. Common mustard used as a plaster or poultice is the best cure for a cold on the chest, and the white of an egg with sugar is the finest medicine for hoarseness. To cure a burn an application of the white skin that lines the shell of an egg is unbeatable, while the raw yolk is a capital tonic. In fact, gardens and roadsides are full of herbs of which the juice or leaves afford remedies or palliatives for almost every disease to which humanity is heir.—New York Mail.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constutional disease, therefore requires constutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

ENGLISH SPORT.

It Abounds In Graft That Would Not Be Tolerated Here.

If there is any man on this earth white or black, who insists that his expenses in competitive sport must be no drain on himself, that man is the Britisher. And he is quite right. An amateur should be neither in nor out a dollar. It is entirely proper that his club, his college, his association or such collection of bodies as he represents should pay his legitimate expenses when he is sent to compete for that college or club or association or union. England goes much farther and gives much more latitude in the matter of expenses than we do. In cricket, for example, "amateur" players in England whose services are desired for the county championship series are literally "found" during the entire season. No graft of this kind could exist in America without raising such a storm as would blow the whole thing to kingdom come. Nor would we tolerate the conditions that obtain in English track athletics and "amateur" football, both of which are steeped in covert professionalism. And as for junketing—why, that comes near to being the Englishman's alter ego—it is a part of the English game. You might as well deprive him of his dearest possession—his prejudice, for instance—as deprive him of his junket. Let the stewards figure up how many good American dollars have gone to satisfy this national predilection through the medium of cricketers, golfers and other English athletes that have visited us.—Caspar Whitney in Outing Magazine.

A Broken Cup.

Signora Veronelli (seeking a servant)—Why were you sent away from your last place?

"Because I broke a coffee cup."

"Was that the only reason?"

"Certainly, except that on that occasion my mistress had a little wound on the head."—Il Riso.

Brewster Was a Dandy.

Benjamin Harris Brewster, one time attorney general, was a most unique character. According to his idea, he was always faultlessly attired, and his makeup once seen would never be forgotten. He usually wore a bell shaped white silk high hat with long whiskers on it, a plaited and frilled white shirt front, with a high standing collar, cardinal necktie or scarf, buff waistcoat, maroon colored Prince Albert coat with gold buttons, yellow trousers, patent leather shoes and soft frilled cuffs, which matched his shirt front, around his wrists. On the thumb of his left hand was an amethyst ring encircled with perfectly matched diamonds and a bunch of old fashioned seals in heavy gold settings dangled from his watch fob. This was his usual makeup when he attended to business at his office, which was in the old Freedmen's bank building, opposite the treasury department, or visited the United States supreme court to participate in cases which concerned the government. His voice was pitched in a high key, and this peculiarity was intensified by his sartorial getup, which always made him conspicuous at any gathering. Apparently he was oblivious of the sensation which his appearance almost invariably created.—Charleston News.

Ten Acres Enough.

Many a man who has gone into business with the notion that he must have an extensive plant in order to succeed has found that he has undertaken too much. This was the experience of an Arkansas farmer, who for many years fitfully tilled a farm of 200 acres without making at any time a comfortable living. At last he sold the land to five Italian families, who took forty acres each. A northern traveler who passed that way and was attracted by the neatness and evident prosperity of the small farms entered into conversation with one of the proprietors.

"How much land have you?" he asked.

"Forty acres," said the Italian.

"Is it all in tillage?"

"No, indeed!" exclaimed the farmer. "Ten acres are all one man can attend to. I bought the rest for my sons."

Ten acres may seem like a small farm to most Americans, but carefully cultivated it produced for the Italian more revenue than 200 had for the previous owner.—Youth's Companion.

Plants That Take Pills.

A very large and sturdy orange tree was growing in a small pot. "If that tree," said the florist, "didn't take pills it would require a pot as big as a bathtub to grow in. But it takes pills like a hypochondriac. Chemists, agricultural experts, make plant pills—pills no bigger than chestnuts that contain sustenance for six months, a kind of tabloid food. These chemists analyze a plant's ash and make pills of the constituent salts. The pills, inclosed in a metal cover, are buried in the earth at the plant's roots, and the salts gradually dissolve and diffuse through the metal, giving the plants day by day the sustenance that they require. Pills are also applied to weak, sickly plants, which they help wonderfully."

Checking a Cold.

One of the best and simplest means of checking a cold at its onset is to drink in bed a glass of hot, not warm, water in which have been placed the juice of a lemon, three or four lumps of sugar and a large teaspoonful of pure glycerin. This dose should be sipped as hot as possible after the patient is in bed. Taken thus it will probably induce a flow of perspiration which will throw off the cold. The simplicity of this remedy is only equaled by its great efficacy. As with other remedies, its chance of working a complete cure is increased if applied at the beginning of the complaint.

His Excuse.

A.—I say, old man, do me a favor and lend me $5. B.—Sorry, but it's quite impossible. A.—Impossible? And you are such a wealthy man? B.—I know, but I can't part with my money. It is a keepsake from my father.—Salon-Witzblatt of Vienna.

Out.

Mrs. Madison Squeer—I suppose in your grace's family there are a number of historic jewels. His Grace—Yes, indeed. I must get them out some day and show them to you, by Jove. Mrs. Madison Squeer—Ah, then you still have the tickets?—Puck.

The Subtle Porcupine.

"The porcupine has his good points," admitted the possum, "but he is an awful flatterer, you know."

"Flatterer?" echoed the coon blankly.

"Yes. He is apt to send one away feeling awfully stuck up."

ORIENTAL CLUBS.

Why Almost Any Society For Any Purpose Can Succeed.

The oriental is passionately fond of club life, and the smaller the degree of personal liberty he enjoys in ordinary life the more intense is his enjoyment of membership in some brotherhood. It does not make very much difference what the nature of the club may be; it is the mere joy of club life irrespective of object or principle, that appeals to him. Having once tasted this joy, he will do much rather than forego a continuance of it. Oriental society is so constituted that the family or clan is the social unit and not the individual. A man cannot be alone in his punishments, for they are also visited in greater or less degree upon his relatives as well. He cannot enjoy or suffer alone. Now, a club or society is a much smaller organization than society as a whole, and the individual forms a correspondingly larger fraction of it. This is an immense stimulus to self esteem. The man becomes somebody. This explains why almost any society, irrespective of its object, can instantly gather a numerous and enthusiastic constituency. Any man with a little tact could go out on the streets of Seoul and in twenty-four hours establish a society for the cultivation of mushrooms on thatched roofs, with president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and executive committee complete and a membership list as long as a piece of string, if not longer. Why? Simply because membership in "any old" society does just a little to lift a man out of the humdrum of life.—Korea News.

THE CLIMBING PERCH.

An East Indian Fish That Travels Over the Land.

As a rule, fish come out of the water only at the end of a line or by other involuntary process, but the climbing perch of the East Indies thanks nothing of leaving a pool with which it is not satisfied and starting overland in search of one more to its taste.

This usually happens as a result of the evaporation of a pool in the extremely dry season. When the fish decide that the water in the particular pool formed during the rainy season is in danger of drying out completely they make all preparations for moving and late at night or early in the morning deliberately climb the banks and start off in search of some more commodious pool or stream not in danger of going dry. When the journey is made at the hour it usually is the fish are favored by the heavy dew which lies on the grass, but if an emergency arises they will boldly strike out at noontime along the dusty road.

They travel by means of the strong bony fins which are full of sharp spines, like those of the common perch. They have a receptacle in which they carry water with them to moisten their gills. It is said that they will live several days out of water, and with the assistance of the dew laden grass the fish that starts in search of a satisfactory pool or stream is practically sure of living until it finds it.—Brockton Times.

Origin of "Jesuits."

The members of the Society of Jesus appear first to have been given their familiar short name, "Jesuits," by none other than Calvin. Pope Sixtus V. attempted to change their name from "Society of Jesus" to "Society of Ignatius," after their founder, Ignatius Loyola, but the attempt miscarried, and the Jesuits have never become "Ignatians," after the model of the Franciscans, Dominicans and Benedictines, although their enemies in Spain used to call them "Inigisias" (Inigo being the Spanish original of Loyola's Christian name). In France after their expulsion in 1765 those who ventured to remain temporarily called themselves "Fathers of the Faith," or "Clerks of the Sacred Heart."—London Chronicle.

The Daytime Nap.

Prolonged "forty winks" during the day are severely condemned by many doctors on the ground that they affect one's regular sleep. Scientists have found that in the ordinary course in the human being there is the greatest vitality between 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. and the least between 2 o'clock and 6 o'clock in the morning. Long sleeps during the day interfere with this order of nature, sometimes causing headache. The nap of forty winks, but only forty, proves refreshing to many because it is too short to have any injurious consequences.

Magnanimity.

Magnanimity is never coupled with weakness. The large soul that embraces all mankind in love and sympathy, that is tender, compassionate and generous, is also strong, resolute and firm whenever principle, justice and truth are concerned. There is no cruelty like that of weakness; there is no power and courage and energy like those of true magnanimity.

What Surprised Him.

The minister of a certain church was greatly exercised by the drowsy habits of his people. Taking them to task on this score on Sunday afternoon, he remarked: "I see a great many of you overcome with sleep. I do not wonder at it, for the weather is oppressive, your work is hard and many of you have come a long way. Therefore," he added, "I am not surprised to see many of you asleep, but what surprises me is to see many sleeping who have had such a comfortable sleep here in the morning."—Pearson's Weekly.

Two Kinds of Insomnia.

"When Nan was engaged to Jack she didn't get enough sleep because she had to lie awake and think how much she loved him."

"Well?"

"And now their engagement is broken, and now she doesn't get enough sleep because she has to lie awake to hate him."

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Bessemer Steel.

The so called bessemer process of making steel by injecting air blasts into molten iron was discovered first by an American named Kelly and known as his air boiling process. After the ironworkers had seen it done they still would not believe it. "Some crank will be burning ice next thing," they said. Some of his customers when they heard about it wrote Kelly that they wanted their iron made either in the regular way, and not by any newfangled method, or not at all. When the first blast was so strong that it melted the iron the spectators roared with laughter at what they called "Kelly's fireworks" and laughed for ten years at his "folly." When Bessemer introduced his process to the British ironmakers they, too, roared with laughter at the "crazy Frenchman" and would not allow the "silly idea" to be mentioned in their records. The steel rail proposition excited only derision. "Bosh! Stuff! Humbug! Nonsense!" said the railroad directors when it was proposed to them. But after one road had tried it the steel mills could not keep up with the orders sent in.

Hard on a Drowning Man.

Vieuxtemps, the famous violinist, used to tell the following story: When crossing London bridge one day he was suddenly brushed aside by a wretched tatterdemalion, who climbed the parapet and plunged out into the river. The foot passengers crowded around immediately to watch the unfortunate man as he rose to the surface, and in a trice some one shouted, "I'll bet he drowns!"

"Two to one he'll swim ashore!" was the answer. The rest of the pedestrians joined in the betting.

Meantime Vieuxtemps rushed down to the river bank, secured a waterman and rowed out to the rescue. Just as the boatman was about to reach forth to grasp the poor fellow, who by this time was floundering about in the water, having lost his desire for death, the spectators above cried out: "Leave him alone! There's a bet on it!"

The oarsman drew back into the boat, and the unfortunate wretch sank before their eyes.

Double Eggs.

The production of one egg within another is of frequent occurrence, and, though now and then recorded as a curiosity, the so called phenomenon is very easily accounted for. It is invariably caused by overstimulation of the system by feeding. The ovum, or yolk, when mature is received into the upper part of the oviduct, a tube nearly two feet in length in the domestic fowl, and in its descent is clothed successively with the layers of albumen, or white, the lining membrane of the shell, and finally on arriving at the classifying portion of the oviduct is enveloped in a shell itself. Ordinarily the egg is then expelled, but in the case of the product of a double yolked egg a reverse action of the oviduct takes place, and the egg is carried back, meets with another ovum and redescends with it, the two being surrounded together with albumen, membrane and shell.

The Best Beloved.

William [illegible] in Nithsdale [illegible] was a man of about six feet two inches in height with broad, heavy shoulders. There had been a succession of ministers during his official career, says a writer in Blackwood's Magazine, among them the Rev. D. Morrison, who was subsequently translated to the Tron church, Edinburgh, a minister of decidedly larger build that his predecessors. One of the farmers in the parish said to the beadle one day:

"Will, you have served under a good many ministers. Which of them all did you like best?"

"Morrison's clo'es fitted me best!" Will replied curtly.

ODD PRESERVES.

Peach Leather of the South and Wild Rose Jam of Europe.

Perhaps the oldest of all jams (some of which is imported into this country) is made from a red pulp obtained from the seed vessels of the common wild rose of Europe. It is thick red in color and, as might be imagined, is in flavor entirely unlike any other known kind of preserve.

In parts of the south what is known as "peach leather" is made from peach juice, which is put into bright pans and dried in the sun. In the dry state it looks a good deal like leather and is eaten without further preparation, keeping for an indefinite time.

There is commonly manufactured in Turkey a similar product from grapes, the juice being evaporated to the consistency of molasses. Some flour is mixed with it, and the stuff is spread in thin sheets upon muslin, being then exposed to sunshine for a couple of days.

In the same oriental country walnuts are commonly strung upon twine and after coating them with a mixture of grape molasses and sugar are dried. Travelers bound on long journeys frequently carry these strings of nuts, which afford much nourishment in concentrated shape.

In California a delicious sirup is made from orange juice, which of course is quite rich in sugar. And in Virginia watermelon sirup, which is said to be particularly delicious, is not unknown as a local product.—Philadelphia Press.

No Help For the Dying.

The extreme callousness of the old English gamblers, or gentlemen, as they were then called, is illustrated by the following account which Horace Walpole, the celebrated letter writer, gives of a curious occurrence at White's coffee house in London. In one of his epistles to Sir Horace Mann, under date of Sept. 1, 1750, he says: "They have put into the papers a good story, made at White's. A man dropped down dead at the door and was carried in. The club immediately made bets whether he was dead or not, and when they were going to bleed him the wagerers for his death interposed and said it would affect the fairness of the bet, and they stopped their efforts."

Don't Forget.

Don't forget to attend the grade crossing hearing in the Tremont Building this Saturday forenoon at 10 o'clock. It is of the utmost importance that Winchester be represented by many of its most influential men.

Cong. McCall Talked of for Next Governor.

Congressman McCall is being talked of as a possible candidate for Governor next fall, and we would not be surprised if the talk became general and favorable to him, too.

A Contrast.

The serenity of politics will not be disturbed in Winchester until close onto next March. It seems a little singular to read of the turmoil going on in neighboring cities, and everything so quiet here.

Before the echoes of the State election have died away, city politics are in full blast, with all the disturbing conditions of accusation and inuendo.

This is surely one strong point in favor of the good old New England town form of government.

Politically Hide Bound.

Woburn is politically hide bound, at least as far as the votes of Dem. ocrats are concerned. One would naturally suppose that where a city had such an able man for candidate for Senator as Mr. Riley that the voters regardless of political affiliations would give him their support if only for the prestige of the city. Yet Woburn refused to, and achieved the distinction of being the only place in the district that failed to endorse Mr Riley. Winchester gave the Woburn candidate a favorable vote of three to one, the largest per centage in the district.

Is Niagara Falls Doomed?

An idea of the vast amount of water which the Canadian power companies propose to take from the Falls if they can sell the power on the United States side, can be gleaned from a study of the size of their tail-race channels, which, for the three main developing companies, aggregate 68x72 feet. The power developing companies urge that no one will notice the withdrawal of the water which they want to take from Niagara. Does common sense warrant them in the claim that a volume of water passing at Niagara speed through a chanel as wide as a wide city street and as deep as a six-story office building will not make any difference in the volume of the Falls? The flood that destroyed Johnstown in 1889 was a mere trickle in comparsion with this vast volume of water.

THE ONLY WAY.

Nothing has ever yet been devised which is capable of accomplishing on behalf of the family the protection afforded by a life insurance policy. The individual cannot insure himself for he cannot discount in himself the risk of death even within one year.

It is only through a great number of individuals grouped together, selected by medical examination, paying a rate that experience and statistics have proven sufficient and by the accumulation of the surplus payments at interest in gilt edged securities that the result can be absolutely obtained.

Every man owes it to himself to save, but if he has a family he owes it to them to insure.

The proposition is so self-evident that the least consideration should make it plain to every man's understanding. It is a duty which he takes upon himself when he marries or brings children into the world, and it is a duty that cannot be honorably avoided.

Why Keep the Names Back?

The State Board of Health in its report of slaughter houses in Massachusetts says that, "Where the conditions were found to be at least reasonably satisfactory, the names of the proprietors are given; but where they were so much at fault as not to warrant favorable reports, the establishments are designated by serial numbers only. The results speak for themselves, and they are presented without comment; but attention must be called to the fact that the provisions of the law relative to slaughtering are very generally ignored."

This statement shows weakness in the business methods of the Board as regards these establishments. If the laws "are very generally ignored" the duty of the Board should be to see that they are rigidly enforced. Again, why should the names of proprietors of unsanitary slaughter houses be suppressed, and only those who live up to the law be made public?

The Board of Health has done and is doing excellent work regarding adulterated foods and medicines, and they are entitled to credit, but they should not stop there, but give as much publicity to the wretched conditions prevailing in the slaugter houses as is being done in the cases of food and drugs.

MELROSE SCHOOL BOARD AFTER SECRET SOCIETIES.

Resolutions vigorously attacking the methods of secret fraternal societies in the public schools have been presented at a meeting of the Melrose School Board.

The resolutions were prepared by a special investigation committee of the school board, who explained that they had investigated conditions arising from fraternal societies in schools of other cities of the country, as well as in those of Melrose.

The general effect of such societies was declared to be bad in raising class and caste distinctions among pupils, and leading the pupils to assume an attitude of defiance towards the orders of teachers, principals, and even the rules of the school committee. One paragraph of the resolution says:

"We are firmly convinced that rather than allow our great system of public schools to become debased into schools of cliques and caste, of contempt for humanity, scholarship and duty, it would be better for the youth and better for the Commonwealth if our schoolhouses should close their doors and the children labor for an honest livelihood."

The committee recommended that no pupils of the public schools who are members of secret fraternal societies should be allowed to enter the High school. Membership in many of these societies was declared to be based on "good clothes, good looks and parental wealth."

MAUDE ADAMS AT THE HOLLIS.

There is never a matinee performance of "Peter Pan" at the Hollis Street Theatre without its side show. These latter occur among the audience, they are either delightfully humorous—as when some little shaver of six or eight years, carried away with enthusiasm at the exploits of the pirates, leaves his seat and rushes down the theatre aisle towards the stage: or perhaps they are touchingly pathetic as when a little girl of golden locks, worked into a fever heat of excitement lest Peter Pan may not rescue the lost boys from the pirate ship, cries out, as one did recently, "Hurry up, Peter Pan!" But Miss Adams herself tells the most interesting anecdote.

"He sat beside his mother in a stage box," she says, "leaning very far forward over the edge of the box, and eagerly drinking in every incident of the play. He did not move, save for an occasional further nudging forward on the edge of his chair. He simply stared at the sight of a stage vision which was doubtless giving form to the substance of many of his boyish dreams. The indefinite something which passes between the actor and the auditor, was so direct as between us and the little blacked haired chap in the box, that we all felt that we were playing our best exclusively for his delight. Usually children continuously and very audibly pester their parents with questions at a "Peter Pan" performance but this little fellow stared on in complete amazement. But at last his silence was broken in a very decided and unexpected manner.

"It is at the moment when Tinker Bell, having drunk the poison left by the pirate Hook, is thought to be dying Nothing can save the perishing fairy but for the audience to show by some sign, their belief in fairies. This day as at times during our Boston engagement, I felt the audience, as the saying is, overwhelmingly with me. Hence sure of saving Tinker's life I rushed to the footlights exclaiming 'do you believe? oh, say quick that you believe—' But I got no further. The little chap in the audience interrupted me by crying out—Hi! I do! And the audience bust into a thunder of applause."

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

What has the governorship or lieutenant governorship to do with the tariff anyway? The fight on that issue should of course be made on congressmen and yet judging by what the press says the offices mentioned above are the ones. On a par with this illusion is the seeming claim that the governor makes the laws for the Commonwealth when all he can or should attempt to do about it is to veto bad measures and to send in special messages on legislation desired to the legislature which is the law making body.

The water in the north reservoir is nearly five feet below high water mark now, and its odor is more low down still. Suppose this were a private instead of a municipal plant, would the people stand it? We have had this bad tasting water at times for many years and it is not sufficient to say that is perfectly healthful. for so is fermented milk and yet people do not hanker after it. The only ones who are pleased with our bad tasting water are the spring water dealers.

The Boston Herald gave in an editorial last Tuesday the vote in 1896 on biennial election and biennial sessions, when as a matter of fact we did not vote on the latter question at all. The Boston papers are pretty poor political prophets, but they ought to get past elections correct at least.

Why should not the law, which was made half a century or more ago, be changed so that the Selectmen may appoint a single fire engineer in order that one man may be held responsible for the conduct of the departments. Excepting where they have judicial functions it is generally recognized to-day that single headed boards are best. The Engineer would have assistants of course, should be paid and be in town all of the time.

Is it not surprising that with all the laws and all the agitation for others we have had in Massachusetts of late years that such an important board as the State Board of Health should not have jurisdiction over the local boards. On account of the action of the National government lately, our State Board has waked up and is calling attention to local conditions in certain lines of trade that are scandalous and for which conditions the local boards in many places should be indicted. The monthly bulletin for September shows a condition of affairs in the slaughter houses all over the Commonwealth that is disgusting and calls for mention in the governor's message.

I trust the appropriations committee will be still more of an investigating committee this year than it has been in the past, because it has taken such an important place in the town business that many citizens now leave things to it that formerly were brought up by the town meetting.

The amount which street railways are obliged to pay to passengers who are injured on their lines is a larger item of their expense account than most people realize. This is shown by the annual report of the Boston Elevated just issued. The damages paid for injuries amounted last year to $603,578. The number of persons injured, seriously or slightly, was 3,716.

Y. M. C. A. CONFERENCE.

A very important conference of directors and leaders of the Young Men's Christian Association of Massachusetts and Rhode Island was held at the Ford Building, Boston, on Tuesday, November 13. The morning session was attended by the employees of the Asssociations, and Henry D. Dickson, general secretary of the 23rd St. Branch, New York City, gave an outline of a policy for the Young Men's Christian Association for a term of years, and this policy included all the departments of the Association. Thirty-two Associations were represented by 75 men.

In the afternoon, 250 directors and leaders convened at 2 o'clock and listened to an inspirational address by Gipsy Smith, who was followed by three of the department secretaries of the State Committee. The topics presented were, "County Work," "Industrial Education," and "Boys' Work," Mr. Fred B. Smith of New York followed with an address on "The Association as a Spiritual Force." At 6 o'clock a banquet was served to nearly three hundred men. Franklin W. Ganse of Boston presided. The speakers were, Judge Warren A. Reed of Brockton, C. B. Rockwell of Bristol, R. I. and Dr. James Taylor of Worcester. At half past seven o'clock Ralph C. Goodwin of Cambridge gave an illustrated talk on the Association Field. The conference closed with an inspiring address by Fred B. Smith on "The Supreme Aim and Crowning Achievement." Nearly every man at the conference is closely identified with the Young Men's Christian Association either as director or paid official, and it was one of the most practical gatherings ever held under Association auspices. Winchester was represented by two of the Association directors

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate.

By virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Patrick T. Walsh and Ellen A. Walsh, his wife in her right, both of Winchester in the County of Middlesex, to me, Thomas Moore, of Woburn in said County, dated May 6, 1902, recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, book 2965 page 560, for breach of condition of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at public auction, on the premises hereinafter described on Monday, December 10, 1906, at three o'clock in the afternoon,

all and singular the premises described in said mortgage deed, viz:—

A certain parcel of land with the buildings in process of construction thereon situated in said Winchester containing six thousand and six hundred and ninety six (6696) square feet and bounded as follows, namely:—beginning at the northerly corner of the premises on the westerly side of Main street at an iron pipe set in the ground three feet distant southerly from the southeasterly corner of land of Stillman Nichols, thence the line runs southerly by and with said Main street, fifty (50) feet to an iron pipe set in the ground at other land of John C. Nichols; thence turning the line runs westerly on and by said other land of John C. Nichols one hundred forty and 3.10 feet to a stake at land of Richburg; thence turning the line runs northerly on and by said land of Richburg fifty (50) feet to a point at other land of John C. Nichols three feet distant southerly from the southwest corner of land of said Stillman Nichols; thence turning the line runs easterly on other land of said John C. Nichols parallel with and three feet distant from the southerly line of said land of Stillman Nichols one hundred thirty and 3.10 feet to a point of beginning.

Being the same premises conveyed by John C. Nichols to said Ellen A. Walsh by deed dated March 7, 1902, and recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, book 2951 page 281, and subject to the restrictions stated therein. Three hundred dollars will be required to be paid by the purchaser at the time and place of sale,

THOMAS MOORE,
Mortgagee.

Economy in Piano-Buying

Means first, buying for the future. It is a proven fact, on account of the mechanical perfection of its action, that the Ivers & Pond Piano is a good piano years after the ordinary commercial piano is worn out. Second, in the home, the is more economical because it will stay in tune twice as long as the ordinary piano. The cost for keeping it in tune is one-half.

Write for our catalogue and our attractive proposition to buyers or make personal examination at our warerooms, 114 Boylston Street. Our list of bargains mailed free if inconvenient to call.

W. H. S. NOTES.

The plays, "Two College Tramps" and "The Elopment of Ellen," have been selected by the play committee which consists of Harold T. Webber, '07, chairman, Dorothy D. Power, '07, Harold L. Robinson, '07, Ruth Smart, '08, Gordon Parker, '08, and Margaret Homer, '08. These will be given in the Town Hall on the night of December 28, the Friday night following Christmas. About twenty are trying for the parts which will probably be selected next week, all the candidates being from the Junior and Senior classes. Mrs. Capen has been selected to coach the plays, and already she has vindicated the committee's faith in her.

Capt. Webber called the candidates for the basket ball team out Tuesday afternoon, thirteen responding to the call. These consist of forwards, Grant '07, Collins '09, Atherton '07, Cameron '09, Goffe, '08, ; centers, Larivee '07, Walling '10, Little '07, Howe '08,; backs, Capt. Webber '07, Thompson '08, Sharon '09, and Welch '08. The men who do not make the first team will form the second. Manager Gordon Parker '08, and assistant Manager Sanford Petts '08, have secured games with the following teams: Springfield H. S., Melrose H. S., Malden H. S., Brockton H. S., Everett H. S., Lowell H. S, Brookline H. S. Newton H. S., Rindge Manuel Training School, Hyde Park H. S., Lowell Comercial College, Wellesley H. S., Reading H. S., Woburn H. S., Cambridge H. S., Stoneham H. H. S., Dorchester H. S., and Medford S. This list including the strongest teams in the state, Springfie'd H. S. being ranked state inter-scholastic champion last year. The season will probably open December 5, 1906, and close March 1, 1907. There will be one game, and sometimes two on every Friday night of the season, Christmas week excepted. The team this year will be lighter than last years team, but it is hoped that the question of weight will be made up for by quickness and skill. Edward Mason, '07, has been elected manager of the second team by the Athletic Association, and the Captain will be elected before the end of next week.

The hockey team will be called out in the course of two or three weeks by Capt. Hunt. The season last year was not a successful one, but with seven men, who won their "W" in the game last year, it is hoped that a winning team can now be put on the ice. Those who won their "W's" and will play this year, are: Forwards, Capt. Hunt, '07, Larivee, '07, Wingate, '09, Howe, '08; Coverpoint, Barr, '08; Point, Grant, '07; and goal, de-Bussy, '09. Manager Ernest M. Symmes and assistant manger Winthrop M. Foster have arranged that we meet Arlington H. S., Rindge Manual Training school, Cambridge Latin school, Medford H. S., Stone School, DeMerrit's school, Melrose H. S. and various others on the ice. The school has dropped out of the hockey league this year, owing to the withdrawal of Arlington.

This afternoon, the fall track practice will wind up with a cross county run of about four miles. The course will probably start from the High school, continue up the Parkway into the Fells, through them down to Symmes Corner, down Bacon street to the Parkway, along the Parkway to Manchester Field, finishing on the straight-away. Prizes will be awarded to the first three men finishing. The prizes which are on exhibition in the High school library are: First prize, a stein, second and third, silver watch fobs. The entries are: Ernest M Symmes, '07, J Roland Park, '07, Philip Redfern, '07, Harold T. Webber, '07 Harold H. Cummings, '08, A. Walling, '10, John Sheridan, '10, and Elliot Barta, '10. It is expected that the freshmen will make a good showing in the run, especially Walling and Sheridan.

The 1907 basket ball team kept up their showing of last year, and has now also without doubt that they are the [illegible] champions, defeating [illegible] and 1909, who defeated 1910 16-13 and 10.

ELECTRICITY.

The best light there is is the Electric Light. It is so flexible -- the amount of illumination is so easily regulated to meet needs--that it is an economical light in use. As an aid to further economy the Company will hereafter furnish free upon your application four candle power lamps for entries, hallways, closets, and bath rooms. In such places these lamps will give illumination enough while using less current, and therefore costing less to run, than larger lamps.

Have you learned to be light-wise?

Lots of things tending to secure your satisfactory and economical illumination our Sales Agent is able to tell you if you'll write him, or call or telephone "Oxford 1150, Collect."

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The recent voting contest for choice of play to be presented at the Castle Square during the week of December third drew out many thousand ballots. Among the plays voted for were Sag Harbor, Rip van Winkle, Little Lord Fauntleroy and a dozen other popular dramas, and of them all "Sag Harbor" headed the list by a substantial majority. So many ballots were received that it took a full week to count and tabulate them. It will accordingly be presented the week following Thanksgiving—a season to which it is especially appropriate. The patrons of the Castle Square are to be congratulated upon having chosen a play, so amusing so interesting and so true to life. It is one of the best of James A. Herne's dramas of rural life, and it easily rivals the celebrated "Shore Acres" in popularity.

YOUNG & BROWN'S STORE SOLD.

The papers were passed this week for the sale of Young & Brown's Winchester drug store. The purchaser is Mr. Frank H. Knight, who comes here from Portland, Me, and who will continue the store as usual.

A MAN who is honest at heart and yet deeply engaged in questionable enterprises; who owes large sums and escapes bankruptcy by an endless process of borrowing from Peter to pay Paul; who is always "overdrawn" at one bank or another and makes the accounts good by checks which create other overdrafts; who lives upon his reputation for prompt paying, yet never really pays; who preserves meanwhile a conscience rooted like a great jaw tooth and always aching—such a man will have a weary mind, though the spur of ambition may keep it going.

A jaded mind reveals itself in queer little absurdities. Observe, for example, Mr. Robert Ely walking up the east side of Broadway with an unlighted cigar in his mouth. An enviable young man surely. He is tall, strong and of a graceful carriage. He is dressed in good style, with a dash of individuality. He has a boyish, smooth shaven face, with wide gray eyes and an engaging frankness of expression. Who would not wish to be Mr. Ely? But why does he keep on fumbling with that matchbox after he should long since have discovered that it is empty? Why is it that neither his fingers nor his eyes convey any intelligence to his brain?

A small boy takes note of Mr. Ely and offers him a box of wind matches.

"Light, sir?" says the boy, and holds up a sizzling match to show that the brisk breeze cannot blow it out.

"Eh?" responds Mr. Ely, looking through the boy rather than at him. "Yes."

He gives the boy a dime and forgets the change. Then he puts the box and his own match safe into his pocket and goes on, his cigar still unlighted.

In a large room on the ground floor of a tall building an exhibition of the Jennings automatic straw hat machine is in progress. Mr. Ely is interested in this invention, but chiefly in the sale of stock in a company formed to exploit it. As to whether the machine will ever make straw hats for the world's wear Mr. Ely is as much in doubt as anybody else, but upon one point he has no doubt whatever—unless the stock sells he is a ruined man. Rather more than half of every dollar paid for the stock goes into Mr. Ely's pocket, and there are so many holes in that pocket that it is very hard to fill.

Mr. Ely has written the advertisements of the Jennings Automatic Straw Hat Machine company which have occupied pages in the Sunday papers; he has arranged the present exhibition; he is paying all the expenses by a constant miracle of finance which he himself would not attempt to explain. The early indications of success have been good, and if nothing happens Mr. Ely will sail with a free wind out of all his troubles. But there are so many things that may happen.

For example, if the public should learn that the machine can be run at high speed only about half an hour and must then be stopped until certain parts of it have been cleaned there would be an end of the game. Mr. Ely did not know this himself when he embarked in the enterprise. He knew that the first machines built by Inventor Jennings had such a defect, but he supposed that it could be remedied easily. Mr. Jennings had told him so, but the changes made for that purpose had proved entirely useless. The new model clogged just as certainly and almost as quickly as the old.

"MISS WILLIAMS, WILL YOU OBLIGE ME"—

When Mr. Ely entered the room where the exhibition was being given there was a crowd in attendance. It was the noon hour, when clerks and salesmen have a little leisure. Among them Mr. Ely's shrewd eye perceived a fair sprinkling of more important people, and upon the whole he was well satisfied. He did not scent the peril which [illegible] at his very elbow as he [illegible] the crowd

The exhibition was competitive. The best machine existing up to the advent of the illustrious Jennings (who was described in the advertisements as the peer of Edison) had been set up beside the newer miracle of mechanics, and it was working with steady, laborious patience, under the guidance of a skilled hand. Meanwhile the Jennings automatic, tended only by a girl, was casting forth straw hats as a modern printing press disgorges newspapers. Mr. Ely had never seen it run so fast, and he viewed it with considerable uneasiness, for he knew that something sensational would happen if it should clog while going at such a gait. But the eye of Jennings was sharper than an eagle's, and, though he seemed to be wholly at his ease, he was always on the watch for the danger signal.

"Now, gentlemen," he was saying, "we will give you all a chance to examine this mechanism to better advantage than is possible while it is being operated at high speed. Miss Williams, will you oblige me"—

Miss Williams "obliged." Despite her innocent and girlish mien, she was an expert with the automatic, trained under the inventor's eye for many months. She knew as well as he did that the moment had come when the machine must be stopped or it would cut such capers as would set the crowd howling. She smiled sweetly at Mr. Jennings and turned off the power. The automatic came to rest.

"Gentle as a lamb," said the inventor, patting the iron child of his brain, as if moved by affection for it, but really to see how hot it was in various places. "Now, gentlemen, I will remove certain parts so that you may understand how we get these remarkable results."

Mr. Ely meanwhile had passed behind the machine and stooped beside the pile of plaited straw with which the automatic was fed. It happened, then, that he noted the unlighted cigar, and, kneeling there, he took out the box of matches which the little peddler had sold to him. He was about to light one of them when his attention was stricken by a voice, and he listened motionless.

It was a squat, dark, oily skinned man who was speaking. Ely had a glimpse of his face through a wheel of the machine and recognized him for a curb broker named Stendhall, in regard to whom he had received a warning that the fellow might try to work an unfriendly game with the stock.

"Mr. Jennings," said Stendhall, "some of us are not satisfied with this exhibition. We would like to see a test of four hours' continuous operation—four hours at least. We"—

But Ely heard no more. There was a ringing in his ears, with a dizziness that made him put a hand upon the floor to steady himself. The bare floor was cold to the touch, being made of slabs of stone. An idea seemed to leap from the tips of Ely's fingers to his brain. He cast a hasty glance over the pile of straw. No one was observing him. Ten seconds later he arose with a lighted cigar between his lips. The inextinguishable match was briskly sizzling in the straw.

Ely stepped behind Miss Williams, who had got down from her place at the machine. He had no special interest in her, but she was the only woman present, and he felt responsible for her safety.

"Fire!" yelled somebody, and on the instant a beautiful spurt of flame leaped straight for the vitals of the automatic. There was a wild rush for the doors, and Ely observed Stendhall, with his head down, butting his way to safety and roaring with panic.

Beyond a few scratches and the rending of garments no harm was done. The fire burned itself out on the stone floor, and there was nothing for the firemen to do when they arrived. After it was all over the inventor, pale with excitement, laid a hand on Ely's shoulder and stared into his eyes.

"By George, sir!" said he. "You're the quickest man to think that ever I saw. You saved our bacon that time, sure."

"How do you know I did it?"

"Well," said the inventor, shivering and grinning, "I hope I've got as much faith in Providence as any Christian needs, but there's a limit, sir; there's a limit. This was no miracle—no, sir!"

"Speaking of miracles," rejoined Ely, "you've got forty-eight hours to accomplish one. We can claim two days' delay on the ground of damage to our machine. At the end of that time the automatic has got to run four hours at high speed or there's an end of us."

"I'll do it!" cried the inventor. "By George, I'll do it!"

"I've heard that before," responded Ely. "Now, I want to see it."

It was after 4 o'clock when Ely entered his private office and sank heavily into his chair. His desk was closed. There were some letters upon the leaf and on top of them a sheet of paper bearing a memorandum in pencil.

This was the usual summary of the situation prepared by Ely's right hand man, James McKnight. The total, $9,085, showed the amount which must be raised to meet these obligations.

The statement was usually worse. Tomorrow, as McKnight had remarked, was an "easy day." Ely knew where he could raise $9,085, but what he did not know and never had known and never expected to know was how long he could keep on doing it. The catastrophe must come some time—it had never seemed so near.

The stock of the Jennings Automatic Straw Hat Machine company had already begun to be dealt in on the curb and was quoted around 30. Mr. Stendhall had been selling it "short" for several days, and he redoubled his efforts after the open attack which he had made, but Ely, having raised some money by a stroke of genius in the discounting of airy and unsubstantial notes, succeeded in holding the price of the stock at a very small decline. But rumors were stalking abroad, and the actual sale of the stock as a result of the previous advertising had very nearly stopped. And this forecasted ruin.

Meanwhile Inventor Jennings had withdrawn himself into the far parts of New Jersey, where he had a machine shop, and from that retreat he sent rose colored dreams to Ely by telegraph in response to Ely's strenuous appeals. But on the third morning after the incident of Stendhall's bombshell and the sad calamity of the fire Jennings appeared in Ely's private office just as that gentleman was opening his desk in preparation for the frantic business of the day.

Jennings had the look of one who had wandered in the wilderness without food or shelter. He was unkempt and unshaven, and his clothes ached to be taken off. But his bloodshot eyes were staringly awake, and his voice was an angry bark.

"IF THIS IS TRUE, DON'T WHISPER IT TO YOUR PILLOW."

"Look at that!" he cried, holding a newspaper toward Ely, who made no motion to take it, but merely identified it with a glance. "Have you seen it?"

"I have," responded Ely. "Stendhall has a pull with those people; not enough to make them print a fake, but of considerable advantage when his news happens to be true. The paper states that our machine can't be run more than an hour at a time and that everybody who has bought our stock is beautifully stuck. It also describes quite accurately the interesting scene which that fire so fortunately interrupted. It's a wonder that somebody didn't do it before, but Stendhall has evidently been holding it up his sleeve until he could get me where he wanted me. What do you think of the prospect?"

"Mr. Ely," said Jennings solemnly, "I think it couldn't be better."

Ely steadied himself against the desk and looked the inventor in the eyes.

"You mean that you've solved the puzzle?"

"That's what I've done," responded Jennings, choking with a dry throat. "Give me till tomorrow morning to put the new parts on that machine, and I'll run it faster than it's ever been run before, and not four hours, but twenty-four, if Stendhall will camp there and watch it."

"If this is true," said Ely, "don't you whisper it to your pillow."

"Pillow?" echoed Jennings. "Do I look like a man acquainted with pillows? But I'll make some of these other fellows lie awake now," and he cast the newspaper wrathfully to the floor and trod upon it.

Ely had not the vanity of the inventor and was in all respects a juster man, so he felt no animosity against the newspaper, which had told nothing but the truth. Nevertheless, as a matter of business, he served notice of a suit for damages as soon as he became convinced that Jennings really had perfected his machine. The editor in question, alarmed, sent experts to the next exhibition of the automatic, and they reported that while changes had probably been made in the machine no proof could be obtained, and it was now undoubtedly a very valuable invention. Whereupon the damage suit was adjusted and a flattering retraction was made.

As a result of all this Stendhall and his associates lost and Ely's party won a considerable sum of money, the price of the stock went to par and it sold freely. Meanwhile, however, a clique inside a bank where Ely had large discounts discovered that the Jennings Automatic Straw Hat Making Machine company was worth stealing, and they laid a very clever trap, from which Ely escaped after a nerve destroying struggle. It was not until the middle of December that he knew whether his profits and the control of the company—or indeed the coat on his back and the shoes on his feet—belonged to him or to somebody else. Then the scale turned in his favor with bewildering suddenness. His foes stood around him, hat in hand, begging for small favors, and the air was yellow with the glint of money.

So Ely went and got some health. He had the money, and he bought it just as he might have bought a hat. If he had not won he would very likely have broken down, but having won he could afford the price of a new set of nerves. He made a very agreeable trip to the West Indies and returned ten pounds heavier and much improved in looks.

"Jack, old boy," said he after the briefest of greetings to his lieutenant, "bring on the next trouble, and have it hot and strong. I'm ready to get back into the game."

THE TELEGRAPH.

Opposition and Rebuffs With Which Morse Had to Contend.

The Morse telegraph invention lingered for years in the hands of its starving inventor because capitalists were indifferent or incapable of appreciating its merits.

It was several years before congress voted an appropriation to allow its inventor to make a practical test of it, and burlesque bills were offered to provide means for communicating with the man in the moon.

"He's a very good, but shiftless painter, if he would only stick to his job," some one said of Morse. "The idea of telling by a little streak of lightning what a body is saying at the other end of a wire!"

His instrument, it was said, was all very well as a mantel ornament or for a mistress to call her maid, but the wires couldn't cross rivers, oceans and deserts.

Even after the line was up between Washington and Baltimore and Silas Wright sent a dispatch to the Democratic convention at Baltimore declining its nomination of him to the vice presidency, it was not accepted as true until a committee went to Washington and returned with the confirmation of the report.

There was similar though less objection offered to the overland telegraph. Senator Benton declared that it would be impossible to operate it, because the Digger Indians would cut the wires to make hooks for digging up the roots and beetles on which they lived.—Sunday Magazine.

BULLIOT'S BET.

A Banker's Wager on St. Swithin's Day Rain Legend.

There were few frenzied financiers in England at the beginning of the eighteenth century if the banker Bulliot, of whom the following story is told, can be taken as an example: The feast of St. Swithin, July 15, 1725, was a particularly wet and stormy day.

Trusting implicitly in the old superstition, which says that if it rains on St. Swithin's day it will rain for forty days thereafter, Bulliot opened a pool for every one who was willing to bet against him. The affair attained so much notoriety that the wager was reduced to writing.

"If dating from St. Swithin's day," reads the memorandum, "it rains more or little during forty days successively Bulliot will be considered to have gained, but if it cease to rain for only one day during that time Bulliot has lost."

For two weeks it contained to shower every day, and so confident did the banker become that he accepted as stakes not only money, but gold headed canes, jewels, snuffboxes and even clothes. When his cash gave out he offered notes and bills of exchange. Another week passed, and Bulliot's star was still in the ascendant.

But when the twenty-second day sank into the west bright and cloudless the unfortunate banker was ruined.

A Good Reply.

During the Apache war in Arizona in 1886 a Maricopa Indian rode a hundred miles between sun and sun to warn a party of well to do emigrants that the Apaches had planned to ambuscade them at a certain pass. The young Indian volunteered to guide the wagons by another route, and when he had done this he mounted his horse to go home.

"See here," said the leader of the train to the young Maricopa, "you have done us a good service. What is your price?"

"My price?" repeated the astonished Indian.

"That is what I asked."

"I have no price. Had gain been my object I would have joined the Apaches and met you in the pass." And so saying the brave wheeled his horse and rode proudly away.

Would Not Sell His Ancestors.

A plutocratic American of the last century who had seen the green acres and stately castle of an Irish estate sought out its impecunious owner with an offer to buy. Lord Blank, eager enough to transmute his profitless lands into pre nant gold, named a considerable, but reasonable, price as one he would be willing to take. "Very well," said the American, "I'll give that if the pictures go with the house." After a little reflection his lordship answered, "Yes, you can have the pictures except, of course, the family portraits." "It's the portraits I want," said the other. "I wouldn't give a cent for the rest of 'em." "My property is not for sale under those conditions," said his lordship, turning on his heel and walking away, to the astonishment of the parvenu, who flung a "Stuck up beggar!" after the retreating figure.

Chinese Pirates.

Piracy is no new thing in the waters around Hongkong. As long ago as the thirteenth century the island of Hongkong was a piratical stronghold, and for centuries the Chinese government was unable to drive the sea robbers out. All craft passing what is now Hongkong harbor were compelled to pay tribute. The higher elevations of the island served as lookout stations, and no boat that approached was permitted to leave until it had paid toll.

Life on the Farm.

Real life on the farm means corn in abundance, hogs a-plenty, cows enough to keep every vessel on the place overflowing with milk, horses for every member of the family, chickens, turkeys, geese, ducks, fruit in season and out of season, babies and good cheer all the year round.—Houston (Tex.) Post.

MAN AND HIS BELIEFS.

The Seven Great Religious Bodies of the World.

The population of the earth at the death of the Emperor Augustus was estimated at 50,000,000. Today it is calculated that this globe has a population of 1,603,150,000. Out of this vast number of more than a billion and a half of human beings it is asserted that all but an infinitesimal fraction of 1 per cent believe in and worship in some degree a supreme ruler of the universe.

There are seven great religions in the world. The Christian religion has the greatest number of adherents, 563,000,000. Of this number 350,000,000 are Catholics and 213,000,000 Protestants. These two great divisions are subdivided into innumerable sects differing from one another on some point of dogma or church government. Next in importance comes the worship of ancestors and Confucianism, whose followers are 283,000,000 in number. This belief is confined almost exclusively to the Chinese and Japanese. In India there are 223,000,000 Brahmans. This form of religion has decreased somewhat during recent years, owing perhaps to the continual ravages of plague and famine in that country. But it still holds the third place among the seven great religions. Brahmanism is hard pressed, however, by the faith of Islam. There are 222,000,000 of these followers of the doctrines of Mohammed. The fifth on the list are the Polytheists, the believers in many gods, who number 130,000,000. The devotees of Buddha come next, 107,000,000 strong. These, too, have their stronghold in India. The smallest of the seven great religions of the world is Taoism, with 44,000,000 adherents in the Chinese empire and in Tibet.

The next greatest religion, in point of numbers, to Taoism is the belief of Japan, Shintoism. This has but 18,000,000 believers. The Jewish faith now counts but half that number of adherents. But, unlike the other great religions, the followers of the teachings of Moses are not centered in any particular country, but are scattered all about the world. Compared with the foregoing, the religions of the Parsees, while one of the most beautiful theoretically, has about the smallest following of any distinct belief in the world, 150,000. This sect has its home in India and is best known to the outside world by its curious burial customs, the famed "towers of silence."—Exchange.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

You haven't as long to live as you used to have.

Some people are so agreeable that they are disagreeable.

Heroism is generally a foolish act with a successful termination.

Some people not only insist upon giving advice, but asking questions at the same time.

When a married woman hears about women who are working on salaries she is liable to say, "Well, I earn all I get."

The surest way to tame a man is to take his money away from him. When a man has no money even a woman can run over him.

People talk of nursing their wrath as if they are bloodthirsty for revenge, but leave an angry man alone and in two days he will have forgotten what he got angry about.—Atchison Globe.

No Cure For Insomnia.

A sufferer from insomnia may work hard at physical and mental labor, yet the night cometh when no man can work. The insomniac, utterly fatigued, falls into a slumber—not a sound, refreshing, dreamless slumber, but a coma, lethargy, a torpor, born of fatigue. In a few hours the demon says "Awake!" and the insomniac starts instantly into waking, with bright, staring, winkless, sleepless eyes. Is there no cure? None. Insomnia comes with age. You cannot cure your years. You used to sleep yesterday when you were young. "Not poppy nor mandragora nor all the drowsy sirups of the world can medicine thee to that sweet sleep which yesterday thou hadst."—San Francisco Argonaut.

East and West.

The chief distinction between the genius of the eastern civilization and that of the west, according to an oriental, lies in this: With you the individual is the hub of the universe—even charity begins at home with you—while with us of the east it is the whole, the state, not the individual, that we emphasize. An individual is nothing; the state, the whole, is everything. We sacrifice thousands of individuals, we sacrifice our children and our wives upon the altar of national honor, without hesitation, without regret.—Forum.

Mr. Frank H. Knight, Ph.G., has succeeded to the well known drug business formerly conducted by Young & Brown at the corner of Main and Church streets. Mr. Knight has had a long experience in the best Mass. pharmacies and is well fitted to continue the eminently satisfactory service which the firm of Young & Brown have taught the citizens of Winchester and vicinity to expect. By giving his personal attention to every detail of the business the new proprietor will seek to merit the confidence and esteem which were so generously and deservedly bestowed on his successors.

Work was begun on a foot-bridge across the Aberjona river at the Wedgemere station of the Boston & Maine. The project had its inception because of several narrow escapes from death on the part of persons using the tracks as a short cut. The bridge will be paid for by private subscription.

The concert to be given by the Harvard Musical Club in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening, December 4, should be one of the best ever given in Winchester, as the clubs will be fresh from the dual concert, with Yale the evening before the Harvard-Yale game.

The bowlers of the Newtowne club of North Cambridge were so pleased with the lights at the Calumet alleys in their recent match here that they had one of their committee come out to the club this week to measure and inspect the lights preparatory to installing them in their own club.

Mr. James J. Fitzgerald has been elected a director in the Winchester Co operative Bank to succeed Mr. Anson Burton. This gentleman will be found of considerable benefit in conducting the affairs of the bank because of his knowledge of real estate values and his well known business ability.

Police Officer Dotten who fell down a flight of stairs at his home on Reservoir street, is able to attend to his duties after an enforced vacation of several days. He was ascending the attic stairs with a lamp in one hand and a bundle in the other and when he reached the top he stumbled and fell down the stairs. He succeeded in protecting the lamp, but severely injured one of his ribs, and his doctor advised a lay off of a few days. He was fortunate to escape so easily.

A very pleasant feature of the Y. M. C. A. conference held at Ford Building, Boston, Tuesday, November 13, was the surprise given to our fellow-townsman R. M. Armstrong, State Secretary of the Associations of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, by the salaried officials of the two states. Mr. Armstrong has just completed his twentieth year as state secretary. He was presented with a nicely bound volume containing letters of congratulation from ninety of the employees of this field, a pair of marine glasses, and a handsome mahogany hall clock. The presentation speech was made by Benjamin F. Pierce, secretary of the Brockton Association.

It is reported that the B. & N. are soon to run a through line from Sullivan square to Concord, N. H., via Winchester, Woburn, Wilmington, Lowell, Nashua and Manchester. This will put three of the principal cities of New Hampshire in direct connection with Boston and be an advantage to everybody residing along the line.

Rev. Dr. March, of Woburn preached the sermon last Sunday morning at the Old People's Day service at the Stoneham Congregational Church. This day has been annually observed in the church since 1876. The severe and disagreeable storm did not deter the Doctor from going, although he is 90 years of age.

IMPROVES ELECTRIC EQUIPMENT.

The third of the series of turbine generators at the great South Boston station of the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. will be set going probably next week. Like each of those already in use it will have a capacity of 5000 kilowatts of electric current, which is enough to light over one hundred thousand of the incandescent lamps in common use. The installation of these turbine generators is a remarkable illustration of how quickly electric station equipment may yield to improvements, so that only constant watchfulness guided by experience can keep a plant abreast of the demands upon it. Though the present three have succeeded each other at comparatively short intervals, the improvements in construction are plainly seen by the machinist and electrician as he passes from the first to the last. Advantages in provision for putting the parts together; improvements in air circulation for cooling the rapidly revolving parts and also an increase from 514 to 720 revolutions of the wheel per minute are most noticeable. The fourth turbine for which provision is made in the big building will doubtless show further improvements.

TEACHERS' CLUB HOLD MUSICAL.

The Winchester Teachers' Club held an informal social meeting at the High School on Friday evening last.

An entertainment was provided consisting of piano solos by Miss Pond, songs by Dr. Hindes and Miss Hill of the Wadleigh School and humorous readings by Mr. Osgood.

Light refreshments were served by a committee of teachers of which Mrs. Holcomb was chairman, and the Assembly Hall was made to look home-like under the direction of Miss Hill, the supervisor of drawing.

Among those present were Prof. and Mrs. Currier, Mr. and Mrs. Joslin, Mr. and Mrs. Metcalf, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Symmes, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Parker and the Misses Pond.

It does not often happen that a child so young in years is so rich in friends. There are many today who mourn for her. The sunshine of her life cheered and warmed their hearts. Her delicate beauty was the expression of a nature more exquisite still, and her gentle presence was a benediction. To have given and inspired in five years so much love and joy is to have finished a well-rounded life. Doubtless she was ripe and ready, even though a simple child, with earthly childhood just begun, to enter upon her gracious ministry in the life beyond. All who were fortunate enough to have known and loved her are thankful for what she has been spared of earth's trials, but thankful most of all for herself. While they commend her to the Never-failing Love, they commend themselves to a braver struggle and a purer faith.

CALUMET CLUB BOWLING TOURNAMENT.

Through an error we stated last week that the Tigers lost three points in their match of that week. The Tigers should have been credited with a win of three points as also the week previous. This team is still doing good work and stands well up in the list.

On last Friday night teams 9 and 11 each lost their matches, being whitewashed by teams 12 and 10. The scores were only of the usual average, although Starr and Martin of team 10 rolled good games, the former making a single of 117, and the latter one of 110.

MAY BE A CANDIDATE FOR MODERATOR.

It is said on good authority that Arthur H. Russell, Esq., will consent to be a candidate for Moderator for the special town meeting to be held Tuesday evening, next. He has been urged by many citizens to allow the use of his name.

There will be a musical program at The Fortnightly on Monday. Mrs. Cole will give a lecture recital, illustrated by violin, voice and piano. Tea will be served.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING.

There will be a special town meeting of much importance to be held in the Town Hall next Tuesday evening. The articles all relate to abolishing the grade crossing in the centre, and are the outcome of the hearing before the commission on grade crossing abolition held in Boston last Saturday. At that time the counsel for the Boston & Maine said that the railroad would agree to any plan that Winchester decided upon that was acceptable to the commission.

Thus the matter has been directly put up to the town. The articles are:

To see if the town will investigate all plans that may be proposed for the abolition of the grade crossing at Winchester centre, decide as to which method it prefers, and notify the Special Commission heretofore appointed in the case of the Selectmen of Winchester, Petitioners, etc., pending in the Superior Court for the County of Middlesex, of its decision.

To see if the town will appropriate a sum of money to be expended in determining the best method of abolishing the grade crossing at Winchester centre, and decide in what manner such investigation shall be made and by whom such appropriation shall be expended.

To see what action the town will take for the safety of the public at the railroad crossing in the centre of the town, and at the railroad station opposite the end of Boulevard or Walnut street pending the abolishment of the grade crossing.

WINCHESTER IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION.

This is to be the name of the new organization that is being planned to do much to improve the Winchester of today and of the future. The new association will in a measure be similar to the old Village Improvement Association which did so much for the town, only its scope will be far broader and include everything that will tend to make the town bigger, busier and better. The object of the association is to develop public spirit and promote the general welfare of the town of Winchester. All branches of Winchester's town, business and professional life will have a place on the board of directors of the new organization, so that it will be seen the promoters propose that its work shall cover considerable ground.

Already 150 representative names have been secured, and the following energetic committee on membership propose at the meeting, Dec. 7, to have over 300 names: J. L. Ayer, chairman, E. H. Stone, C. E. Barrett, H. D. Nash, A. W. Rooney and G. A. Morrill.

A list of officers has been prepared by the nominating committee and will be presented at the Dec. 7 meeting. Also a constitution and by-laws have been prepared to be read at the same meeting by C. J. Allen, Geo. Adams Woods, S. D. Leland, S. W. Twombly, R. E. Joslin and C. A. Lane. At a meeting of these gentlemen Tuesday evening it was voted "That the Secretary of this committee on constitution and by-laws is advised to notify the committee on membership that a meeting to hear the report of committees is to be called on Thursday evening, Dec. 6 and that the name to be proposed is the Winchester Improvement Association."

The indications point to this association being a power for good.

ORGAN RECITAL.

There will be an organ recital at the church of the Epiphany on Sunday afternoon at 4.30. Mr. Heilman will play.

The program will be as follows:

Widor's Pastorale.
Widor's Allegro Vivace.
Widor's Moderato Cantabaile.
Dethier's Barcarolle.
Rubinstein's March from Feramors.

GRADE CROSSING HEARING.

The Two Bridges Plan Meets With Much Favor by Many.

B. & M. Generously Leaves Matter With Town and Commission to Decide.

The grade crossing Commissioners gave another hearing on the abolition of the grade crossing in the committee room at the Tremont Building last Saturday forenoon. It was the largest attended of any of the hearings yet held in Boston, the room being well filled. It looked at the opening of the hearing as if but little would be accomplished, the hitch coming on the question of fathering the Vinal plan. Counsel Joslin put it up to the counsel for the two railroads as to whether or not they approved of this plan. They both disclaimed representing it, and after considerable discussion it looked as if the hearing would go by default as neither cared to ask Mr. Vinal regarding his plan. The chairman of the Commission finally cut the knot by asking Mr. Vinal to explain, after which real progress was made and the end of the hearing now appears to be in sight. It will be remembered that at the last hearing this plan was under consideration, but that no estimate of the cost had been prepared, and for this reason an adjournment was had that the cost might be presented to the hearing, it being agreed by counsel for the two railroads that they would bear the expense.

William H. Coolidge, for the Boston & Maine railroad, who professed to know nothing of Mr Vinal's plans, was willing to have him go on with them, but he wanted it understood that he did not present him as a witness.

Alfred S. Hall, representing certain property holders in the vicinity of the proposed improvement, wanted to have the testimony continued as he wished to learn what was contemplated, and gave notice that he desired to be heard after the plans were presented. More than all, he wanted to know what position the railroad had taken in regard to submitting a plan of its own.

Mr. Coolidge replied that the road had no plan to present. It would have nothing to say until all the plans had been submitted and the cost of the undertaking figured out. He would not offer the Vinal plan as the plan of the railroad.

The Boston & Maine railroad had spent $10,000 in preparing plans none of which appeared to satisfy the town and now it had got through. He also said that the attitude of the Boston & Maine was that it will not offer any further evidence about the abolition of the crossing. All that it wants is the best plan.

Everett W. Burdett, for the Boston & Northern street railway, said that he indorsed the position taken by the steam railroad. He found much of interest in the Vinal plan, but was not prepared to accept it for his company. The electric railroad stands to one side until something is agreed upon. At the next meeting of the commission he would be prepared to state the position of the street railroad company in regard to all the plans that had been submitted.

Mr. Vinal then continued his explanations of his plan, a copy of which was printed in the STAR at the time of the last hearing. He said that the estimated cost of carrying out his scheme was $209,115, based on the assessed valuation of the property that would be affected.

Mr. Vinal then submitted a modified plan. He said that all of the essential features of the first one were preserved, but that land damages were minimized. By this second estimate the cost would be reduced to $173,091. He had allowed $28,000 for new street railway construction. It was provided to take about 20 feet from the common for station purposes.

The second plan does not include the taking of the Whitney building nor Waterfield building, but advocates a new street through the vacant land in the rear of this latter building.

Mr. Burdett then placed on the table a copy of the STAR containing Mr. Redfern's two bridge plan, and this caused considerable interest. This plan, it will be remembered, is similar to that of Mr. Vinal's with the exception that it calls for a second bridge from upper Main street to Winchester place, thence by way of Converse place to the corner of Main and Walnut streets.

Mr. Burdett thought the Vinal plan would be very objectionable to the Boston & Northern, as it would mean a diversion of about a quarter of a mile on the route of the through line of cars between Boston and Lowell. While he himself was not prepared to favor the two bridges scheme, yet his opinion was that the B. & N. would, as it gives a direct line of travel.

Mr. Coolidge said in his opinion the cost of carrying out either of these plans including the Selectmen's would amount to between $250,000 and $300,000. He however, did not propose to make any suggestions to the commission, but stood ready to carry out any recommendation it might make. It was going to be a very expensive undertaking and the road was willing to meet its 65 per cent. of the cost without protest. Mr. Coolidge took this opportunity to state the position of the Boston & Maine. He said that the road did not object to abolishing the crossing, but that it should be done in the best way possible, and that the road believed that something should be done to prevent accidents. The Boston & Maine would agree to anything that the citizens of Winchester desired if it met with the approval of the grade crossing commissioners, and the road would pay its 65 per cent. of the cost. He wanted it understood, however, that the company would not pay for any boulevards or ornamental features for the beautifying of Winchester centre. Further in the hearing, he said that the land damages that would arise from building a bridge over the present crossing as favored by the Selectmen would be very large.

The Redfern scheme met with so much approval that Mr. Vinal was requested to incorporate it in his plan, with the change that Railroad avenue be used instead of Winchester place, thus affording a direct route into Main street at Grover's corner. The plan and estimated cost will then come up again at the next hearing.

As this ended the testimony, Solicitor Joslin moved that the hearing adjourn for two months, meantime the taxpayers be called together in town meeting and a committee appointed to examine into the plans proposed and report back to the citizens who could then vote on the plan that was considered the best.

Alfred S. Hall said that as the Boston & Maine was ready to go more than half way, he was surprised that Mr. Joslin should favor a two months' adjournment. One month would be plenty of time for a committee to report and the town take action.

Mr. Joslin did not agree with Mr. Hall, stating that two months was none too long to arrange for a full consideration of the matter.

It was finally agreed to hold the next hearing on Saturday, Jan. 5, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the same place.

AN ENJOYABLE WHIST PARTY.

The first of a series of three whist parties to be given by the Ladies' Friendly Society was held Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. O. C. Sanborn of Central street. The game was played about an hour and a half and twenty-five tables were occupied. The first prize was won by Mrs. W. I. Palmer, a fern, and the second by Mrs. Wm. P. Berry, a flowering plant. Mrs. Charles Symmes and Mrs. Irving Symmes were a tie for the consolation prize, which was won by Mrs. Charles Symmes. It was a bunch of Russian violets. After refreshments were served, which were provided by Mrs. Herbert Nickerson, Dr. Hindes entertained those present with a group of songs, with Miss Chase as accompanist. The genial doctor was in fine voice and his excellent singing was thoroughly enjoyed. The afternoon was one of much pleasure, and bespeaks a large attendance for the remaining parties.

HORSE RAN AWAY.

Visions of a bad accident loomed up Monday afternoon when Mrs. Henry Weed's horse attached to her runabout, with one wheel missing, dashed out of the Fells near the end of Highland avenue, and after running down Prince avenue, fell in a tangle, with the carriage at Washington street.

People who witnessed the runaway at once went into the Fells to search for Mrs. Weed, it being feared that she was badly injured. These searchers followed the trail almost to Stoneham without finding other than parts of the carriage and traces of the horse running over the road. In the meantime Mrs. Weed had telephoned from Stoneham of her safety. It seemed that she had alighted from the carriage, and had removed the bridle to hitch the horse with the halter, when the animal broke away, knocking her down and pulling the carriage over her. Very fortunately she was not injured beyond being bruised and shaken up and sustaining a nervous shock. The horse was somewhat cut, but not seriously so, and the runabout was reduced to splinters.

TURKEY ROLL.

There will be the regular Thanksgiving turkey roll at the Calumet Club as usual. The "roll" will be held on Saturday evening, commencing at seven o'clock, and will doubtless be participated in by many of the bowlers at the Club.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Kelley entertained their evening whist club last Friday evening.

Miss Lucy Young was in Groton, Mass. for a few days visit last week.

Leroy Richardson came home from Dartmouth to attend the game at Cambridge last Saturday returning to college Sunday.

The recent fair given by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. netted about seven hundred dollars.

Extensive preparations are being made by the firemen for their concert and ball to be given in the Town Hall on Friday evening, Dec. 7. The feature of the evening will be the hose coupling contest. Only 12 teams will be entered, not more than two from any one city or town. Entries are to be made to Capt. E. R. Libbey, 13 Kendall street. The contest will be run under league rules and prizes of $15, $10 and $5 will be awarded.

The new magazines are out, and can be found at Wilson the Stationer's.

Mrs. Carolyn B. Reed, formerly soprano in the Unitarian church choir, is to be the soloist at the Thanksgiving service on next Thursday morning at the Unitarian church. This will be good news to her many admirers in Winchester, as will be the additional fact that she is again to sing Woodbury's simple chant, "If I were a Voice," which she sang so impressively at a previous union service.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Hurd have given up their house on Fletcher street and are living with Mr. Theodore Hurd of Main street.

Several of the Dartmouth boys were in town last week having come down for the Harvard Dartmouth game on Saturday last.

The marriage of Mr. George McGlynn of Beverly, formerly of this town, and Miss Mary Terrett of Woburn took place last Sunday evening.

COMBINATION NOT ADVISABLE.

Sentiment that for the present the Winchester Handicraft Society had best continue in its chosen work without definite alliance with any other organization prevailed at the meeting of members of the Society and their friends which was held at the headquarters Pleasant street, on Tuesday evening. The opinion of the committee that was appointed at the meeting at Mr. Edwin Ginn's house was expressed by its chairman, Rev. J. W. Suter, who said that it is clearly impossible for the two societies to proceed along parallel lines and both to command the adequate support of the community. At the same time any combination seems at present to be inadvisable. Each of the groups is too new, too uncertain as to the precise character of all its future work. The best plan is for each to develop, avoiding as far as possible duplication of effort. Perhaps by the end of a year it may be shown whether there is need of considering any combination of forces.

It would, however, be desirable, Mr. Suter believed, to have a prominent member of each society on the board of directors of the other society. Such representation would help to prevent the interests of the two groups from ever becoming antagonistic.

This report of the special committee was highly approved by Mr. Ginn who said that the work of the two associations might very properly be differentiated. The Improvement association would no doubt concern itself mainly with the external appearance of the town, thus attending to matters of very great importance. The Handicraft Society, on the other hand, would stand for enriching the life of the community by educational effort, by teaching a considerable number of persons to make beautiful things both for the pleasure in making them and for the pecuniary profit to be derived thereby. Already the metal class numbers nearly a dozen and the class in wood carving has grown from two or three to six or eight. These classes, Mr. Ginn held, should be largely increased, as far as there are accommodations. There should be no question now but that the Handicraft Society is to become a permanent institution of the town.

President H. D. Murphy spoke of the necessity of finding workers on committees. The Handicraft Society's greatest need at present is for several people with some leisure who can assist the officers of the society in carrying out plans which unaided they cannot undertake. Mr. Ginn thought in this connection that the society should constitute itself a committee of the whole to do just what Mr. Murphy suggested.

The president stated that Mr. Frederick Allen Whiting, secretary of the Boston Society of Arts and Crafts, has consented to come to Winchester and deliver a lecture on general phases of the Handicraft movement throughout the country. Mr. Whiting was secretary of the applied arts section at the St. Louis exposition and has probably a better understanding of what has been done and what can be done in various communities than any other man in the movement. Mr. Whiting is at present in the West in attendance at the opening of the John Herron art institute in Indianapolis but immediately upon his return he will be ready to talk to the members of the Winchester society and their friends. According to a motion made at the meeting Mr. Murphy is to appoint a special committee to make the arrangements for this lecture. It is hoped to have an informal exhibition of some form or forms of crafts work, on the evening of Mr. Whiting's address.

The meeting adjourned at ten o'clock. Among those present besides the speakers just mentioned were Robert Coit, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Coburn, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Crowell, Mrs. Edwin Ginn, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Jenkins Mrs. Anthony Kelley, Rev. and Mrs. F. H. Means, Mrs. H. D. Murphy, Miss Norcross, Miss Nowell, Dr. A. V. Rogers, Miss Bertha Smith, Mr. Josef Sandberg, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Underwood.

13th ROLL CALL.

The 13th annual roll call and supper of the Baptist Young People's Union was held last Thursday evening in the vestry of the First Baptist Church and was a very enjoyable affair in spite of the inclement weather. About 75 members were present. J. Albert Hersey presided at the supper, which was in charge of Mrs. J. Albert Hersey, Mrs. Herbert V. Purman and Miss Clara Macdonald. Following the supper Rev. Arthur W. Smith gave an interesting talk on "Our Naval Cadets," relating his experiences on a recent visit to the naval academy at Annapolis.

The entertainment consisted of selections by a quartet composed of Miss Cora Mitton, Miss Agnes Crawford, Miss Jessie Peppard and Miss Mildred Ayer, readings by Miss Eva Stowers, mandolin solos by Alfred Dover, piano selections and singing by a chorus of young people of the society.

SHOULD GET TOGETHER AND WORK.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I want to say to the Democrats of our town that right now is the time to begin work for the battle of 1908, and under the leadership of the peerless statesman and leader, Wm. J. Bryan, the victory will be won. We should begin at once, to interest the new voters, and to attend to helping all who wish to be naturalized, that our voting list may soon be large enough so that Winchester will be represented all the time at the General Court by a Winchester man. To this end one and all can, and should help.

Am grateful to all for the complimentary vote given me on election day.

WHITFIELD TUCK.

The town of Hopkinton, southwest of Framingham, is the latest community to arrange with the Edison Electric Illuminating Company for electric service for street lighting. Arrangements have now been practically completed whereby the Edison Company will take over from the estate of L. E. Coolidge the small plant which has been used to operate a small number of lights in town. This will not only give the town the advantage of the Edison service for its street lighting, plans for which include a larger territory and a greater number of lights than have ever been used there, but it will make possible a considerable commercial service in the business places and homes of the residents. Heretetore the Coolidge estate has supplied ten or fifteen private customers and about thirty street lights. The Edison Company will furnish something like 150 street lights, a motor for pumping the town's water and it is hoped that at least 50 or 100 commercial customers may be added.

The way some of the biggest corporations in the country are voluntarily increasing the wages of employees is a cheering sign of the times. A number of the great railroad systems have made an advance and now the American Express company with its thousands of employes has raised the pay of the men ten per cent. Let the good work go on! With the present prosperity of the country so great that the transportation companies can hardly handle the business that is forced upon them a ten per cent raise in the pay of the rank and file of the army of employes is little enough.—[Wakefield Item] Yes, and who pays for the increase. The dear public, to be sure.

Very naturally Governor Guild and Lieutenant Governor Draper object to being sidetracked thus early as candidates for succession. And yet men like Sam McCall must come to the front in the Republican party ere long or the party will proceed to the rear. Mr. Draper is a pleasant man, but his vote as against E. Gerry Brown's ought to convince him that he can never be Governor. Mr. Brown's total, without funds, and with nobody speaking for him, was phenomenal.—[Charlestown Enterprise.

Reading has asked for $25,000 to enlarge its electric light plant. The indebtedness is already $30,000. A municipal lighting plant is an unknown quantity.

NOVEMBER ENTERTAINMENT.

The regular social or entertainment at the Congregational Church for this month took place last evening in the vestries of that edifice. The large committee of ladies under the chairmenship of Miss Alice Richardson and Miss Jessie Marsh made the evening one of enjoyment to all who attended. Preparations were made for an attendance of 300, and the number present very nearly exceeded that figure.

The evening's program was of readings, and music, the interest centering about Mr. LaRue Vredenburgh of Boston, who gave a varied program, including: Canadian dialect stories and original selections. His work fully justified the interest with which his coming was looked forward to.

The Winchester artists who took part were warmly received and heartily encored. Dr. J. Churchill Hindes gave a solo and Miss Carolyn L. Pond and Miss Gladys Spaulding rendered a very creditable four-handed piano selection.

At the close of the program refreshments were served by a number of young men and women. Those assisting were: Dorothy Lawrence, Edith Hinds, Pauline Blank, Katherine Fletcher, Lilla Kirby, Lillian Towne, Katherine Ordway, Maud Gutterson, Ruth Kneeland, Charlena Grant, Roland Lane, Thomas Hemenway, Archie Walling, Gordon Parker, Philip Redfern, Harold Robinson, Frank Kendall, Dwight Cabot, Leonard Howe, Dwight Fiske.

Carpenters' district council, which represents 5000 men of greater Boston, began its plans last week to enforce the 45 cents an hour rate and Saturday half-holiday all the year round if the employers do not agree to the terms. It was announced that in accordance with the vote of the council that every one of about 700 employers of the district had been notified of the council's decision to raise the minimum rate from 41 cents an hour after May 1, so as to have ample time to arrange their contracts and new work on the change in wage basis.

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate.

By virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Patrick T. Walsh and Ellen A. Walsh, his wife in her right, both of Winchester in the County of Middlesex, to me, Thomas Moore, of Woburn in said County, dated May 6, 1902, recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, book 2965 page 560, for breach of condition of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at public auction, on the premises hereinafter described on Monday, December 10, 1906, at three o'clock in the afternoon,

all and singular the premises described in said mortgage deed, viz:—

A certain parcel of land with the buildings in process of construction thereon situated in said Winchester containing six thousand and six hundred and ninety six (6696) square feet and bounded as follows, namely:—beginning at the northerly corner of the premises on the westerly side of Main street at an iron pipe set in the ground three feet distant southerly from the southeasterly corner of land of Stillman Nichols, thence the line runs southerly by and with said Main street, fifty (50) feet to an iron pipe set in the ground at other land of John C. Nichols; thence turning the line runs westerly on and by said other land of John C. Nichols one hundred forty and 3.10 feet to a stake at land of Richburg; thence turning the line runs northerly on and by said land of Richburg fifty (50) feet to a point at other land of John C. Nichols three feet distant southerly from the southwest corner of land of said Stillman Nichols; thence turning the line runs easterly on other land of said John C. Nichols parallel with and three feet distant from the southerly line of said land of Stillman Nichols one hundred thirty and 3.10 feet to a point of beginning.

Being the same premises conveyed by John C. Nichols to said Ellen A. Walsh by deed dated March 7, 1902, and recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, book 2951 page 281, and subject to the restrictions stated therein. Three hundred dollars will be required to be paid by the purchaser at the time and place of sale.

THE GUANACO.

A Patagonian Animal That Seeks Its Own Graveyard.

It seems from the accounts given by Darwin and by W. H. Hudson that all the guanacos of the southern part of Patagonia must resort when the hour of death approaches to a certain spot in a certain river bed which has become a perfect mausoleum of their bones.

Mr. Hudson notes that it is only the guanaco of the southern extremity of the South American continent that has this habit, a habit restricted to descendants of forefathers who lived in an extremely rigorous climate. Mr. Hudson conjectures that among these forefathers the instinct grew up when the stress of hunger and cold was very dire of resorting to this sheltered place in the river bed, where they might find warmth in their own closely collected numbers and possibly food. By a continual survival of those which betook themselves to this place of refuge the race instinct would be formed of resorting thither when they felt the tides of life running low. This feeling, Mr. Hudson argues, their descendants are likely to experience now at the approach of the hour of death.

But now it is no longer just a passing spell of extreme cold that leads them thither. The death call has come, and they must lay their bones in the common mortuary. It is not "in order to die" that the guanaco seeks this place; it would be nearer the truth if we were to say it was "in order to live."

But the most true account of all is that it is in mere obedience to the inherited instinct that the guanaco resorts to this refuge.

Yet another instance of this mysterious guidance is afforded by the habit of the rattlesnakes in the colder countries to assemble together for hibernation in caves. These snakes on emerging from the caves cover long distances in their wanderings, their young are generally born far away, and yet these young succeed in finding their way to the caves with the greatest certainty. —London Spectator.

TASTES IN CIGARS.

Some Men Like Their Tobacco Moist and Some Like It Dry.

The public taste for cigars varies in different localities and countries, and in all the large factories cigars are conditioned to suit the demands of the country to which they are to be sent. In Europe, more especially in the British isles, the consumer of cigars requires that they should be dry—in fact, almost brittle. It is a common incident in that country to see a smoker take his cigar and place it to his ear to see if it will give forth a crackling sound, and if it does not crackle the cigar is considered too moist. Pipe smoking tobaccos, however, are required very moist.

In the United States the proper condition for cigars and pipe smoking tobaccos is just the reverse. The American smoker requires his cigars in such a condition that the wrapper, binding and filler will yield to the pressure of the fingers without cracking or breaking the wrapper, while, on the other hand, the smoking tobaccos, especially the granulated tobaccos, must be moderately dry.

Various methods are employed for keeping cigars and tobaccos in the proper condition, but up to the present time no method has been devised that will act automatically. Both manufactured tobacco and cigars are susceptible to climatic conditions, and it requires the constant attention of the manufacturer and dealer to regulate the moisture in his stock cupboard or showcase. In retail stores great trouble is experienced in keeping the air in the showcases in the proper condition, especially when these are constantly being opened. In warm wet weather more moisture is admitted than is needed, while during the cold winter months the cigars are apt to become too dry, especially in the upper part of the showcases.—Science.

First Printing Press.

The first printing press in the eastern settlement of America was set up in 1638. In the summer of that year a ship bearing a printing press, a printer and three pressmen arrived on the shores of New England, the printer being Stephen Daye. In the same year the press was set up at Cambridge. One of the earliest and perhaps the most celebrated of the issues was "The Bay Psalm Book." It is interesting to know that the actual press is still preserved. After various wanderings in Boston, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Vermont it was found in Windsor county and presented to the Vermont [illegible]

A MENACE TO CITIES

Professor Fessenden Sounds a Note of Warning.

Cities Not Adapted to Operate Business Enterprises—Loss of Capital Through New Developments—The Danger a Real One.

It is becoming more and more generally recognized that undertakings founded on the great public needs of the highly organized society of modern times should be controlled by society. Whether, having the power, it is advisable that municipalities should actually engage in such undertakings or whether they should merely maintain their control, as it has been aptly put, through their powers as a landlord, is a matter which will be determined by the municipalities from political, social and economic as well as engineering considerations.

Considering the question from its engineering side alone, it is found that from the very essential nature of the matter only a certain class of engineering undertakings can be efficiently and properly operated by states or municipalities. It is very important that this limitation should be recognized, as where the limitation has been overstepped it has resulted in heavy financial losses to the governing bodies immediately concerned, it has seriously checked development in engineering lines, and these results have in consequence afforded a strong argument to those opposed to municipal operation of public utilities.

It is true that under state or municipal operation some minor and sporadic developments may be expected, but nothing of a general or important character. Important developments generally come only from the hands of individuals or bodies responsible only to themselves and provided with the incentive of a large profit. The elimination of self responsibility and incentive would inevitably produce a condition in industrial and scientific development analogous to the dark ages.

It is to be noted that this conclusion is derived from engineering considerations alone and does not include any consideration from the political, social or economic side. There may, it is conceivable, be political, social and economic considerations which tend to affect this limitation. Considered, however, from the engineering standpoint alone there can be no question but that the field of state and municipal operation should be limited to undertakings in which there is no immediate prospect of or need for improved method.

A danger which is always associated with the ownership of industrial undertakings is that the capital invested may be lost through the development of new and cheaper methods and processes. The extent to which industrial machinery of certain types is rendered obsolete by new improvements is not always realized. The writer is personally acquainted with one street car railroad plant in which the entire electrical equipment of the power house was thrown out and replaced with improved machinery four times within a period of ten years. The Carnegie company is reported, correctly, it is believed, to have scrapped on one occasion more than $1,000,000 worth of new machinery which had never been used.

This has already become a serious matter for many municipalities which have engaged in undertakings lying outside of the engineering limits defined above. Many of these municipalities installed plants for the production of electric light at a time prior to the advent of important improvements in generating and distributing electricity, and as these municipalities in common with most municipalities made no proper allowance for depreciation the capital invested has been practically lost, and in addition the cost of electric light to the consumer is much higher than it is in other places equipped with later and more economical types of machinery. In addition, heavy and expensive repairs have been necessary and the taxes correspondingly increased. This has reacted upon the municipalities, since the heavy rates have caused manufacturers to move away to other towns, and this again has still further increased the burden upon those remaining. There are already indications that a considerable number of these municipalities which have engaged in improper undertakings are entering upon a period of financial difficulty.—R. A. Fessenden.

As a Socialist Sees It.

Every recognized authority on Socialist economics, from Marx to Ferri, has been and is an avowed economic evolutionist. They all without exception recognize that public ownership under capitalism must come before the full Socialist programme can meet with realization.

When the Socialist party shall succeed to power in municipality, state or nation it will fall heir to the holdings of its capitalist predecessors. Every dollar's worth of property that we can wrest from private capitalism through public ownership will fall into the hands of the Socialist party without a struggle upon its succession to power.—International Socialist Review.

What Government Is For.

It is the appropriate function of the government to safeguard the individual and to see that the game of business is fairly played, that the cards are held above the table and that everybody is given a square deal. It is not the appropriate function of the government to sit in the game.—Hon. Leslie M. Shaw.

An Ungallant Wish.

In the court of sessions in Scotland the judges who do not attend or give a proper excuse for their absence are by law liable to a fine. This law, however, is never enforced, but it is common on the first day of the session for the absentee to send an excuse to the lord president. Lord Stonefield having sent such an excuse, on the president mentioning it the late Lord Justice Clerk Braxfield said in his broad dialect, "What excuse can a stout fellow like him ha'e?" "My lord," said the president, "he has lost his wife." The justice, who was fitted with a Xantippe, replied: "Has he? That is a gude excuse indeed. I wish we had a' the same."

"SAVED MY LIFE"

—That's what a prominent druggist said of Scott's Emulsion a short time ago. As a rule we don't use or refer to testimonials in addressing the public, but the above remark and similar expressions are made so often in connection with Scott's Emulsion that they are worthy of occasional note. From infancy to old age Scott's Emulsion offers a reliable means of remedying improper and weak development, restoring lost flesh and vitality, and repairing waste. The action of Scott's Emulsion is no more of a secret than the composition of the Emulsion itself. What it does it does through nourishment—the kind of nourishment that cannot be obtained in ordinary food. No system is too weak or delicate to retain Scott's Emulsion and gather good from it.

EAR TROUBLES.

As a Rule They Are Due to Abuses of Some Kind.

The best way to care for the ear is to study the things not to do. It is one of the most independent of organs, knowing very well how to take care of itself. If it is duly respected, little trouble or none will result. In cases where something unforeseen goes wrong a physician should be consulted at once. Almost all troubles of the ear are due to abuses of some kind. The wax seems to worry a great many people, and in their concern they usually manage to seriously interfere with its functions. In the healthy ear the wax, or cerumen, is a thin, yellowish fluid that thickens into a paste as it dries. Nature provides for its natural exit from the ear passage by uniting it with the tiny flakes of dead skin, which fall outward unnoticed either by seeing or feeling. Thus wax does not accumulate in a healthy ear, which has just enough to make sticky the stiff little hairs that grow in the passage.

Instruments should never be poked into the ear by the inexperienced nor wads of material continually mopped and squeezed into the opening for cleansing. Usually such treatment induces an increase or caking of wax. Hot water is the best solvent for wax, 105 to 115 degrees F. If the need of it is imperative, gently syringe the ear with it. Cotton plugs in the ear are useful at times, but should be used no more than absolutely necessary, for they obstruct the canal and interfere with the natural way of casting off wax.

DESTINY OF THE JEW.

To Give the World a Homogeneous Humanity, Says Walter Hurt.

Zionism, as it presents itself to me, is a beautiful but a barren dream. It is the noble conception of a splendid sentimentalist, born from the grand brain and nursed in the great heart of Theodore Herzl and well calculated to inspire the imagination of a people that have cherished through the centuries its imperishable ideals. It is the flower of a mighty love that never can know a momentary fruition.

In this clannishness of the Jew, engendered by ages of persecution, we find the philosophy of conditions that appear to us as cruel. His has been but a preparatory experience. The strongest bond of brotherhood in the world today is that of Jewish blood. It is the red badge of a freemasonry founded on a community of suffering, and its ritual is written large upon each heart in letters of pain. And this it is that at last will weld the world together. With the infusion of Jewish blood into the universal social body—a blood become so distinctive that it will tincture the whole vast volume—men will meet from the ends of the earth and, looking in each other's face, will recognize a clansman.

This is the destiny reserved for the Jew—this is his sociologic function—to break down the barriers of race that partition society into nations and give to the world a homogeneous humanity.—Walter Hurt in Culturist.

Shrinkage of Flannel.

All good flannel is shrunk before being offered to the public, and the process is carried on by the most experienced cloth workers. The flannels are placed between two heavy wet sheets first and left in that position for twenty-four to thirty-six hours. When removed they are spread out on specially prepared rails in a drying room heated by steam pipes, where they are allowed to remain until thoroughly dry. The next process is to place the lengths of the flannel in folds between layers of glossy paper and subject it to a pressing by hydraulic machines. The more pressure they are subjected to the more valuable and heavy the flannels become.—London Graphic.

Sydney Smith's Sharp Tongue.

Sydney Smith was at a party one evening when, seeing Mrs. Grote, wife of the historian, enter, wearing a rose colored turban, he suddenly exclaimed, "I now know the meaning of the word grotesque!" He professed his cordial liking for both her and her husband, saying: "I like them. I like him, he is so ladylike, and I like her, she's such a perfect gentleman."

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Union Thanksgiving Services.

The union services announced in our column of Church News indicate that the cooperative spirit, for which the churches of Winchester are now famous, has not suffered any decline. In many religious periodicals, in daily newspapers, and in the publications of the Massachusetts Federation of Churches, this unity of spirit is commended as a pattern worthy of wide imitation. Precisely why citizens of any community, who associate freely in matters social and political, should decline so to associate when the matter in hand is the promotion of the highest human interests, is a problem the average layman finds too hard for his solution. Certainly our sect divisions find little sanction from Him whose last prayer for his disciples was that they might be one. Explain, excuse or justify our present sect-divisions as we may, the thoughtful man must hail with pleasure every effort of the churches to come together, for work or for worship.

These Thanksgiving gatherings have another aspect. The occasion is a national holiday, the only one preserved from the usages of the fathers having a distinctly religious character. Fast-day long since vanished; we prosperous Americans do not take kindly to sack-cloth and ashes. But giving thanks is precisely in line with our natural bent; and Thanksgiving Day is an institution we should zealously cherish. Let families be gathered together for an annual reunion Let the ball game be played, the excursion taken. But with it all, and as the heart of it all, let the service of praise be provided, and attended! Certainly the program offered by those in charge of these two union services is full of interest, and should prove attractive to multitudes of citizens, of all shades of religious belief.

The Boston & Maine's Generous Attitude.

The attitude taken by the Boston & Maine Railroad regarding the settlement of the question of the abolition of the grade crossing is most commendable, and sets at rest the repeated assertion that the company was opposing the scheme and trying to overcome the wishes of the town through delay and other subterfuges.

At the hearing in Boston last Saturday, Mr. Coolidge, counsel for the railroad, stated its position which was that the road would agree to any plan decided upon by Winchester which would meet with the approval of the crossing commission. He said that the desire of the railroad had long been to make impossible accidents at the crossing, and to that end had spent $10,000 in preparing plans which were not accepted by the town. With perfect fairness, the railroad will refuse, he said, to contribute toward the expenses of ornamental features and boulevards, which in no way enter into the actual abolition of the crossing.

The elimination of the crossing is going to be quite expensive—about $300,000—yet the railroad is perfectly willing to pay its share, which will be 65 per cent. of the total cost.

The electric railroad also is not opposed to the scheme, the one desire being that the proposed bridge be kept as nearly in line with Main street as possible. This request is a justifiable one, for the reason that the B. & N. wish to have this through line between Boston and Lowell as direct as possible, in order to save time.

The matter now rests with the town and the commission, and the sooner we decide on some scheme the quicker the crossing will be abolished. A town meeting to that end will soon be called.

Two Bridges Plan in Favor.

Mr. C. E. Redfern's two bridges plan for the elimination of the grade crossing, met with considerable favor at the hearing last Saturday, the feature containing so much merit that Mr. Vinal was requested by the Commission to incorporate the extra bridge in his plan. Mr. Redfern's scheme eliminates the one objectionable feature of the Vinal plan—the roundabout way of travel between the two sides of the town,—by giving a direct route between upper and lower Main street. Mr. Redfern's idea is to cross over from Main street to Winchester place by bridge, thence by Converse place to Main street at the corner of Walnut street. In order to make the route more direct Railroad avenue was suggested. This would give an outlet in front of Lyceum Building and in direct line with Main street. The two bridges plan will be acceptable to the Boston & Maine if the Commissioners agrees that there should be two crossings. The Boston & Northern are heartily in favor as giving a direct route, and there appears to be no good reason why it should not meet with the approval of the town. The settlement of this question is for all time, and to rely on one bridge is sure to breed dissatisfaction in the future and result in much inconvenience to the inhabitants and business men.

The citizens will have an opportunity to vote on this question shortly.

Come, and Look the Ground Over.

At the suggestion of the STAR Mr. Guild has agreed to be present at the railroad crossing at the centre Thanksgiving morning at nine o'clock and explain his plan for the abolition of the grade crossing to the citizens. The Redfern and Vinal plans will also be shown on the ground by competent persons. They will also go over the ground and do everything in their power to make their plans clear. It is to be hoped that the citizens will take advantage of the chance to have these plans explained, as one of them is pretty sure to be adopted by the town. By looking over the ground citizens can vote more intelligently on this most important matter, than would otherwise be the case.

The hour is set at nine o'clock so as not to interfere with the Thanksgiving service to be held at the Unitarian Church at 10.30 o'clock.

When Water is Scarce at the Well.

Many a competitive company naturally dodges the question of financial backing, but when the subject is unavoidably brought up and retreat blocked, they say in an off-hand, "nothing of any account, you know" way, that Accident insurance is only a year's contract anyway, and consequently the assets behind their promises are more than adequate to cover the needs of the case.

This argument satisfies a good many men. They say to themselves the company in point makes a very plain annual statement and if I am killed this year I will certainly get my money. One policy and the security is about as good as another. An argument undoubtedly used by some people in San Francisco who now are sorry that they were mistaken. Why The Travelers? Because the financial well from which we draw our claim money is fifty years deep; nearly forty-nine million dollars full.

Because the nearer the bucket has to be sent to the bottom to get water the stronger is the inclination on the part of the man at the crank to draw up the bucket half full. Insure in The Travelers.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I suggest that the citizens meet in the centre Thanksgiving day morning to look over and discuss on the ground the proposed ways of abolishing, the grade crossing there and have the projectors of the various plans present to explain same. Later on it can be discussed further at a public or town meeting in the Town Hall. Let us not do as Lynn has recently done, hang back until the commission has made its decision and then come forward and kick when it is too late.

Is it not funny and rediculous: all the statesmen, politicians, writers and press say, we can trust the people but not their elected representatives. What can be deduced out of this statement anyway? Will somebody answer?

The trouble with the electric lights is insufficient current because certain municipalities have held up the Edison company on locations for its trunk line. The law should provide that there might be appeal from the local authorities to the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners on questions of through lines. Who own the public highways anyway? However, I suppose our committee on municipal lighting plant will provide the remedy if our patience holds out.

Mr. Geo. Fred Williams and Mr. Robert Luce debated municipal ownership of public utilities this week, but as Dedham, the home of Mr. Williams, is served by a private water company, why should he not begin his missionary work at home? There are over forty private water companies in Massachusetts without a line of statute law to regulate them in any way outside of health, and yet some people think they want municipal ownership.

It would be only waste of money to spend it to get any more plans or surveys for the grade crossing abolition. Several thousand dollars have been expended already for such work and the plans of any possible practicability have been made and published and every common sense board or committee that studies the whole question carefully will finally come down to the Selectmen's plan, as it is decidedly the best that can be done with the proposition. Some features of some of the other plans are entirely outside of the question before us and must be treated separately. Beautifying the centre is one thing, abolishing the grade crossing is another.

I understand north Main street has a candidate for the Board of Selectmen for next year and while I am not at liberty to mention his name I may say he is the best looking young man up there and would make a good official. However, it will be necessary first to find out if south Main street will be satisfied with anything less than four-fifths of the membership of the board They ought to give the rest of the town a chance.

GRAY—HAWES.

The wedding of Mr. James Smith Gray and Miss Grace Florence Hawes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben C. Hawes, took place on Wednesday evening at seven o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, No. 409 Main street.

The ceremony was largely attended, the groom being one of the best known merchants in the centre, and enjoying a large circle of acquaintances here and in Hull, where he is also engaged in business. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Vincent Ravi, pastor of the Methodist church.

The wedding party entered the parlor to the strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin, played by an orchestra, the ceremony being performed beneath an arch of fern and pinks. The bride wore a dress of white chiffon taffeta, trimmed with real lace. Her veil was caught with a spray of lilies of the valley, and she carried a bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by two bridesmaids, Miss Mabel S. Hawes, her sister, and Miss Edna F. Hawes, her cousin. The bridesmaids wore blue silk muslin and carried pink carnations. Two rings were used in the service, and Miss Elizabeth Bartlett made a most charming little ring bearer, dressed in white. The best man was Mr. Walter S. Whitton of Hingham.

The ushers were Messrs. Harry E. Carter of Charlestown, Austin W. Hawes of Winchester, J. Frank Tuttle of Camden, N. J., and Carol A. Cleverly of Hull. The ceremony was attended by fully 300 guests.

A reception followed from eight until ten, the couple being assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Hawes. They left during the evening upon their wedding journey amid much merriment and with good wishes. The display of presents was very handsome, giving ample testimony of the couple's popularity. They will be at home after Jan. 1st, at No. 52 Cutting street.

Mrs. Fred Nason gave a luncheon on Wednesday to a few ladies, followed by whist in the afternoon.

Mrs. Electa M. Sherman, formerly president of The Fortnightly, gave a talk on "Parliamentary Law Practice" before the Boston Political Club on Wednesday afternoon.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Again and again have Hall Caine's plays been given in this city and never have they met with anything but most cordial of receptions. The Manxman, The Demester, The Christian, The Eternal City and The Prodigal Son have all proved Mr. Caine's dramatic power and they have all been royally welcomed whenever good fortune has brought them back to Boston for a revival. It is the Prodigal Son which is to be the attraction next week at the Castle Square, and its strong plot and picturesque characters will make it an especially popular Thanksgiving attraction. Its scenes are laid in Iceland, a country little known to us Americans and its plot progresses amid the most interesting and vividly realistic surroundings. The cast includes Mr. Hansel, Miss Lawton, Mr. Waldron, Mr. Miller, Mr. Johnson and the entire stock company. James A. Horne's play of rural life, Sag Harbor, will follow durbe week of December 3rd.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The report of the corresponding secretary Mrs. S. M. Fry given at the National convention which met in Hartford, Conn., Oct. 29 to 31, is encouraging: over 1000 new unions have been organized, 22,627 signers to the total abstainers pledge have been secured and there has been a net gain in membership of more than 13,000. Thirty-three states had a part in the program on Jubilee Night because of a net gain in membership from 100 to over 2000. Massachusetts was among the number.

The annual address of the president Mrs. Stevens, is spoken of as one of the most remarkable messages ever read before the National Convention. The opening words were characteristic of her. This is an extraordinary assemblage of elect women! It is not only a wonderful fulfillment of prophecy, but it is also a blessed and hopeful fore-gleam of the glad day when in every land the legalized saloon shall be outlawed, and women "in whose hands are the conservative and moral forces of the world" shall have the power to destroy the evils which corrupt the nations and bring untold misery to thousands of homes.

She extended a warm welcome to white ribbon comrades from other lands. "Our star spangled banner is dearer to us today because mingled with its folds are the flags of other countries—countries closebound to ours in the comradship of sacred work."

Under the heading total abstinence no former year has marked greater progress.

Dr. Willard Parker declared that when people understand what alcohol is and what it does they will put it out of existence for beverage purposes. The people more widely than ever before know what alcohol is. We can hardly enumerate the many ways in which this knowledge has been acquired. Scientific research religious conviction and business interests are bringing forth reasons for total abstinence which compel attention and action. The reiteration that alcohol is poison and not a food, has forced the study of the liquor problem upon many who have been unmindful, if not altogether unbelieving, and the careful, unprejudiced student of the question cannot fail to be in sympathy with the W. C. T. U. in its manifold efforts to have the people understand what alcohol is and does.

Our union has received from Mrs. S. W. Simpson superintendent of the Flower Mission department for Mass. W. C. T. U. contributions of delicacies for the sick to be distributed among the destitute sick. In addition to flowers, fruits, jellies, eggs, etc., will be acceptable as well as money to aid the distribution. Will any who can contribute something, be it ever so little, please give or send the same to Mrs. Kelley, 13 Park street, before or by Nov. 27.

ACTORS' NIGHT AT THE CASTLE SQUARE.

The second of the series of actors nights at the Castle Square will be given next Tuesday evening in honor of John Waldron. The occasion will be a gala one in recognition of the sterling merits of this popular member of the stock company, and his friends will turn out in full force to give him welcome. A souvenir portrait, with a record of his career, told in his own words, will be given everybody in attendance. It will be remembered that this series began about two weeks ago with a testimonial to Miss Thais Lawton, the leading lady of the Castle Square stock company, and that the house was crowded to the doors.

Each of these performances is to be a complimentary testimonial to some member of the company. It is not in the nature of a benefit performance but rather a sort of "evening at home" in which the actor or actress will welcome the friends who care to testify their appreciation by their attendance. A card bowl is placed in the lobby and all patrons who wish to "leave cards" may be sure that their cards will reach their destination and be welcomed as evidence of friendly interest.

At next Tuesday's testimonial to Mr. Waldron he will play Magnus Stephenson in Hall Caine's play, "The Prodigal son."

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

November 18th, 1906.

Board met at 7.45 p. m.

Present Messrs. Woods, Symmes, Richards and Rowe.

Voted to hold a special town meeting to discuss plans for the abolition of the grade crossing, on Tuesday evening November 27th, next at 7 45 o'clock, and signed warrant for the same.

Voted to appoint James Cavanagh, 28 Salem street, and Charles Smith, Arthur street, as special policemen, to April 1st, 1907.

John S. Blank, Jr., appeared in regard to the grading of his sidewalk on Highland avenue.

Voted that on petition of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company for location of one pole on Park avenue, that said petition be granted on condition that the pole be located 5 feet easterly of point marked on map filed by said company.

Received check from H. A. Goddard for $24 48 being his share of the expense for concrete sidewalk on the southerly side of Wolcott road.

Granted the use of the Town Hall to the pupils of the High schoo' on the evening of December 28th, next, for the Christmas play, same being applied for through Chairman Currier of the School Board.

Received notification from the United States naval authorities that Guy Harrold Hudson of Stone avenue had deserted from the U. S. S. "Alabama."

Voted that the clerk write the Boston & Maine Railroad Superintendent of the southern division, that the town has just completed the macadamizing of Cross street from Washington street to the railroad bridge, and request him to present a plan for the rebuilding of said bridge to the proper width of the roadway; work to be done by the railroad, so that the work of rebuilding Cross street can be completed.

The Selectmen and the Town Treasurer cancelled and destroyed nine bonds of $500 00 each, designated Bacon Street Bridge Bonds, and unmbered 119 to 126 inclusive, and 143; same done in accordance with vote of the town at the last town meeting.

Received communication from J. Albert Brackett in regard to the regulating of speed of automobiles; referred to the Chief of Police to report.

Received application for a druggist license from Frank H. Knight at and in store formerly owned by Young & Brown; in accordance therewith, the clerk was instructed to have the usual advertisement inserted in the paper.

Received communication from A. E. Whitney in regard to catch basin on Walnut street near Parkway. Voted to thank Mr. Whitney, and to refer the subject matter to the Supt. of Streets to report.

Received communication from S. S. Stevens in regard to loam space on sidewalk in front of his property on Pine street, and saying that there were too many trees there, and asking to have three of them cut down. Replied to the former request, that the town laid the loam spaces, but did not keep same in repair; and to the latter request, that same was referred to the Tree Warden.

Received communication from Wm. J. Daly in regard to Westley street. Replied that work had been ordered done and would be completed shortly.

Copy of letter sent to the Metropolitan Park Commission October 29th, 1906:—

"Voted that the vote of September 4th, 1906, in regard to change of grade on Bacon street at the westerly entrance of the Parkway, be sent by the clerk to the Metropolitan Park Commission through its member from Winchester, Mr. D. N. Skillings, with a request that the commission acknowledge the communication and accept the conditions as specified in said vote; and the commission is requested to furnish as soon as possible the edgestones, paving blocks and bricks, and catch basin equipments necessary for doing said work. Said material to be subject to the approval of the Supt. of Streets.

The road bed material for subgrade and surface is left for later conderation as to its being furnished by the Park Commission or by the Town; it being understood, however, that in either case, expense of same is to be borne by the Commission."

In reply to the above communication the following letter was received:—"Board of Selectmen, Winchester, Mass., Gentlemen:—I am directed by the Commission to acknowledge receipt of your letter of October 29th, addressed to Mr. Skillings of this Commission and transmitting copy of vote of your Board of September 4th, in regard to change of grade at junction of Bacon street and Mystic Valley Parkway.

"The Commission further direct me to say that the conditions attached to said vote are accepted by them and that, while it is impracticable to go forward with the work immediately, they will, as soon as it can be arranged, be ready to go forward with the work in the manner indicated in said letter." (Signed,) John Woodbury, Secretary.

Warrants drawn for $707.74 and $1175 17.

BASKET BALL.

The Winchester A. A was badly defeated last Saturday night at Melrose, by the Melrose Athletic Club which is composed of former Melrose High School players, in a very fast game, 72 to 20. The Winchester team has had no practice this season and therefore did not make as good a showing as was expected, though with practice they would turn out a good fast team, as was shown at different parts of the game Ben Vaughn of Melrose was the star of the game, making 19 baskets or 38 points for his team. Crawford and King did some good playing for Winchester

In a practice game last Tuesday, the High school first team defeated the second 44 to 18. The score during the first half was very close, being tied two or three times and at its end 16 to 11 for the first team However in the second they got down to work and they drew ahead with ease. The team play of the second team in the first half was better executed than that of the first team but in the second half it was entirely different. Collins, Grant and Thompson put up the best play for the first, while Little, Dover and Welch did some good playing for the second.

W. H. S. NOTES.

The cross country run last Friday afternoon was won by Pratt, a freshman, who finished the run just thirty-two minutes after starting from the High School. The entries. McPhee '07, Symmes '07, Redfern '07, Park '07, Webber '07, Cummings '07, Hudson '09, De Bussy '09, Foster '09, Pratt 10, Sheridan '10, and Walling '10. With the exception of Webber and Foster, started out on the run from the High School at just 3:15. Pratt, McPhee, and Symmes, the prize winners, were bunched together, ahead of the others over the whole course, which ran up the Parkway from the High School into the Fells around the South Reservoir, out of the Fells to Main street by the Whittemore brook road, up Main to Symmes corner, down Bacon street to the Parkway, along the Parkway to Manchester Field, finishing on the straight-away at the base ball back stop. Walling, the only man to drop out, did so at the causeway on account of his inability to breathe, because of a bad cold. Pratt finished at 3 47, sprinting the last hundred yards or so followed by McPhee, and then Symmes. The rest finished in the following order: Sheridan, Hudson, Redfern, Park, DeBussy, Cummings. The prizes were, first, a stein, second and third, watch fobs, gold plated pendants with ribbons.

At a meeting of the directors of the Athletic Association last Tuesday, it was voted to buy a new basket ball, support the second team, and to see about purchasing a stop watch.

The first basket ball team has not been picked yet, and will probably not be for about two weeks The teams that represent the first in practice, and the second in games with other second teams are only temporary divisions for the present, until the first shall be selected. R. Charles Thompson '08 has been elected temporary captain of the second team by the Athletic Association. Games have been secured by Manager Edward Mason of the second team, for tomorrow night with the Odell Club of Cliftondale at Cliftondale, and for Monday afternoon with the Everett H. S. second in the High School gymnasium

The plays are rapidly being learned and rehearsals are taking place twice a week in the High school assembly hall. The parts have not yet been fully decided upon.

At last the long expected has arrived at the High school. Twenty-four lockers were set in the boys' dressing room last Thursday and Friday and soon more, are to follow.

We have Fabers new desk companions, just out from the factory. Wilson the Stationer.

...A... Halloween Payment

By ALICE LOUISE LEE

Copyright, 1906, by Alice Louise Lee

SINCE his sixth year Leander Remely 2d had regarded Halloween as sacred to getting even with such inhabitants of Shedd's Corners as had trampled on his rights and privileges on many occasions.

Twice six Halloweens had dawned on him when his vengeance was directed toward a certain Jacob Fessler, only a couple of years distant from Ellis island, a big rawboned German who picked up our language slowly and was regarded as rather stupid until one bright Saturday in October when that illusion was dispelled.

Jacob lived on the swamp farm half a mile from Shedd's Corners. The name of the farm indicated its general forlornness, while the little story and a half ramshackle brown house near the road bore witness to the fact that the place was, in the language of Shedd's Corners, "clean run down." This popular opinion Jacob Fessler, his mother, a horse, two cows and a pig were doing their best to undermine.

Of crops that first year Jacob had almost none, but nature provided him with an amazingly abundant October crop, for which he had toiled not. Scattered over the farm, on every grassy knoll of the rocky hillside above the swamp, great chestnut trees spread their branches full of ripe nuts.

Now, Jacob, being new to the land and a stranger to its unwritten laws, was foolish enough to suppose that the chestnuts, being part and parcel of his property, belonged to him, a mistake which a dozen of the small boys of Shedd's Corners, led by Leander 2d, strove to point out to him that memorable Saturday in October.

It was a bright, crisp morning, just the time, thought Mrs. Remely, standing over the gridiron, to send Leander out to sell soft soap in behalf of her church fund; therefore she rapped smartly on the stovepipe with the pancake turner and called nasally: "Le-an-der! Le-an-der! Get right up or I'll tell your pa."

There was no reply—she had expected none—but immediately a loud thump above, followed by another, formally announced the fact that both of Leander's feet had shot through the legs of his trousers and were planted on the floor. Mrs. Remely knew from experience that there must be a special reason for such unwonted activity, but she made no remarks when he appeared at the stair door.

Leander, thoroughly acquainted with that reason, also made no remarks. Out in the barn, hidden, lay his father's new bamboo fishing pole and two of the best meal sacks for which Leander 1st had been searching three days.

"Leander," remarked his mother at the breakfast table, "after breakfast I want that you should take that pail of soap Mrs. Fessler made for me and go up Maple street and sell it." She dumped two smoking hot griddlecakes on her son's plate as a propitiatory offering, but it did not propitiate.

One fist doubled mechanically into his eye and a wail of "Now, ma," arose, but Leander 1st interposed sternly, "Do as your mother says and stop that bawling!"

This settled matters, fish pole, meal sacks and all. Half an hour after Leander started out his soul filled with a loathing which included soft soap, church projects and the imposition on his time constantly occurring in the bosom of his family. As to the project, the women of the M. E. church were seeing who could raise the greatest amount of money from an original investment of 10 cents each. As a result Mrs. Remely was victimizing the town with soap manufactured for her by Mrs. Fessler.

Just around the corner Leander ran into his right hand lieutenant, Sissy Brown. Sissy was headed for the swamp armed with baskets and a long pole. "Hey, there!" cried Sissy. "Wot you up to now?"

"Soap!" sniffed Leander, holding the pail of strong smelling, jellylike substance as far away as his arm would reach.

He had no need to say more. Sissy understood. Sissy was sent out by his mother thrice a week with loaves of new bread to sell. He had long felt that never again could he eat anything tainted with the smell of new bread.

The boys exchanged looks. "Say, darst ye?" asked Sissy.

"Yep, I darst!" returned Leander, his eyes roving to the pole and baskets.

"You be runnin', then," suggested Sissy.

Leander obeyed. A foot shot out in front of him. There was a crash, a fall, and away rolled the pail of soap, spilling its contents over the walk. Once Leander had performed a similar act of friendship for Sissy when they wanted to go fishing, only the bread had been directed into the gutter.

After that the way of the transgressors was easy—for awhile. Leander, concluding not to reveal the catastrophe to his mother until later, hid the pail behind the fence, stole into the barn by way of the stable door, secured the bags and fishing pole and in an incredibly short time was thrashing the chestnut trees on the swamp farm along with Sissy and ten other kindred spirits.

Hour after hour they worked while the sun's rays grew hotter until Leander voiced the general condition when he announced complaisantly that he was "all of a lather!" To be sure, he was never complaisant about being "lathered" when at work in his father's garden, but what did perspiration matter beside two meal bags full of chestnuts at $3 per bushel? Nothing mattered, although he knew there must come an hour of reckoning, for the bamboo pole was a wreck, while the seat of his trousers was badly punctured owing to a broken branch in a tree. Furthermore, his hands, knees and elbows were full of prickers, and a hard red lump adorned the back of his neck called into being by a chestnut bur fleeing from the end of a long pole.

Yes, he knew there must come an hour of reckoning, but he had not counted on its arriving so suddenly and unexpectedly as it did.

It was nearly noon when he headed a procession of boys staggering under their last loads toward the thicket near the line fence where their treasure was stored. He it was who pushed first among the branches and saw the heaped up bags—and something else!

He gave one yell, and a moment later eleven boys, unincumbered, were flying helter skelter over the fence, while the twelfth was ignominiously held by means of a broad German hand at the seat of his punctured trousers and another on his coat collar.

"Dist ist eine, whay you call—it—bee, ya?" inquired Jacob pleasantly as he churned the unfortunate Leander up and down. "Eine bee fur to nuts gather! Ya?"

With the last word Leander flew head first across the fence, landed in a mud puddle and went home a sadder and a madder boy than when he had started out with the soap.

The soap episode had entirely escaped his mind, but not his mother's. An inkling of the affair had reached her owing to the downfall of the minister, whose salary the soap fund was intended to swell. That good man found it unhealthy to tread on slippery places and had brought his grievance, also the discovered soap pail, to the mortified Mrs. Remely.

Therefore it happened that there was a deal of one sided conversation in the kitchen between Leanders the first and the second directly on the latter's arrival, and it ended by the second's retiring to the wood shed while the first cut off such a portion of the weeping willow back of the house as was suitable to the occasion. That weeping willow was already badly mutilated.

Late in the day when Leander the younger emerged from temporary confinement and dry crackers a gleam of joy entered his soul at sight of the calendar hanging under the kitchen clock. Halloween was only two weeks off!

As the days passed the joy was deepened by various occurrences. First, in conveying the last bag of chestnuts to the store Jacob Fessler had sprained his ankle and was "laid up a spell." This of course was a just judgment on him for his infamous conduct toward the nut harvesters. Next, old Mrs. Fessler, for reasons unstated, announced sorrowfully that she could make no more soap for Mrs. Remely.

Leander did not share her grief. The news made him jubilant. He had leisure now to plan how to get even with his father and with Jacob Fessler on Halloween. In getting even with the latter he had eleven able allies.

But as the eventful evening drew near discouraging obstacles arose. The twelve proposed only to find that circumstances disposed promptly of the proposals. Sissy suggested that they tie the Fessler cow hoof and horn and convey her to the loft of the barn. Investigation brought to light the fact that the cow, pig and hens had gone into winter quarters in the cellar of the Fessler house and that the outside cellar door, securely barred at night, opened under Jacob's window.

The twelve were dispirited, but hope revived when they bethought them of the horse. He still occupied the barn, but they retired in a thoughtful mood the night before Halloween after the horse had actively demonstrated his ability to protect himself from Halloween jokes. Leander was the one on whom the demonstration made the deepest impression.

The jokers were becoming desperate when Leander, nursing his bruises, had a bright idea. It was not considered so conspicuously brilliant as some of his ideas were because—

"Gee! It's too much work," grumbled Sissy.

"And it's one on the old woman, too," objected Mushy White. Mushy always objected. "We ain't got nothin' laid up agin her!"

"Think of somethin' better yourself, then!" defied Leander proudly, and the opposition was silenced.

"You go to bed betimes tonight," said Leander 1st at the supper table on Halloween. "I'm not going to have my son up to these disgraceful Halloween tricks. See that he is in bed earlier than usual," to Mrs. Remely. "Half past 7 will do."

Leander 2d meekly obeyed, but since the command did not include the hour of his rising he fixed that for himself. At midnight he stole out on the roof of the porch and dropped to the ground with the barn key in his hand.

The eleven were awaiting him.

The elder Remely was a grocer, and at least three times a year Leander wearily plied his ax, during such hours as he could not escape, transforming into kindling wood boxes of all sizes, shapes and thicknesses.

"It's good exercise for the boy," Leander 1st was wont to remark as he piled the boxes neatly in the barn.

The kindling wood victim grinned broadly now in the darkness as he thought of the days of leisure he was securing himself by the transference of those boxes to the swamp farm.

For five hours those twelve boys worked in feverish haste, assisted by old Dobbin, the Remely horse, that had for fifteen years strenuously objected to feverish movements. But at 5 o'clock by the light of a setting moon the conspirators viewed a sight worth looking at. They sat in a row in the shadow of the bushes opposite a wonderful structure their industry had raised on the swamp farm.

"Golly, boys! Ain't it a corker though?" whispered Leander.

Sissy rubbed his lame back and giggled. "They won't know when daylight strikes 'em till about noon, I guess."

"If pa should find out," mused Leander aloud and then paused. He felt some delicacy about mentioning the weeping willow—that being strictly a family matter—and so added lamely: "He'd be some mad over the kindling. Remember, you fellows, it's never tell, crisscross hearts, honest Injun!"

"You bet!" Mushy hastened to assure him earnestly. Mushy's earnestness was based on reasons which arose on the maternal side of his family.

Then the boys stole away, looking back lingeringly at the story and a half house, no spot of which was visible because of the hundreds of boxes which reared themselves to its height, followed the contour of the roof and overtopped the chimney. In front of the windows and doors were barricades of the heaviest boxes. The walks were outlined with boxes, while in front of the barn door was a box tower of Pisa, with a perilous lean toward the garden fence.

Oh, it was a neat job, and Leander swelled with pride as he entered his room by way of the porch roof! But by breakfast time the swelling had partially subsided, for Leander had a bad case of snuffles.

"Did you sleep with your window open?" demanded his mother.

Leander wiggled uneasily. "Guess the wind did blow on me some," he admitted.

The sniffles were forgotten, however, when the elder Leander stamped in from the barn fresh from the discovery of his loss.

"It's a shame, an outrage, a crime! Such thefts ought to be hunted down and the criminals brought to punishment!" Leander 2d's legs gave way at the knee, and he sat down suddenly. "If other parents took the same precautions we do"—

Here he paused as his roving eye lighted on his shaking son. "Were you in bed last night at 7:30?"

"Yes, sir," promptly, in a tone of relief.

"Besides the outrage of the thing," Mr. Remely continued later in calmer mood, "it is considerable loss to Leander here."

Leander ducked his head beneath the table ostensibly to call the cat, in reality to allow the corners of his mouth to turn up unnoticed in an exultant grin as he reflected that his father referred to the loss of exercise with the ax.

"I'd sold the kindling in those boxes to Brown," Mr. Remely continued, "and intended to turn the whole business over to Leander here for Christmas money. 'Twould amount to $4 or $5."

The corners of Leander's mouth took a decided downward curve. Vindictively he kicked the cat under the table, and to Sissy he confided in the middle of the forenoon, "A feller can't seem to have no fun any more anyway." He spoke gloomily from the open window of his room, whither Sissy had called him by a shrill whistle.

His throat was done up in red flannel, and a large mustard plaster was blistering his chest. He was supposed to be in bed.

"Say, that's a fact!" Sissy replied, with unction. A large basket of new bread weighed down each arm. "I've just been over to the swamp peekin', and what'd you think? Jake and the old woman was out splittin' up boxes and actin' tickled to death. Jake he stood the knee of that game leg of his'n on to a box and was choppin' for all he was worth."

Leander groaned, but the full significance of Jacob's chopping did not dawn on him till after dinner. Then the iron entered his soul.

"Land!" exclaimed Mrs. Remely, bustling into the sitting room. "Mrs. Fessler has just been here, and as near as I can make out of her gabble Providence has sent her a lot of wood so she can make soap again. Now, Leander"—briskly—"I'm going to spend the rest of the day dosing you so'st you'll be ready to go out peddling it tomorrow. I'll just mix up another plaster and slap it on between your shoulder blades and break up that cough in no time. I ain't willing that any one in the church shall have more to show for their 10 cents than I!"

His Education.

"Yes, Markley came in for a fortune the other day. He's actually got more money now than he knows what to do with."

"Yes. There are certain people who will be anxious to meet him now, and after that he'll know more."—Philadelphia Press.

PROBLEMS OF SPACE

ENIGMAS THAT SCIENCE IS STRIVING TO SOLVE.

The Question of an Infinity of Worlds and Their Distribution In an Infinity of Space—Distance of the Nearest External Universe.

There can be no subject more calculated to impress a man's mind with his own insignificance compared with the overwhelming power and glory of his Creator than the study and contemplation of the firmament in all its boundless infinity. It is not to be wondered at that from the earliest ages the subject has never failed to exercise a fascination over men and that those who by their genius and learning have most nearly succeeded in solving its mysteries have always been reverenced and esteemed to be among the wisest men of their day. More has been done within the last fifty years than in all the rest of the world's history toward the piercing of the veil which shuts off from our eyes the beauties and mysteries of farof realms, and doubtless by means of the spectroscope and increased size in the lenses of our telescopes we shall be enabled before long to unravel still more secrets of the universe.

The question as to whether space is finite or infinite can never be satisfactorily argued out or indeed even thought of, for the human mind is incapable of grasping the existence of a limit to space, even in its most abstract form, but the question of the infinity of worlds and their distribution in the infinity of space lies more closely within the scope of human intellect, for we have many material facts and calculations to go upon in discovering the probable answer to this most fascinating question.

Only as far back as the seventeenth century astronomers placed the number of stars in the universe as a little over 1,000, but this was absurd, as the real number visible to the naked eye is about 7,000, and perhaps treble that number can be seen by persons with exceptional[illegible] When the heavens [illegible] examined through a telescope the number of visible stars is enormously increased. In fact, it has been calculated that the most powerful reveals as many as 100,000,000! Yet what is that vast number compared with infinity? It cannot even be likened to a grain of sand on the seashore, and yet if we think the matter out carefully we shall see that the number of visible stars cannot really be infinite, for if they were the heavens would be a complete blaze of light. This, of course, we know is far from being the case, and indeed there cannot be any doubt that in certain parts of the heavens at least the number of visible stars is already known, for even with the very strongest telescopes there are blank spaces which are absolutely devoid of stars below a certain magnitude or even the veriest trace of nebulous light.

These spaces are known to astronomers by the name of "coal sacks." They contain no stars fainter than the twelfth magnitude and, in fact, appear to mark those parts of the universe which are comparatively thin. On the other hand, in other parts of the heavens we have not by any means reached the limit of telescopic resolvability. It is curious, though, that these intensely dark "holes" in the bright empyrean are mostly to be found in those parts of the heavens where most stars abound, notably in the Milky Way.

These remarkable blank spots have been a favorite theme of discussion and argument among all astronomers, for, whatever the real shape or distribution of that universe may be, they point to the almost certain inference that in a particular direction at least there is an actual limit to the number of stars, and if there is a limit in one direction we have every right to suppose that such is the case in others, and that we have only to wait for telescopes strong enough to resolve those parts which are still unresolvable to discover that a point can be reached when all the stars of the universe are unfolded to our gaze.

If, now, we admit that the number of visible stars is limited, the next question to be asked is, What is the order or shape of their distribution? Various astronomers have had various theories about this matter. Herschel was inclined to think that the visible universe was in the shape of a disk, though his views in this direction were considerably modified during the later part of his life. Struve considered that the universe was in the shape of a disk of limited thickness, but infinite length, a theory which is hard to support, as, unless the ultimate extinction of light in space is believed in, that part of the heavens which lay toward the plane of the disk would necessarily shine with the brightness of the sun. Proctor, though finding it impossible to define any particular shape for the visible universe, as a whole, was of the opinion that the brightest part of it—namely, the Milky Way—was in the form of a spiral. This latter theory, however, has many objections to contend with. Other astronomers have had different theories on this question, but all, or nearly all, appear to admit an ultimate limit to the size of the visible universe, or, in other words, believe that the galaxy of worlds which surround us form, in fact, but an islet in the vast infinity of space.

It would appear at first sight that any attempt to solve the question of the existence of external galaxies and their distance was absolutely futile, yet such is not the case. The result of calculation is that the nearest external universe is so far distant that light from it traveling at the speed of 186,000 miles a second would take nearly 90,000,000 years to reach us!—Chambers' Journal.

THE CASH BOY TALKS.

His Father's Idea of the Delights of Municipal Ownership.

"Say, boss," remarked our cash boy this morning, "my paw is red hot for minniesickle ownership. I don't know what that is, but paw says everybody is going to own everything and divide up the profits. He was telling ma about it last night.

"Ma asked him where the people would get the money to buy those things, as they would cost millions of dollars.

"Paw said, 'Issue bonds.'

"'Yes,' said ma, 'but how will you pay the bonds when they are due?'

"'Issue more bonds,' said paw.

"'But how about the interest?' said ma. "Won't you have to tax the people for that?'

"'Why, no!' said paw. 'Pay the interest with bonds.'

"'I don't see how you could do that,' said ma.

"'You don't, eh?' replied paw. 'Now, when we went to housekeeping, didn't I pay for all our furniture by giving a note, and when it came due didn't I give the man another note? You women know nothing about finance. You wait until the minniesickle ownership gets in power, we will divide the profits among the people, and no one will have to work. We will all be Vanderbilts. Won't you be proud of your hubby when he becomes part owner of all public utilities? You see, madam, there are some things you don't know.'

"And then paw looked wise. Ma stood and gazed at him for some time and then said:

"'Yes, there are some things I don't know, and one of those things is this: If there is a man more fit for the lunatic asylum than you, I don't know him.'

"Then I commenced to whistle 'Everybody Works but Daddy.' Say, boss, you see that lump on the back of my head? Paw has had that tune poked at him before, and I wasn't looking when his old shoe came flying my way."—Yonkers Statesman.

LONG LIVE THE BOSS!

Municipal Ownership Would Make His Position Impregnable.

Referring to the recent announcement that 51,146 persons are on the payroll of New York city, the Newark Advertiser declares that in the event of municipal ownership of street railways, electric light and gas plants, ferries and other public utilities the city employees would constitute a political army that would make a change of administration impossible.

It recalls the fact that 25,000 city employees in Philadelphia kept Philadelphia in the hands of the corrupt Durham machine for years, and only a great popular uprising overthrew the grafters.

"If Durham had had control of the street railroads and other public utilities in Philadelphia through municipal ownership," it observes, "he could have laughed at popular uprisings. He would have been as absolute in his authority as the czar."

The point is well taken.

In other cities the political situation under public ownership would be as it would in Philadelphia and New York.

Bosses may be overthrown and grafters turned out whenever the public will it at present. Public ownership of all public utilities would end this. It would bind the people hand and foot and deliver them into the hands of political grafters.—Long Branch Record.

HOW CITIES LOSE MONEY.

Municipal Plants Pay No Taxes and Reduce Tax Receipts.

The subject of lost taxes is one that deserves far more attention than it usually receives from advocates of municipal ownership. There is scarcely a municipal plant in this country which mentions this item in its reports, although it is just as much an element in cost of production as coal and wages. The omission is readily overlooked, because it is a negative expense involving no direct payment, but only a loss of income to the city.

If you own a store for which you are receiving a good rental and dispossess your tenant in order to occupy it yourself the rental value of the store becomes a charge against your business, just as it was previously a charge against your tenant's business, and you are out of pocket unless your profits exceed the rent you formerly received. Similarly if a city buys out or otherwise dispossesses a public service corporation the real, personal and franchise taxes formerly paid by the corporation become a charge against the operation of the municipal plant that succeeds the corporation, and the city is out of pocket unless the profits of its plant exceed the taxes lost.

M. O. In Chicago as Dead as Caesar.

One of the most remarkable reversals of public opinion on record is that which has taken place in Chicago in the past year in the matter of municipal ownership and operation. The municipal ownership theory, which a little more than a year ago flourished here with so much vigor as to attract the attention of the entire civilized world, is now the deadest duck in the pond. Apparently nobody believes in it any longer. Certainly nobody ever talks any more about it.—Chicago Journal.

The street department is doing a good piece of work in rebuilding and macadamizing Cross street. The street will be rebuilt to the railroad bridge. Later, in all probility, it will be carried through to Main street. The one bad feature with this street is the low and narrow bridge at the Highland station. If this could be widened it would afford much relief to pedestrians who are now compelled the greater part of the time to walk through the mud of the street. To increase the height under this bridge is a serious problem and one that will have to be met in the near future.

INTERESTING FACTS

Relating to the History of the Boston & Maine R. R.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The excellent and exhaustive paper upon the history, enterprise and success, of the B. & M. R. R., which was written by some one of your honored townsmen, was interesting and valuable. From humble beginnings this powerful network of commercial good and public convenience has become the asseveration of business perspicacity and modern energy. Please allow me a word upon my memory of its early projection and fortune, although it is with great diffidence that I shall differ upon a few points with the able author of the work above referred to.

SOUTH WOBURN GATES, 1850.

Some time in the late 30's or early 40's the B. & M. R. R. began life by constructing a road from South Berwick, Maine, to Andover in Massachusetts, both ends in the air, as the right wing of the Federal army was at Chancellorsville in 1863. The road took the traffic and accommodated the people of Dover and Exeter in N. H., Haverhill and Lawrence later, and smaller towns in our own state. Not many years before this time, the Eastern R. R. was built through Chelsea, Lynn and Salem with a somewhat costly tunnel in the latter city, which was a matter of special interest in those years, though it was only a suggestion of the monumental project of our time of travelling beneath the City of New York and the great waters near it, which floats its commerce and embrace its borders and promote its wouderous prosperities. The Eastern Road through the above places, and Newburyport, the burial place of the great preacher, Whitefield, and the birth place of William L. Garrison, whose limp and helpless body was dragged to jail in Boston in 1835 for the heroic advocacy of civic righteousness and national honor: but whose noble form in imperishable statue now glorifies Boston in its Public Garden, joined Boston and Portsmouth.

Sometime in 1843 a man—a passenger, who had paid his fare, who had done no act of offence or unkindness to the Road, was violently put off a train of the Eastern R. R. for the innocent iniquity of being—black. This road—the Eastern—owned only to Portsmouth, and by contract ran its trains over the "Portsmouth, Saco, and Portland" road, to the latter city. It can readily be supposed, that when the B & M. road brought a new line to compete for business between Boston and the fine Maine City, which Trollope has lofily praised, the Eastern road would object strongly to the management of the modest new enterprise's use of the line of the P. and Saco, and Portland road. There was friction, which was not smoothed out, thirty years later; but the privilege was secured, and the new road enjoyed patronage between Portland and Boston and almost from the first had public favor, if not a large business. The Massachusetts end of the B. & M. R. R. in Andover was about fifteen miles from Boston. They built a spur to the Boston and Lowell R. R. four miles in length, reaching the latter road at its Wilmington Station and for four or five years ran all their trains over this spur or extension and over the Lowell road to Boston. And now, when the B & M management has its ramifications in several states, and we fondly hope—will soon accept the eminent writer, Winston Churchill, as a coadjutor in honorable and popular service in this great agency of public good. I say now when we contrast the limited but plucky activities of this road in its early life, with what it is, we are simply dumb with surprise and admiration.

Why, I remember but one passenger train daily from the East, consisting of a small locomotive, an express and trunk car, and one passenger coach. A tall and majestic man by the name of Hall, was the engineer. The train was so inconsequential that it came pretty near the scornful characterization of the mid-day Woburn train in early times, made by an acquaintance of the writer. This was his sneer—"There goes the old Woburn train, it wouldn't hurt you if it should run over you." Well, do I remember a somewhat serious accident which occurred at South Woburn, now Winchester, about 1844. The confusion was such that special or assistance trains from the direction of Boston, ran either way upon both tracks. Just as the tracks and switches were getting righted, Engineer Hall came down with the Eastern train, to the "South Woburn gates," and of course, stopped to know fully the situation. He had learned the facts and their relation to trains and passengers and was about to start his train. It was twilight the darkness coming on. The noble servant of the people, Engineer Hall, stood in his sheltering cab and with faithful anxiety upon his countenance, closely inquired of the Station agent, pointing down the track he must take, and saying "you are sure there is nothing coming towards me on this track." He pulled the throttle and his little train disappeared in the darkness, for Boston. What has been said of this one train of the B. & M. management at that early time is a fairly correct indication of what the business was. And yet there must have been some promising prosperity, even in this inconvenient and dependent way of reaching the metropolis of our State. For the B & M. Company extended their road from Andover through Reading, Wakefield, Melrose, Malden and Somerville, in 1845 and on the fourth of July of that year ran trains all day, and invited the public to ride free of charge. Augustus Eliott, a venturesome, inquiring sort of young man, availed himself of the opportunity to ride upon the new extension, and saw and learned and enjoyed. His father, an ingenious inventor of machinery, and a strong friend of the defenceless and destitute, owned saw and turning mills, where Church & Lane and Cowdery & Nichols, have so long manufactured excellent goods, and nobly paid their help. Mr. Lane died in 1860, and it was said that every eye in Winchester was wet with sorrow at his loss. And I can not help saying in passing, that the eye of poverty and want must have wept over the loss of a philanthropic woman whom we once well knew, and whose early home was with the family of Mr. Lane—Lynthia Young—afterward Mrs. Peirce.

I will now return to the subject in hand, the B. & M. R. R. and ask leave for a moment again, to say a word of a gruesome fact, which its history suggests. The road-bed of the spur from Andover to Wilmington, remained of course, after its rails were taken up and perhaps its ties. That level line or path served for pedestrians to use and ran at the rear of a lonely and weather-beaten house about two and a half miles above Wilmington Centre. Out on a train from Boston, on a gloomy night in April 1849, a tall, dark-haired man stepped, and threaded his way upon that disused railroad to his own home, the house above mentioned, where his wife and two children dwelt. The unsuspicious and toiling woman prepared him supper, and sometime before midnight he murdered the three and left for Boston. He was soon arrested and arraigned, and in March 1850 was convicted of the dreadful deed at East Cambridge, and excuted there July 26th, same year, thirty-five days before the execution of Prof. John W. Webster in Boston for the murder of Dr. Parkman.

From that patriotic and interesting holiday the Fourth of July, 1845, something in the air, earth and sea, and from Boston to South Berwick, Maine, something or everything has aided the fortune and efficiency of the Boston & Maine R. R. Sometime between 1871 and 1886 this management built an independent extension of the South Berwick end through Old Orchard to Portland. Later the B. & M. took the supervision of the Massachusetts Central, the James M. Stone road, and the property has taken on a stouter life and a more vigorous vitality. Subsequently they came into this vicinity and shrewdly purchased the stock to control the Connecticut River Road, paying it was said, as high as three hundred and fifteen dollars for face value of 100 dollars. The Boston and Lowell slipped into their hands some time since a prosperous property of fifty years standing, which ran their pioneer or introductory trains upon the completion of the road Thanksgiving day Nov. 30th, 1835. And while I could claim no, "Magna pars fui," I was there to help celebrate the wonders of progress in the quivering, rocking and trembling engine and coaches as wide as they were long, with engineer and fireman proudly in the open upon the primitive oscillating steam motor.

For many years a consummate railroad official managed this great system of public and private good the B. & M. R. R. He was a large, burley and brusque man made for business, and not specially for personal choiceness of manners. It was related that the circumambient air would some times become dense about him with language bordering on profanity. On one occasion an official of Winchester not very tall in form, but keen and sensible in mind, called upon the manager of the Boston & Maine in Boston.

He approached the high desk of the railroad official and in a few words spoke of his errand. The man in power did not deign to hear or notice or turn his head from his work. Your townsman retired a little, and soon renewed the effort for attention in the following skillful and plain words. Sir, can you tell me if you have any assistant, clerk, or striker here with sufficient civility to attend with me to a matter of business between the town of Winchester and your road?" The hard commercial face became all smiles, and the rough voice was silvery and sweet with pleasant words. "Oh, yes, Sir, glad to see you—and shall be most happy to examine that matter you speak of, and will come out tomorrow in number 10 train, view the situation, consider the facts and adjust the matter amicably and to the satisfaction of the people of your municipality. Call again. Good morning."

This prince among railroad managers, was a man of great versatility of talent, and carried the interest of his road to very high success. In the rush of business he no doubt fell into the habit of being crisp and a little removed from best forms of manner. And so it has come about that the Eastern railroad, the Lowell, the Central, the Fitchburg, the Connecticut River and I know not what others, have been united in the B. & M. road, which first laid down a little line or strip of road without start or finish in any great centre, and with its mighty reaches, now threads four States, makes money, dominates N. H. it is claimed, and blesses civilization and the world.

CHARLES M. RUST.

Charles Manning Rust, well known to many Winchester citizens, died last Friday. He was 60 years of age.

He was born in Richmond, Va., his parents being Thomas A. and Phoebe (Chamberlain) Rust.

Mr. Rust had been in failing health for some time and the final summons came not unexpectedly to his family. He had lived in this town for the past 38 years, the last 20 of which he had practised as a physician in Boston.

He leaves a wife and three children, Rev. Charles H. Rust of Rochester, N. Y., Mrs. Arthur L. Winn of this town and Mr. Fred B. Rust of Medford.

Funeral services were held from his late home on Elm street on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock conducted by Rev. Henry E. Hodge, pastor of the First Baptist Church, and Rev. Arthur L. Winn. Solos were sung during the service by Miss Nellie Dunklee and Miss Daisie MacLellan. The floral tributes were very beautiful and expressive. The interment was in Wildwood Cemetery.

WILLIAM D. RYERSON.

William DeLas Ryerson died at his home on Westley street, Sunday of pneumonia after a short illness of one week. His life was practically despaired of on Saturday, but everything possible to fight the ravages of the disease was done until he finally succumbed early Sunday morning.

He was 24 years old, and a well known employee in the claim department of the Boston & Main railroad.

He leaves a wife and two small children, and had been a resident of Winchester since April last.

He was born in Manchester, N. H., of Calvin M. and Susie J. Ryerson from which place he was buried on Wednesday afternoon.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING.

Big Attendance—Committee on Grade Crossing Appointed.

The largest attended special town meeting in many a day was held Tuesday evening, the reason for the big attendance being the question of the abolition of the grade crossing, and showed that the citizens are now begining to take interest in this important matter. The only business of importance transacted was that relating to the grade crossing.

Arthur H. Russell, Esq., was unanimously elected moderator, and when he had taken the chair, Charles N. Harris, Esq., offered a motion which was carried, that the rules adopted for the government of the March meeting of 1906, be adopted for the present meeting.

Geo. Adams Woods for the special committee on the election of moderator, reported that he did not think the town was ready to change the present method. The report was received and the committee discharged.

The occasion for the appointment of this committee was the hope that there might be some other way of electing a moderator for the annual meeting than at the time of opening of the polls.

The grade crossing question was then taken up, and Mr. Woods offered a motion that a committee of 15 be appointed by the moderator to investigate all plans that may be proposed for the abolition of the grade crossing, decide which method it prefers and report to the town at an adjournment of the meeting.

Ralph E. Joslin, Esq., Town Counsel, then gave a resume of what had been done since the time when the town voted to ask for the abolition of the crossing. There had been seven sittings of the commission thus far, he said, and the next hearing would be held in January. These hearings are familiar to the readers of the STAR, having been printed from time to time. Unaminity of the citizens on some plan, will soon bring about the abolition of the crossing.

Mr. Lewis Parkhurst thought that a committee of fifteen would be too large and unwieldy and that better and quicker work could be done by a lesser number.

Mr. Woods said that owing to the great importance of the matter, the committee would not be found to be too large to thoroughly consider the various plans and get the views of the citizens. Mr. Woods' motion then prevailed, whereupon the moderator appointed the following committee: Chas. T. Main, Geo. Adams Woods, Marcus B. May, J. L. Ayer, M. W. Jones, Alfred Clarke, Lewis Parkhurst, W. J. Daly, W. F. Prime, S. D. Leland, Jere A. Downs, Warren F. Witherell, Addison R. Pike, Francis J. O'Hara, Freeland E. Hovey.

The Committee was given power to fill vacancies.

The sum of $500 was voted, to be used by the committee in making its investigations.

W. F. Prime, Esq wanted to know if the commission had decided that the abolition of the crossing was a public convenience and necessity. If they had not, then it would be a waste of time and money to investigate plans.

Mr. Joslin said that the Commission would not go on record until it had made its report to the Superior Court. That the need of abolition was one of security and necessity was tacitly admitted. The Commission may or may not accept the plan agreed upon by the town, yet he believed they would.

Mr. H. F. Johnson then moved that the article placed in the warrant at his request, be laid on the table. It was so voted. The article was:

"To see what action the town will take for the safety of the public at the railroad crossing in the centre of the Town, and at the Railroad Station opposite the end of Boulevard or Walnut street pending the abolishment of the grade crossing."

The meeting then adjourned to Dec. 17.

HARVARD CONCERT.

Clubs in Finished Form for a Fine Entertainment.

A concert by the Harvard University Musical Clubs will be given next Tuesday evening, December 4, in the Town Hall at 8 o'clock.

With the coming of the Harvard Clubs at this time, Winchester people are afforded an opportunity to hear them in finished form fresh from the dual concert with Yale. That the clubs are most superior this year, every one who heard the dual concert at New Haven cannot but admit; and at the close of that concert Yale without question admitted the marked superiority of the Harvard Clubs.

After the concert there will be dancing from 10 to 12 o'clock, with music by Kanrich's orchertra. A special car will leave for Arlington at 12.10 o'clock.

ALMOST AN ACCIDENT.

Last Sunday afternoon Mr. George H. Gilbert narrowly escaped being the victim of a runaway accident while riding on the Mystic Valley Parkway because of the reckless driver of an automobile. His coachman had the horses close to the right hand curb, when the driver of the automobile approached swiftly and unheard and passed to the right of the carriage and so close that it frightened the horses, although he had abundance of room in the middle of the driveway. The horses reared and bolted and but for the quick action of Frank, the coachman, would have got beyond control. The person managing the automobile evidently did not care nor consider that occupants of carriages on the public highways have any rights or are entitled to any measure of safety.

CALUMET CLUB BOWLING TOURNAMENT.

The wins are being fairly envenly divided in the tournament thus far, teams 1 and 8 being the only ones to secure much of a lead over the field. A team which will win four points on one evening will drop four on the following week to a team which its first opponents defeated, and thus keep the field pretty well bunched.

Team 4 went into second position with team 12 on Thursday night by defeating team 12 three points. The latter crowd were decidedly off color and should have easily captured the match. E. W. Farmer, with 247, was the highest roller.

On Friday night team 8 made a straight win over team 10, which put it in first place, tied with team 1. The bowling was very good, the victors getting a single string of 471 and a total of 1286.

On the same evening teams 7 and 11 divided the points in their match, each taking two. This match saw some good rolling, each team going over the twelve hundred mark. Wilson was high man with 283, and Hall and Skillings put up singles of 106 and 104 respectively.

Team 1 lost its lead of last week on Monday night by dropping three points to team 6. With the exception of the second string the latter team had everything its own way. It is now up to team 8 to win tonight in order to hold its lead.

Team 9 also made a good win on the same evening, taking four points from team 4 which drops the latter somewhat in the standing. Chase was the honor man in this match. Richardson of team 6 was high man for the night with 101 and 290.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Purrington Observe Fiftieth Anniversary.

An informal and happy celebration of an event which few are so fortunate as to be privileged was held by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Purrington of Cambridge street at the home of their two sons, Walter S. and George W., on last Monday evening. The event was their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Friends and neighbors to the number of 75 were present during the reception, which lasted from 7 to 10, and many were the expressions of good will and hearty congratulations received by the couple.

They were well remembered by many, as the array of presents received from their friends bid fair to be a close rival to those on that event of fifty years previous, which they were recalling with the happiest memories.

Born in Sandwich, N. H., 73 years ago, Joseph Purrington came to this town when but 19 years old, entering the employ of Wyman Locke and engaging in farming. He was married in 1856 to Miss Eliza A. Moody of Madison, N. H., a childhood friend, the ceremony occuring at Albany in that State.

During his entire life, Mr. Purrington has engaged in farming, and he is still active in the firm of J. Purrington & Sons, market gardeners, founded by him. Three sons came to bless the union, Walter S., Charles H. and George S., beside whom he can look down upon nine grandchildren and one great grandchild.

During the festivities on Monday evening an original poem, the subject being Mr. and Mrs. Purrington's life, was read by Mr. H. M. Grover. The poem is printed below.

The house was handsomely decorated for the occasion with palms, ferns and rubber plants, while chrysanthemums, pinks, violets and pansies adorned the rooms in great profusion. Mr. and Mrs. Purrington were assisted in receiving by their two daughter's-in-law, Mrs. Walter S. Purrington and Mrs. George W. Purrington. Guests were present from Winchester, Laconia, N. H., Boston and Somerville.

The poem by Mr. Grover was as follows:

1856—1906

We have gathered here to-night as friends
we congregate;
And in a little Rhyme, a life's story I'll relate.
Joseph Purrington, in 1833.
Born in Sandwich, N. H., and a hardy lad was he;
In Madison, N. H., in 1838, they say,
Eliza A. Moody, first saw the light of day.
Sixty years or more ago, in a little country school;
Joseph and Eliza both learned the Golden Rule.
No doubt in school, when'ere they had a chance
In a bashful, sort of way, at each other,
would cast a loving glance;
This of course, we only surmise; but we know that later on,
Eliza really changed her name to Purrington.
At nineteen years of age, this lad of old
New Hampshire stock
Came to Winchester to work for the late
Wyman Locke.
For four years he labored, was never know to shirk;
For they had no labor unions then, long days they had to work.
He then returned to New Hampshire at the age of twenty three;
There must have been some attraction,
Oh! I think I can see—Born in 1833, plus
23, would make it 1856, I guess,
Why that's the year they were married,
yes, yes.
Soon after Joseph and his Bride
Returned to Winchester, back to the West side.
While living here, were born two sons
Walter, then Charles, were added to the stock of Purrington's.
Then back to old New Hampshire,
Though their stay not very long,
But while they lived in Albany,
George W. was born.
One and a half year's later, as I've heard say,
Back again to the West Side,
They couldn't stay away.
For a number of years, as foreman for Loring Emerson he worked.
And, as I've been told, another place
he never shirked.
In 1878, thats twenty-eight years ago,
They bought the place where they now reside—
Eliza and Joe.
Although it looked like uphill work, it always seemed to him,
With the help of three strong willing boys,
they could not, else but win.
They worked with all their might, in fair or stormy weather;
They prospered, for they alway pulled together.
What! no young children;
Well: I should say—
There's nine Grandchildren, and one
Great Grandchild today.
The children all call her Grammy, for she's always good and kind.
And on every holiday, some extra treat for them she'd find.
Not only children of their own, but others living near,
Are always ever welcome to partake of her good cheer.
Always bright and cheery,
Light hearted and gay,
Always contented in the good old fashioned way,
Never haughty, selfish or grand,
Always ready to lend a helping hand.
Schoolmates, helpmates and lifemates
In family, or business care,
Each working for each other,
Each one did their share,
Though they have lived together, fifty years, they never care to roam.
They always seemed to think, "There's no place like Home Sweet Home."
And should they both look back to fifty
years ago,
I don't think, they'd be sorry, that they wed:
Eliza and Joe.
And now the story's old,
Because it's told, but in the years to come,
May health, comfort and prosperity be enjoyed by Mr. and Mrs. Purrington.

The Captain

By FRANK H. SWEET

Copyright, 1906, by Frank H. Sweet

KATS pond is a long, narrow sheet of water lying between two wooded ridges. Its capabilities as a skating rink are well known, and it only requires two or three cold days, followed by a moonlight night, to draw out all the youths of the neighborhood, and during the summer it has a varied assortment of flat and round bottomed boats, including rafts and an occasional sailboat.

But it wasn't until Colonel Freeman came into the neighborhood with his half dozen boys that such a thing as a boat club was even thought of. There had been scrub races and naval battles and various kinds of pond lily and picnic expeditions, but they were only for a day and had had as many leaders as there were boys.

A boat club was something different, and when it was learned that Colonel Freeman wished them to meet in the schoolhouse to discuss plans for a club and to elect officers every boat owner and prospective boat owner became eager with excitement and impatience. They went to the schoolhouse in a body and promptly seconded every motion that was made.

Officers were elected and arrangements made for an early race, and when the boys went home they were full of eager plans for the summer's work. Owners of scows were already devising plans to exchange their unwieldy craft for anything with a round bottom, and those who did not possess masts and sails were ready to offer any of their worldly possessions for the coveted articles.

Ben Horton was not usually counted as one of the "boys." He lived with a miserly uncle near the upper end of the pond and was always very ragged and shy. The boys jeered at him and excluded him from their games as much as possible, but Ben was good natured and seldom took offense. He would stand by and watch the others with eager interest and was always ready to assist at the slightest invitation.

Much of his time was passed on the water. He had found an old scow somewhere and had patched and calked the seams until they became nearly water tight. With this boat he had explored all the inlets and shallows and had grown familiar with the peculiarities of the winds and currents.

Ben went to the club meeting with as much curiosity as the rest, but with little idea of joining. He stood the scoffing and jostling of his companions with good natured equanimity and was among the first to sign the constitution. The next morning he drew his old scow from the water, preparatory to repatching and recalking.

Originally his boat had been intended for freight and was built of coarse, heavy material. Much patching and calking had not contributed to its lightness, and now the most sanguine would scarcely have regarded it as a proper candidate for racing honors. The only thing to be said in its favor was that it was almost impossible to be capsized. Ben spent a week in overhauling and repairing and finished his work by a liberal application of black paint, inside and out. When he returned the boat to the water the boys promptly named it the Mud Hen.

The first race was to be limited to sailboats, and this would debar the Mud Hen unless Ben should bring out the makeshift sail of old sacking which he sometimes used. As this was very old and ragged and by far the most disreputable sail on the pond, the boys thought he would not be willing to display it on such a public occasion.

But on the morning of the races he was out with the earliest, and the redoubtable Mud Hen bowed awkwardly under the consciousness of a new homemade mast that was several feet longer than the one it replaced. And the much patched and mended sail was carried up to the proud heights of the new mast by an additional width of sacking. When the boys saw the promoted scow plunging about under its grotesque spread of patchwork they set up a derisive shout. Ben grinned appreciatively and waved his old cap in acknowledgment.

Far off in the west a ragged line of black clouds could be seen creeping slowly above the trees, but the boys scarcely noticed. The few who glanced that way looked rather pleased than otherwise. The chance of a wetting does not disconcert a boy, and, besides, the clouds promised the continuance of the stiff breeze.

Colonel Freeman's cottage overlooked the pond, and his boathouse was the wonder and admiration of all the boys. It was large enough to accommodate seven or eight boats, and upstairs a room was being fitted up for the club. Every boy who had become a member was already beginning to feel a sort of proprietorship in the new building.

Three of the Freeman boys owned boats of their own, and the other three were looking forward to the time when they would be old enough to join the club. Freddie, the youngest, was only nine, but he was already as ardent a boatman as any of them.

The race was to be round an island two miles up the pond and back to the boathouse. Mr. Freeman and two men from the village were to act as judges.

As the boats began to form in line Mr. Freeman motioned to Ben, who happened to be near.

"Will you let Freddie go with you?" he asked. "He wants to be in the race, and I don't like to have him go in any of the lighter boats. The weather threatens to be very squally. The older boys are strong swimmers and can take care of themselves, but Freddie is too young to risk being capsized."

"Of course! I'll be glad to have him!" cried Ben delightedly. He had never been spoken to by Mr. Freeman before, and he wondered why that keen eyed gentleman had singled him out from the rest of the boys. With a dexterous motion he swung his boat alongside the landing so that the little fellow could spring on board and then circled back to rejoin the line.

"It will hardly be necessary for me to caution you about being careful," said Mr. Freeman pleasantly as the boat glided by. "I have been watching you for several weeks and am very glad that you belong to the club."

At this point the pond was nearly half a mile wide, and there was ample room for the boats to maneuver and come into the wind. But it was difficult to form a true line, and they were obliged to circle around again and again before the signal was given.

As they scudded up the pond before the wind the lighter boats rapidly left their clumsy companion behind, and when the leading ones rounded a point three-fourths of a mile away the Mud Hen had scarcely covered two-thirds of the distance.

But all this time the black clouds were creeping up the sky, and every moment the wind was growing more fitful and uncertain. One boat would have its sails flapping idly in the wind, and another, a few rods away, would be straining under a fierce blast which swept around a point or from behind an island. As the wind increased in violence many of the boats began to lower sail little by little, and long before they had rounded the island some of them were carrying less than half the canvas they had started with.

The Mud Hen was behaving splendidly now and was leaving a long wake of churning foam. Ben had not lowered sail, and he had no intention of doing so, at least for the present.

HE SWUNG HIS BOAT ALONGSIDE THE LANDING.

There was little danger of the broad, heavy boat being capsized, and he did not fear for the mast.

"I've kept up sail in worse gales than this," he told Freddie quietly, "an' nothing didn't give way either. I don't believe this old boat could be tipped over. However, if you feel any way dou'tful I'm willin' to lower or to put back to the boathouse."

"Put back!" cried Freddie indignantly. "I wouldn't think of such a thing! If I was running this boat I wouldn't take down a stitch of canvas, not if I was being blown clean out of water. No, sir!"

"Good for you, Freddie! That's the way to talk! We'll beat some of 'em yet!" Ben's face was in a glow of excitement as he looked down at his small companion. "See the Corsair on ahead there," he continued enthusiastically. "We've gained twenty feet in the last five minutes."

"I know it," replied Freddie complacently. "I've been watching. They hooted us back yonder. Now I'm going to wave my hat and cheer when we go by. Last's the best every time."

Foot by foot they covered the space between the two boats, and presently the Corsair was left behind. Ben looked complacently conscious, and Freddie waved his hat enthusiastically as they went past.

But there seemed little probability that they would overtake any of the others. Long before they reached the turning point they met them coming back in a long, wavering line under half or three-quarter sail and skimming over the water like so many big birds. Ben glanced critically from one to the other and shook his head.

"They've got too much sail up now," he said anxiously. "Them sort o' boats can't carry like ours can. First they know somebody'll be spilled."

His words came true sooner than he had expected. One of the boats caught the wind on a new tack before her commander was prepared, and the sudden filling of the sails caused the frail shell to be almost lifted from the water. In a moment her two occupants were struggling in the pond.

Fortunately they were good swimmers, and they promptly set to work to disentangle the rigging and get the boat ashore. But they were out of the race.

The accident was witnessed from all the boats and caused a sudden ripple of caution. Sails were hastily reduced and reckless commanders went to the other extreme and became overcareful.

All but the captain of the Mud Hen. He knew his boat and, with an approving glance toward the rudely constructed rigging, settled himself firmly beside the tiller to make a short turn around the island.

There was not[illegible] careful about the movements of his boat. It pounced and bobbed and sometimes met the waves head down, but it covered the distance rapidly, and that was what Ben wanted. When he rounded the island the nearest boat was less than an eighth of a mile away.

The Mud Hen did not cleave the water as a pointed boat would have done. It dashed forward recklessly and buried its prow under a comb of falling spray. Freddie clapped his hands and shouted gleefully, and Ben himself was scarcely less excited.

Gradually they gained on the nearest boat and passed it and then rapidly overhauled the next and the next. When they came in sight of the boathouse, half a mile away, there were but three boats in front of them.

Ben's lips were tightly closed now, and he made each tack count for as much as possible. When he changed his course he brought the boat instantly into the wind and never lost a second by useless flapping of the sail. Presently another boat was passed and then another. Freddie was jubilant and looked at Ben with shining eyes.

But the captain of the Mud Hen had a queer smile on his face. As the two boats shot forward, prow and prow, he leaned suddenly against the tiller, and his boat swerved almost imperceptibly to one side. The next instant the other boat crossed the line scarcely a yard in advance.

Freddie uttered a cry of dismay and sank dejectedly on his seat. Ben nodded brightly to the captain of the victorious boat and then turned the Mud Hen toward shore.

As he glided up to the boat landing Mr. Freeman stepped down and grasped his hand.

"You made a splendid dash that last half mile," he cried cordially. "I had no idea your boat was such a racer. By the way, that boy who won is a friend of yours, isn't he?"

"Yes, sir."

"Glad he got the race, I suppose?"

"Yes, indeed!" eagerly. "His father promised him a new boat if"— Ben stopped suddenly as he saw the quizzical smile on Mr. Freeman's face.

"I see. That is why you gave him the race then?"

Ben flushed and looked embarrassed.

"I—I"—

"Oh, it's all right. Make your racer fast and come into the boathouse. We are going to finish the day with a good dinner and some speeches. And this evening all of you are to come up to my house. Merry! It's beginning to rain."

COUNTRY WEEKLY.

You will notice that I address you as fellow members of the press, because at an early age I got my fingers in printer's ink, and since that time I have never been able to wash away the stain. Somehow or other when you once climb on to the high stool before a type case and learn to click those little pieces of metal into your stick the way they should go you never are the same again. It is a baptism which makes us all different, and I believe it makes us all better. I am a firm believer in the theory that no man is fit for the newspaper business in any capacity until he has run a weekly paper in a country town. It is the hardest thing that a human being ever undertook to do successfully. It demands a capacity for hard work, compared with which the twelve labors of Hercules was a job that could be finished before breakfast. Whatever success I am able to make while going through this vale of tears I will be ready to attribute to the muscular development and the ability to take hard knocks without a groan that I secured when I was the editor of the little country weekly.—[J. It is good advice which the Massachusetts railroad commission gives the electric railway managers in this state that they take no chances with the running of their cars, but that they see that no departure is made from regular schedules without first making sure all possibility of confusion and accident is avoided. Most of the accidents are like that which prompted this warning, in that movements are made when the employes of the company are not absolutely sure of their safety. Passengers are sometimes, we are afraid, morally responsible for the risks that are taken, by their exhibitions of impatience when they are forced to wait on a tournout a few moments beyond what they conceive to be a reasonable time. Employees are not always as thoroughly impressed as they should be with the necessity for being certain of the safety of their movements, and perhaps they sometime feel as if the management placed more emphasis on getting there than on getting there safely. But whatever the temptations and excuses for taking chances, they all ought to be resisted; so that the commissioners' warning is timely and useful.

"I am convinced," says Dick Croker "that if the anti-cartoon bill had been passed President McKinley would now be alive." Nonsense! Cartoons don't kill. They amuse. Most of their subjects make collections of them for their entertainment and artistic edification.—[Boston Herald.] Nevertheless what Mr. Croker says is the truth. And, furthermore, President McKinley is not the only man that has been brutally murdered through the publishing of cartoons.

Luminous Centipeds.

Lizard, snake and natural electric light plant all rolled into one—this is the luminous centiped, one of the most interesting creatures in nature. It is about one and a quarter inches long and covered with short hairs. Its body is very narrow and appears to be in sections. In consequence of this peculiar formation the creature appears to move sidewise except when frightened. Then the natural electric light plant feature appears, and, with an almost instantaneous wavelike motion, beginning at the tail, the color of the reptile changes from orange to a greenish phosphorescent shade. Then, sparkling with a tiny streak of green light, the creature darts away to a place of refuge. When one of the pair is in search of its mate, the color grows a bright yellow, but at will the centiped can resume its darker color, and then, if lying close to the grain of a piece of wood, is hardly noticeable.

Real Evidence.

"My only objection to the young man," said the father, speaking of the youth who proposed to his daughter, "is that he doesn't seem to have the least bit of sense or foresight."

"But," answered the mother, "he has as much sense as you had when you asked for my hand."

"Confound it! That's just why I object to him."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

WINGLESS BIRDS.

Some Animal Oddities That Are Found In New Zealand.

An official of the Smithsonian institution was recently speaking of some of the wingless birds of New Zealand. "Those wingless birds have always been of especial interest to me," he said. "Nowhere else than in their native land could they have survived, for that is the only land in which no destructive animals are to be found. Being unable to fly, they could not have escaped from swift hunting animals, if any there had been. And in this connection it is interesting to note that in all probability the kakapo, or great ground parrot, once had the use of its wings, but, being a grass seed feeder and finding no enemies on the ground, it in a process of evolution lost its ability to fly, though able to run very swiftly. These birds are so gentle and so unconscious of having any enemies that if a person sit down near one it will presently tuck its head under its wing and go to sleep. They only breed once in two years, and the mother bird carefully hides the nest from her mate, though why is not known.

"The weka, or wood hen, is another specially interesting species of the wingless birds. These birds mate for life and take turn about in hatching and watching the brood. One of the pair is never absent from the nest, the one on duty being supplied with food by the other. There is something almost human in the sight of a male weka leading his family out for a stroll on the beach when the tide is low.

"Another is the roa, which is distinguished by a remarkable beak, long, slender and slightly curved. The roa, like the kakapo, is a night bird, and its chief food is earthworms. Its sight is very poor, and it may often be seen standing in the moonlight with the tip of its beak resting upon the ground, apparently listening or feeling for the vibrations of a worm's movements. The male of the roa does all the hatching, and the young birds come from the shell with all their feathers, miniatures of their parents and with apparently all their intelligence, as they at once start out to search for food and seem to require no instruction as to the best places to find it."—New York Herald.

RECORDS.

In the number of his titles the Duke of Atholl, with twenty-three, holds the record.

The record bean for costliness is the vanilla, which sells at $12 a pound retail.

The record for ham sandwich making is a thousand sandwiches in 11 hours 25 minutes.

The record lodging house is one for pilgrims at Mecca, which accommodates 6,000 persons.

The record steam heating apparatus cost $180,000. It is that which heats the 11,000 rooms of the Vatican.

The record soprano voice was Lucrezia Agujardi's. This lady, who died in 1783, could easily strike C in altissimo.

The record for millionaire honesty was held by the late Charles T. Yerkes, who, on recovering his fortune after his failure, repaid the claims of all his old creditors with 6 per cent compound interest.

Mr. Howells and the Poet.

A person called upon a certain editor of the Atlantic Monthly of the name of William Dean Howells and, producing a poem and courteous note of declination, indignantly demanded an explanation.

"Do you mean to intimate that this is not a good poem?" he challenged.

"By no means," hastily remonstrated Mr. Howells; "I think it is very good indeed."

"Then why"—in a somewhat mollified tone—"do you decline it? I consider it the best I have ever written."

"Ah, well," said Mr. Howells, "after all, we have very few differences of opinion. Do you know," he added in his gentlest voice, "I have long regarded it as the best that Tennyson has ever written." — George Harvey in North American Review.

Anchoring a Lightship.

A very effective method is employed to keep a lightship always in practically the same position. The ship is moored by three anchors which rest in the sea bed in the form of a triangle. When the tide alters its direction the vessel, of course, swings with it, but only to a limited extent. The ship cannot change right over, as it would if only one anchor were used, for the three anchors each fix it in a different position and do not allow it to move more than a few yards.

AN HONEST GRAFTER

A Glimpse Into the Future of Municipal Ownership.

A Thumb Nail Sketch of a "Practical Politician"—The Profits of an All Around "Servant of the People, Who Seen His Opportunities and Took 'Em."

"Honest graft" will reach its highest level when, as predicted by the enthusiasts, the principles of municipal ownership are accepted by New York and the city controls the trolley lines, the electric light and gas works and all the ferries as well as the water works and the police, the fire and the street departments.

Then such patriots as George Washington Plunkitt, for many years organization leader of the Fifteenth district in New York, will reap rewards of greater magnitude than they have ever been able to gather under the present order of things.

Perhaps you have never heard about Mr. Plunkitt's "honest graft" schemes. He told about them himself in a book published last year, which was introduced by a paragraph indorsing him as a "veteran leader of the organization," signed by its greatest chief.

Plunkitt was sore because there were some objections to graft being made out of the city by men like him, and in the first chapter of his book he uttered a vigorous protest. "Blackmailin' gamblers, saloon keepers, disorderly people, etc.," he admitted to be wrong. That was "dishonest graft."

"But," he added, "there's an honest graft, and I'm an example of how it works. I seen my opportunities and I took 'em."

Mr. Plunkitt's explanation of how he did these things will illuminate the possibilities of future municipal ownership days, if they ever come.

After elucidating the ways he was "tipped off" at various times by members of his party—the party in power—when new bridges, new parks, new streets were to be opened, so that he might invest in real estate likely to rise in price from the improvements contemplated, he adds, "I haven't confined myself to land. Anything that pays is in my line." Then he gives a specific instance:

Learning that the city was about to repave a certain street and so would have several hundred thousand old paving blocks to sell, he was "on hand to buy," and he "knew just what they were worth." But a newspaper "tried to do him" and got some outside men from Brooklyn and New Jersey to bid against him. Mr. Plunkitt's own words tell the story best:

"Was I done? Not much. I went to each of the men and said, 'How many of those 250,000 stones do you want?' One said 20,000, and another wanted 15,000, and another wanted 10,000. I said, 'All right; let me bid for the lot, and I'll give each of you all you want for nothin'.'

"They agreed, of course. Then the auctioneer yelled, 'How much am I bid for these fine pavin' stones?'

"'Two dollars and fifty cents,' says I.

"'Two dollars and fifty cents!' screamed the auctioneer. 'Oh, that's a joke. Give me a real bid.'

"He found the bid was real enough. My rivals stood silent. I got the lot for $2.50 and gave them their share. That's how the attempt to do Plunkitt ended, and that's how all such attempts end."

It is hardly necessary, in the light of this authentic statement of "honest graft's" workings, to enlarge upon the extended opportunities that would come to the men of the Plunkitt stamp were the dream of municipal ownership to come true. Plunkitt says "most politicians who are accused of robbin' the city get rich the same way" he did.

"They didn't steal a dollar from the city. They just seen their opportunities and took them."

While in the legislature Plunkitt introduced the bills that provided for the outlying parks of New York, the Harlem river speedway, the Washington bridge, the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street viaduct, additions to the Museum of Natural History and many other important public improvements. He is now a millionaire. Under the proposed order of things, with city control of everything, he might become a billionaire.

Under municipal ownership of all public utilities in New York—and in most other cities in fact—politicians like Plunkitt, who at different times has been elected state senator, assemblyman, county supervisor and alderman by his fellow citizens, besides serving as police magistrate for one term, and who boasts of his record in filling four public offices in one year and drawing salaries from three of them at the same time, would flourish like a whole grove of green bay trees.

Go Slow on City Ownership.

Until politics in America is purified far beyond its present condition any large experiment in government ownership may be called a "thief breeder" with much safety. The more authority there is vested in the hands of politicians (with all due deference to our national administration) the more corruption there will be. It is a short-sighted citizen who would take more business out of private hands and commit it to the tender mercies of the politicians.—Troy Press.

Another Plant Abandoned.

After many years' trial of its municipal electric lighting plant Alexandria, Va., has finally leased the works to a private corporation for a period of thirty years. The lessee paid $3,500 for the plant, which had cost the city $17,000.

THE "HOLY HOUSE."

Legend of the Home of Mary and the Saviour.

Let me give the main outlines of the legend. At Nazareth was preserved with pious care the house of Our Lady. The dwelling place in which she received the gracious message of the incarnation, the lowly home which sheltered the holy family for so many years, was a very precious sanctuary. On May 10, 1291, a month after the taking of Tripoli and Ptolemais, this holy house was carried by the hands of angels from Nazareth to a place in Dalmatia between Fiume and Tersatz on the Adriatic shore.

It was a one roomed edifice, built of red square stones, fastened with cement, and bore proof of age and oriental design. It stood without any foundations and had a wooden decorated ceiling. The walls were covered with frescoes; there were a door and a narrow window; inside were an altar of stone, an ancient crucifix, a small cupboard, containing a few vessels of common use; a chimney and hearth, above which was a cedar statue of Our Lady with the Holy Child in her arms. The pastor of the place learned in a vision that the building was the house of Our Lady, the stone altar that at which St. Peter celebrated mass and the statue the work of St. Luke the Evangelist. In proof of the vision he was cured of a serious illness. A deputation of four responsible persons forthwith were sent to Nazareth to investigate the mystery, and they found that the house was no longer to be found.

Measurement and other means taken proved that the house that had suddenly appeared in Dalmatia was indeed none other than that which had as suddenly left Palestine. Three years after, on Dec. 10, 1294, the holy house again disappeard and under the pontificate of Celestine V. came to Recanati, a little town in the march of Ancona, when it fixed itself in a laurel grove belonging to a pious lady called Loreto. It was discovered by some shepherds and soon became recognized and was henceforth a much frequented place of pilgrimage. Eight months afterward the house removed to a small hill, three miles from Recanati, to land belonging to two brothers, who, however, fell out shortly afterward over the division of wealth which began to flow to the new shrine.

To save strife between the brothers the house was suddenly lifted once more and this time settled down finally in the midst of the public way, which had to be diverted in consequence. Here, too, in the course of time a chapel was built, which gave way in time to the present basilica. The famous pilgrimage of Loreto goes on today. Popes, kings and princes have visited this shrine and left great gifts. Later on a festival with liturgical rites was instituted, and in time the feast of the translation of the holy house was extended to many countries. —Fortnightly Review.

Letters and Pounds.

I believe the stolidity of the English character and its implicit acceptance of authority are due in a large measure to the fact that long before it leaves the spelling class it is ready to believe anything. And this unquestioning attitude of mind is only reinforced the more hopeless when it comes to learn that in one case twelve ounces make a pound, in another case it requires sixteen. Indeed, if we had set ourselves deliberately to stamp out rational instincts and the habit of logical and thoughtful inquiry in the child mind, we probably could not have devised two more fiendish instruments than our scheme of spelling on the one hand and of weights and measures on the other.—London Mail.

POWER OF PERFUMES.

The Way Various Scents Act on the Nerves and Brain.

Nearly all perfumes have antiseptic qualities and are valuable in keeping away infection.

The perfumes which are the most agreeable to the sense are not always the most helpful to the nerves. Ambergris, for instance, is positively offensive to many, yet it is said to possess a wonderful power of clearing the brain and driving away the blues. On the other hand, attar of roses, with the suggestion of glowing suns and gorgeous eastern colors, predisposes to tears.

A faint odor of musk acts as a tonic, for which the best antidote is the odor of sandalwood. The fragrance of citron is as soothing to nervous folk as the sound of faroff music.

The scent of orange flowers is so depressing to the action of the heart that it is not safe for any one with disease of that organ to inhale it for any length of time. Reviving perfumes come from herbaceous plants largely, from the odors of mignonette, rosemary and lavender, and soothe the nerves.

The perfumes of lilies, jasmine and acacia are pleasant and soothing to a healthy sense, though delicate nerves cannot enjoy them even in their garden freshness. Brought closer in clusters of blossom, their odor is narcotic and depressing, so that persons grow faint at the smell of them and may be put into heavy slumber, as if drugged by their odor.—London Express.

The Word "Canteen."

A strange etymological history is that possessed by the word "canteen"—which has caused so much talk in temperance and army circles—if its origin is correctly assigned to the old Latin "quintana," which literally means "of the fifth rank" or "fifth in order." The "quintana (viar)" was a street in the Roman camp so called because it came between the fifth maniple, or company, and the sixth. Here all the business and marketing of the camp were done, and "quintana" eventually came to mean a market.—Chicago News.

In prosperity the proud man knows nobody; in adversity nobody knows him.—Duquoin Call.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

The following program was given in the regular work of the Fortnightly by Mrs. S. Emma Cole, with the assistance of Mrs. Robt. C. Whitten, and Miss Adah Mae Curry to illustrate the work with violin and piano:

Grieg Sonata in F Allegro con brio
Allegretto
Folk-songs { Butterfly / Bird
English
Scotch
Irish
French
Russian
Hubay Hullamzo Balaton
Fletcher-Farwell Indian Songs
Negro Melodies
D. Vorjak Humoureske

This is the last in a series of three Lecture-Recitals which Mrs. Cole has given in the club work, and the popular opinion seemed to be that "Each one was better than the last."

The first recital treated of the earliest conditions in music, and included the work of Bach, Handel and Gluck.

The second one of the School of Romanticism in music, including the work of Beethoven, Mozart, Schumann; and the last of the series was upon modern writers, and the use made in their work of the folk-songs of all nations, a subject very much to the fore in musical composition of today.

Grieg, the Norwegian composer was spoken of as the one who had made the most beautiful use of these melodies, and in the Sonata for violin-piano they were easily to be traced.

The brilliant, gem-like quality of "The Butterfly" and "The Bird" were vividly portrayed by Mrs. Whitten's beautiful interpretation, and the club feels very grateful to Mrs. Cole for the introduction to the work of so intelligent and able a musician.

The opinion that we have no American folk song was disputed by some very interesting Indian songs of ceremony collected on phonograph cylinders by Miss Fletcher who holds the Thaw fellowship at Harvard College for the preservation of Indian folk-lore and folk-song and harmonized by Mr. Arthur Farwell.

Mrs. Cole's description of these songs, and Mrs. Whitten's interpretation of the music made them very realistic, particularly the war dance before the tent of the chief.

The point was also emphasized by some quaint negro melodies of the slavery days sung by Mrs. Cole and made very real by a banjo accompaniment, also by Miss Currie's playing of "My Old Kentucky Home" by Steven Foster, thought by some to be the originator of folk-song in America.

Miss Currie is a young girl from Florida. Her work shows decided southern temperament and marked ability. She has played in public since she was ten years of age, and is now studying with one of Boston's first violin teachers with the expectation of making the concert stage her profession.

Mention was made of D. Vorjik as the first director of the National Conservatory in New York City, and his opinion given that in the negro melodies could be found a theme for every phase of life.

In illustration of this he wrote the "Humoureske" upon two negro melodies which you can plainly follow.

This was one of the most charming programs the club has ever listened to from an educational point of view, and also from the musical point, it was full of interest and bubbling over with life.

EPIPHANY CLUB.

The first meeting this year of the Epiphany Club, the men of the parish of the Epiphany, will be held at Lyceum Hall on Thursday evening, Dec. 20. The two speakers will be Edwin D. Mead whose theme will be "America's position in the World" and Rev. Peter J. McCormack of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, West End, Boston, who will describe the workings of this famous church with which Archbishop O'Connell was once connected.

When Water is Scarce at the Well.

Many a competitive company naturally dodges the question of financial backing, but when the subject is unavoidably brought up and retreat blocked, they say in an off-hand, "nothing of any account, you know" way, that Accident insurance is only a year's contract anyway, and consequently the assets behind their promises are more than adequate to cover the needs of the case.

This argument satisfies a good many men. They say to themselves the company in point makes a very plain annual statement and if I am killed this year I will certainly get my money. One policy and the security is about as good as another. An argument undoubtedly used by some people in San Francisco who now are sorry that they were mistaken. Why The Travelers? Because the financial well from which we draw our claim money is fifty years deep; nearly forty-nine million dollars full.

Because the nearer the bucket has to be sent to the bottom to get water the stronger is the inclination on the part of the man at the crank to draw up the bucket half full. Insure in The Travelers.

BESSIE H. BROWN.

Miss Bessie Hayner Brown, daughter of police officer Munroe Brown, died at the home of her sister in Milton on Saturday last of pneumonia. She had not been in good health for some time. Her age was 38 years.

The announcement of the death of Miss Bessie Brown will come with keenest sorrow to many children and parents in Winchester. Two years ago Miss Brown was compelled by failing health to give up her work. For fifteen years she had been a faithful and efficient teacher in our schools, in various buildings and in different grades, and was Principal of the Washington school during the last years of her service. The hundreds of children who came under her kindly influence and helpful instruction will long cherish her memory as that of one who was not only always deeply solicitous of their progress in scholarship, but also no less mindful of their development as high minded boys and girls. Her heart and strength were entirely and unselfishly devoted to her high calling as a teacher, to which she gave unsparingly of time and labor and anxious thought.

Funeral services were held from her sister's home on Monday, conducted by Rev. William I. Lawrance of this town. The remains were cremated and her ashes interred in Wildwood cemetery.

RESIGNS FROM COMMITTEE.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Mr. Addison R. Pike, who was appointed by me at the Town Meeting of November 27, 1906, as one of the committee to consider plans with reference to abolition of the grade crossing, immediately after the adjournment informed me that as he had identified himself to some extent with one of the plans proposed, and he felt that he should not serve upon the committee. In making the appointment, the fact that Mr. Pike had taken any part in the proceedings before the Commission was unknown to me, and in view of my intention, as expressed at the meeting, that the committee should be absolutely impartial (except that the Board of Selectmen be officially represented) I approve Mr. Pike's decision not to serve. He informs me that his resignation has been sent to the committee. Under the power given the committee by the vote of the meeting, it can fill the vacancy. ARTHUR H RUSSELL.

BOWLERS WON TURKEYS.

The alleys of the Calumet Club were well filled with bowlers on last Saturday evening for the regular Thanksgiving turkey roll. The roll this year was held on one night only, it having been the previous custom to give more time to the contest. Two strings with handicap were allowed each bowler.

The first honors went to T. Price Wilson, with a total of 226 for the two strings. There being some 45 entries in the contest, enough entrance money was paid to provide for four turkeys, and George W. Purrington with 216, E. R Rooney with 214, and Mr. James E. Corey with 210, each captured a bird.

Some of the other scores rolled were: Dr. Orion Kelley 208, Fred Redtenbacher 204, G. A. Barron 199, F. S. Richardson 197, J. E. Gendron 196, H. T. Dickson 196, E. P. Randlett 193, P. T. Bufford 191.

THE SOCIAL EDUCATION CONGRESS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Will you permit me to call the attention of your readers to some notable meetings to be held in Boston on this Friday, Saturday and Sunday? These meetings are held on the initiative of the Social Education Club of Boston, with the cooperation of more than twenty organizations, all having educational purposes.

On Friday morning, from 9.30 to 12 o'clock, meetings will be held simultaneously in Lorimer Hall, in Chipman Hall, in Huntington Hall and in Boston University, all dealing with problems of education. On Friday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, there will be a Mass meeting, at Tremont Temple, addressed by the Governor, the Mayor of Boston and the presidents of Harvard College and Leland Stanford University. In the evening, another Mass meeting will be held in the same place, addressed by other eminent speakers.

On Saturday morning, at the same places and hours as on Friday, sectional meetings will be held, dealing with industrial, moral and social education. At 2 o'clock in Tremont Temple, Miss Jane Addams, Dr. Washington Gladden and others will make addresses. At 7.45 in the evening the subject of Industrial Education will be taken up by Dr. E. Benjamin Andrews and others expert in this field.

A final Mass meeting will be held in the Colonial Theatre, Sunday evening, Dec. 2, at 7.45 p. m., to be addressed by Pres. G. Stanley Hall, Archbishop William H. O'Connell, and others.

All these meetings are free to the public. Those who can attend will enjoy a rare privilege.

WILLIAM I. LAWRANCE.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The town of Milford was forced to abate a drain nuisance through a bill introduced into the legislature, and it looks much as if the city of Woburn or rather its Board of Health would have to be forced in the same way regarding Russell Brook, although one would suppose it would not care for such notoriety and would attend to its duties, particularly a board that is composed of three physicians. The Board of Health of Winchester does not seem to have the authority to do anything in the matter.

The town meeting Tuesday night did what it was supposed it would about the grade crossing abolition, and undoubtedly it was the best action to take, although a smaller committee would have done better. It the committee gives a public hearing, it will possibly help matters along and also eliminate some of the talking that otherwise will be had at the adjourned meeting, Dec. 17.

It would seem as if our water business should be kept under the designation of Municipal Water Plant and then kept in such a way as to show just what it costs annually and what it brings in, the same as a private plant would be. This business has never been kept so as to show what it does.

Of all the fool measures our legislature has ever passed the one to build a canal from Quincy to Taunton river through Brockton is about the worst, and if the Democratic party had had any gumption it would have attacked it in the recent campaign. It is almost inconceivable that such an utterly rediculous and vicious project could have been passed and receive the sanction of the governor. No wild cat Texas oil or mining scheme could be worse and nothing possible can come out of it, excepting graft from the money of the few suckers who may be induced by lurid advertising to blow in their dollars.

How much longer are people in no license towns, at least, to put up with flaring liquor ads on gigantic sign boards? Here is an objectionable ad that can be legislated against, even if we cannot prevent these monstrosity signs for other things. Why should not the character of ads in the street cars also be restricted? Here is matter for the Improvment Society to take up, if it does not die a borning.

ELECTRICITY.

An important advantage gained by users of the electric light is the ability to use the electric heating pad and other convenient practical household electrical appliances. The electric heating pad is never too hot, never too cold while in use, and there's nothing about it to leak.

Have you learned to be light-wise?

Why not let our Sales Agent, tell you about this convenience. He will if you will write him, or call, or telephone "Oxford 1150, Collect?"

"UP THE NILE TO WADY-HALFA."

On Tuesday evening a large and select audience assembled at "Terrace of Oaks," the beautiful home of Mrs. Edwin Ginn, to hear Miss Dorothy Temple Brown tell of her experiences "Up the Nile to Wady-Halfa." An invitation from such a hostess, on such a subject was sure to bring together a thoroughly intellectual and critical gathering, and this occasion was no exception. Before and after the lecture Mrs. Lilian Hayman of Brookline sang a group of Egyptian and Oriental songs that added much to the entertainment.

It was evident from their undivided attention, that Miss Brown was fully "en rapport" with her audience as she told with much spirit and charm of cosmopolitan Cairo, the pyramids, the sphinx, of Abu-Simbel, the great temple of Rameses II, etc., and of many personal incidents not usually enjoyed by the average traveller.

From comments heard after the lecture it was clear that the audience felt they had passed a most entertaining hour among the mysteries of that land of great antiquity; and as one of our town notables remarked, "Miss Brown must have been well grounded in her subject before going to Egypt, to have used her perceptions to such good advantage.

O'CONNOR—SULLIVAN.

John F. O'Connor and Miss Katherine A. Sullivan, daughter of Mrs. Hannah Sullivan of Kendall street, were married Wednesday evening by the Rev. Daniel J Keleher, Ph. D., pastor of St. Mary's Church. The bride wore chiffon taffeta and carried a bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by her niece, Miss Mary I. Hurley. Edward M. O'Connor, a brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: John J. Christie of Bristol, R. I.; Dr. James H. O'Connor, Daniel E Hurley, Jerome Sullivan Joseph McCarthy, of Winchester and Thomas J. Feeney, Jr., of Woburn.

A reception at the home of the bride's mother followed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor will reside at 185 Washington street.

LALIBERTE—LARRIVEE.

On Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock Miss Marie Aline Catherine Larivee, daughter of Mrs. Philomene Larrivee of Thompson street, was married at St. Mary's Church, by Fr. Kelleher to Mr. Telesphore Laliberte of Montreal, Can. Miss Bernaclette Tengay of Montreal was maid of honor, and Mr. Arthur Bourget of Cambridge was the best man. The bride was dressed in white china silk, trimmed with princess lace, and carried brides roses. The maid of honor wore pink chiffon and carried pink carnations. Miss Mary Holland was the organist.

A small reception followed at the home of the bride's mother, the home being tastily decorated for the occasion with laurel, holly and cut flowers. The ushers were: Messrs. Frank Larrivee and William Larrivee both of this town. During the reception music on violin and piano was given by Miss Fabeola Gendron and Mr. Joseph Gendron

Many handsome presents were received by the couple, the bride especially, having many friends here. They will make their home in Montreal, where the groom is engaged in a shoe manufactury.

TOWN BUSINESS MEN DON'T COUNT.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Why were the merchants and Winchester business men frozen out on the grade crossing committee? Are they not supposed to know what they want, or are they uninterested and unaffected in the change? It seems to me that the men doing business in the centre should receive more attention than those with their work in Boston, eight miles away.

But if the home merchants are not considered, I suppose it is all right; they will get what is best, whether they want it, or know it or not.

The thanks of the suburban communities are due Judge Bruce for the effective lesson he administered a few days ago to the kind of hoodlums who make life miserable for decent people on the late night cars. A trio who were filled with campaign enthusiasm and conversation water created a disturbance on a Boston & Northern car with an increased flow of vile language and general rowdyism. Their actions brought them into court where they were fined $20 each as a discouragement to hoodlumism. The Boston & Northern has taken special methods of suppressing rowdyism on its cars by having police officers in plain clothes ride on them, a service which the public will highly appreciate.—[Wakefield Item.

Practical Politics credits Harrie Hunter, late Senator from this district, with the declaration that "On the United Shoe machinery bill, he declares he voted the way the manufacturers, the men who employ the help, declared they wanted him to vote, and this was only done after consultation with them on the matter." This being true, it was a good thing that Hunter was defeated at the last election. A good deal is being said about reform these days, but the place to begin is in the selection of Legislators.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

Friday, Nov. 23, was a notable day to white ribboners of Middlesex County, the occasion being the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Rolfe of Concord, Mass. Mrs. Rolfe has held the office of president ever since the county was organized. When it was known that they were to receive their friends on that date plans were made to help make it in every sense a golden wedding. Nearly every union in the county was represented by one or more. Poems were written and read to them, beautiful flowers were carried, a guest book in which were inscribed the names of all present and a substantial gift of fifty dollars in gold. The presentation of the latter was by Mrs. Martin of Wakefield who always does things so gracefully but this time out-did herself. The dining room was very appropriately decorated with clusters of yellow corn and laurel emblematic of the lives of the devoted couple. Mr. Rolfe had written a poem to his wife as was hinted and he was urged to read it to the guests.

A fine piano with pianola attachment was the gift to them from a son. A very large number of friends called to extend congratulations during the afternoon.

GRADE CROSSING.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Having resided in Winchester over thirty years, I may take more interest than many in this subject. Am surprised at the lack of interest apparantly taken, and think that the settlement of the matter will decide the future growth of the town, which has all the advantages needed to make it the most desirable residential town in this section. Every resident and non-resident taxpayer should wake up and take an interest, rather than, may be, regret it later. Any plan so far presented could tend to retard the growth of the town, while a more extensive plan could give better results, and pay in the long run.

The State, County, Town and railroads should take into account the future of the town and the railroad, and not figure on the smallest expense now, as the change once made would not be likely to be altered. The B. & M. R. R. tracks could be elevated, and grade of Main and Church streets lowered, as has been done in many places between Boston and New York, and the Bacon street bridge given up, leaving a better street. From newspaper reports it does not appear that the B. & M. officials take the interest they should in reference to the future growth of the town, and the possibility of a four track road. Any undesirable settlement will be caused by the lack of interest of citizens.

The moth question called out a good number at town meeting. We do not expect the moths to remain with us, but the crossing will remain forever, and is of much more interest than any matter liable to ever come before the town. If the new Improvement Society could get together in season, and have a public meeting, it might help the matter. The report of the last hearing reads as if all parties of interest hang back, and did not care to state their views. S.

Mr. Walter A. Davis who died in Somerville last week at 80 Packard avenue, was a brother of Mrs Fannie L. Colburn of this town. Mr. Davis was employed for many years as a travelling salesman for Dwinell, Wright & Co., retiring from business four years ago.

TOWN COUNSEL IN ERROR.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The Town Counsel did not correctly state what the Railroad Counsel said at the hearings, when he quoted him at the town meeting last Tuesday evening. Mr. Coolidge did say in substance that the Railroad would not fight the town but would agree to any plan which the tax payers would agree upon, as Mr. Joslyn said, but Mr. Coolidge stated more than that. Mr. Coolidge also said when he agreed to any plan which the tax payers agreed upon, the words "and which the Commission approved" This puts an entirely diff rent meaning to the quotation of the Town Counsel.

Mr. Coolidge also interjected two "buts" which Mr. Joslyn failed to give at the town meeting, namely :—but the Railroad will not pay any cost of construction of boulevards, or engine house sites or library sites, then he sat down, and rose again and said substantially that the town had for some years been talking of doing away with the Whitney mill, which no doubt would be a good thing for the town, but that the Railroad would not contribute anything towards this project. Let us run this grade crossing fair and square and not keep anything back.

HENRY F JOHNSON.

BASKET BALL.

The High School second team lost its first game last Monday afternoon to the second team of Everett High school, Everett barely winning by three points, the final score being 26 to 23. The Everett second started the game with a rush and threw four baskets, for the total of 8 points, before the local second scored at all. The Everett team steadily increased its lead in the first half, playing all around the High School and having good team play, until at the end the score was 20 to 6 in their favor. The High School second team reenforced by Collins and Thompson, turned the tables in the second half and played a hard and fast game, although they could not quite overcome Everett's lead of 14 points from the first half, scoring 17 points to Everett's 6. The team play of the High School second was quite ragged throughout most of the game although the players in the second half played more together than they did in the first. Both teams in the second half played the best of their ability and hard, on account of which a number of fouls were called on each of the teams, and a number made which were not called.

Everett had a great advantage in the fact that the majority of their team surpassed the local boys in weight and height.

Capt Ellerby, Larkin and Mulloy put up the best game for Everett, while Sharon played excellently For the home team throwing a number of beautiful baskets, three of which were thrown from the opposite side of the "gym."

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

James A Herne is distinctively an American dramatist. An actor himself, he knew how to make a play produce its strongest effect upon an audience and he sought first of all these themes that would appeal most strongly to the home loving and patriotic instincts of America. In his Shore Acres he achieved an instant success and for two years or more it has been played through the country far and wide. Encouraged by the success of his Shore Acres, Mr. Herne wrote "Sag Harbor" and he was rewarded at once with success. Sag Harbor will be given at the Castle Square next week in answer to the request of the large number of patrons who gave it a majority in the recent voting contest. Its scenes of life among the country and fisher folks that dwell on the shores of Long Island Sound will be parts fully represented on the Castle Square stage and the humor that pervades the play will be given its full flavor. Mr. Hansel, Mr Waldron and Miss Lawton and the entire stock company will be in the cast.

Grinding An Old Blade

.....By CLARISSA DIXON

Copyright, 1903, by Clarissa Dixon

THE measured tinkle of a tool sharpener's bell cut through the swell of children's voices in Lily terrace (off Powell street in San Francisco). Adam Hedge heard it and bethought him that he meant to saw the legs off an old table and present it in a royal coat of new paint to his grandson for a play desk, such as kindergartners have, only this was for use at home. The top of the table had been roughened by long use, and smoothing must precede painting, but the blade of his plane was dull, and here was the grinder. Adam hurried to the hall bedroom, which in the flat he occupied represented garret privileges and was a deposit for all sorts of odds and ends.

"Ah, you here, wife? I'm hunting for my old plane. I'm going to have it ground."

Mrs. Hedge was kneeling before an open trunk. She rose hastily, dropping a sparkling bauble which, unnoticed, fell into the pocket of a little dress she was folding.

"What, crying, Lorena? That dress again! I'd give it to the first child I saw in need of it if I were you; that's what I'd do. 'Tain't as if Lissie was in her grave. I can't make out women folks anyway. Here's our Lissie grown a handsome woman and married to her heart's choice, married to a good steady fellow with a regular job at the grip—a regular job, Lorena, such as many a good man can't get—and there's the happy little slip of a boy she's brought up for a grandchild in our age, and yet you sit and cry over her old things just for all the world as if she'd died when she was little. I can't make it out."

"I should think you'd know, Adam. I should think you'd understand. She'll never be little again, Adam. She'll never cuddle down in my arms again and ask for the story of 'Little Silverlocks.'"

"So much the better," declared unpoetic Adam. "Don't you mind how you used to complain you'd told stories till your jaws ached and you wished she'd grow big and read them for herself?"

"I'm sure I never really wished it, Adam. She was a pretty little one, so pretty. I'll never see her like again, and such cunning little ways she had"—

"Yes, yes, cunning enough, I dare say. She used to turn the lamp wicks down till they fell into the bowl of the lamp, burn my Sunday hat, take the eight day clock for a tea cupboard and cut doll things out of the front of your best dress. It's all right, I dare say. She never got spanked, and I'm glad of it. We didn't forget we'd been colts once ourselves, did we, Lorena? But I'm not sorry she's a well grown, nice behaved woman now, and I wish you'd give away that dress and let somebody that needs it wear it out. Better live today and let the past be the past; that's what I say, and that's what I think."

"Yes, Adam, I know. I know what you think. You've forgotten the things of youth," burst out Mrs. Hedge, with a fresh fit of weeping quite unaccountable to her husband. "There's other things—much you forget that I—that I remember. But I'll—I'll give away the dress, as you think best. Somebody ought to have it."

"That's right. Don't be a fool any more. I must hurry now. The grinder stopped next door, but he'll soon be going, and I want this thing sharpened up."

Mrs. Hedge wiped her eyes and followed down to the front door, where she stood watching the man at work and endeavoring to shake off her fit of depression.

She observed that the children in the alley, or "terrace," had a new playmate, a little girl with a petticoat too short for her stockings and a dress too short for her petticoat who devoted every pause in her play to urging a rather large head into a very small sunbonnet. In spite of the shortcomings of her attire she led the games and was withal a merry and a pleasant young thing.

Presently this child drew near the scene of the grinder's industry and remarked:

"You've earnt two bits already, ain't you, pa?"

"Yes."

"Mayn't I have 10 cents to buy a cake? There's a place to the corner and things in the winder—cakes wi' raisins in—splendid! Mayn't I?"

"We'll see, Leel; we'll see." The grinder, embarrassed by too many presences, looked wildly at the front walls before him and the back walls behind him, as if meditating an escape.

"Pa, mayn't I?"

"Bread and rent come before cake. Wait till we see what we have over at night," said the grinder, driven to definite reply.

Mrs. Hedge darted upstairs and ransacked her pantry. The cake box was empty, but there were a few sweet crackers. These and a bundle unskillfully wrapped in a morning paper she offered to the child just as the grinder was taking leave.

"Is it cake?"

"No, dear; a dress which I hope you can wear."

"Long enough, do you think? Pa says I'm getting tall as a shot tower; but, then, I'm very old—most seven."

A week later Mr. and Mrs. Hedge, walking on Geary street, met the same pair, father and daughter. Leel looked up brightly, recognizing the friendly face, and said:

"The dress was too short for me. Wasn't it a love?"

"Corn colored, with white lace, yes," sighed Mrs. Hedge, remembering how her little brown eyed Lissie had looked in it.

"So I had to take it round to Israel's, you know. Pa said I should spend every cent I got for it myself, so I bought this calico for six bits. Ain't it nice and long? And this hat for two bits. It's not in the fashion, but it's big—lots big. And then I got a lovely cake wi' raisins in—not big, but so sweet. I gave some to pa and some to Molly Brown, and I ate some, and it was gooder than popcorn."

"Spillmouth! If you ever gets a husband you'll chatter him dead," said the grinder, pushing the child along, but Mrs. Hedge stopped them with a gesture and cried out:

"What are you talking about, child? Do you mean to say that you sold that old dress for more than a dollar? It was nice, to be sure, but so old."

"Oh, the dress sold for two bits, and the thing that was in the pocket—that thing that opens and the's a picture inside, you know—why, that brought a dollar."

"Oh, you don't mean—it can't be—oh—oh—oh—how could I be so careless! The locket! The locket!" almost screamed Mrs. Hedge. "Get it for me, Adam; get it again. I shall never rest until I have it safe in my own hands. Oh, oh, oh!"

"It's only a bit of folly, like the dress itself," expostulated Adam, but his wife, when she heard these words, looked as if she might faint right there on the street, so that Adam, in alarm, promised to recover the locket if possible.

Leel looked frightened and moved a pace away, but was persuaded by a promise of more cake to go with Adam Hedge in quest of the trinket.

Mr. Israel remembered selling the locket because it brought him luck, he said. He had sold it below cost, because the person who wanted it was the first customer on Monday morning, and he would have been ruined for a week had she gone out without making a purchase. Mr. Israel did not know her name or address. She bought nothing else, and of course she carried the locket away herself, so there had been no delivery address left. She was a short woman and wore her hair in curls. It was brown and hung over her shoulders. That was all he could remember about her looks.

"It's no good hunting the thing," Adam reported to his wife that night. "Best let it go and never mind. It isn't worth the fuss you're making."

"Oh, Adam!"

"I say it isn't. You never wear it anyway. I wouldn't give 5 cents a dozen for such trinkets. When you've got a bird right in your cage, the thing itself, it's nonsense to want a picture of it, so I say the bird's better than the picture."

"Oh, but I haven't really got it! It's lost to me; lost forever—lost, lost, lost!" Mrs. Hedge began crying and cried a good deal of the night. In the morning Adam visited three newspaper offices and with subdued wrath saw his little store of money melting away in advertisements. Every man who did business with Adam was compelled to hear such ejaculations as:

"Beats the world for downright tomfoolery! The picture of a squash faced little girl that looks as if she'd believe any blamed thing you'd a mind to tell her isn't a patch beside our handsome grownup Lissie, with a fine boy in her arms, so I say."

Besides advertising, Adam bethought him that curls worn over the shoulder by a full grown woman are no longer common and might make identification easy. Then he reflected upon the places where women go and was forced to admit that they go everywhere excepting to the caucus. He couldn't go everywhere, but he went to the wharf and the railway station; he visited the park at the hour of crowds, the Wednesday afternoon open air concerts. He stood in theater vestibules from 7:30 till 8:15; he visited garment factories, churches, restaurants; he stood on the busy corners. The search became interesting, not so much for the thing sought as for the excitement of the seeking and the desire of proving himself capable in a new line of energy. The path of failure was strewn with queer incidents and amusing encounters. He had occasion to know at the end of a few days that in a city like San Francisco, with a changing population and many travelers, there may be found more than one woman with brown curls banging over her shoulders and that some of them are little pleased to miss a boat or to be waylaid on the street because of a trifle in which they feel no interest.

Mrs. Hedge now declared that she did not care whether the locket was recovered or not, but as she continued to have fits of weeping which he could attribute to nothing else Adam determined to restore her the lost trinket if possible.

The next Monday morning he wandered disconsolately into Israel's. A woman with brown curls over her shoulders stood at the counter haggling for a paperweight, which she wanted for 10 cents. Adam stood still and pinched himself. He thought he must be dreaming.

"You know your power. You know I must sell on Monday morning," Israel exclaimed in exasperation. "You got a locket from me that way, and the jewel in the lid was worth more than you gave me for the locket. At

THREW IT ON THE FLOOR AND SET HIS HEEL ON IT.

I forgot myself! Jupiter! What a mistake to tell you its value! It is wanted again. Will you"—

By this time Adam was standing beside the woman, interrupting Israel.

An hour later he paused at Lissie's gate on his way home with the precious little gold case in his pocket.

"What's all this about a locket?" asked Lissie. "I meant to run over and see mamma, but I had a visitor and couldn't leave home. I didn't know there was a locket in mamma's possession."

"A picture of you when you were five years old, I believe. I've got it again. Here, look! I haven't opened it yet."

"Why, papa, what's the matter with you and mamma? That picture of me I tore out of the locket some sixteen years ago, cut in four pieces and threw in the ash bin, along with the locket, which I hammered into its original elements. Mamma knew, for I told her. She forgave me and forgot it, so far as I know. I was little then, and she wasn't worrying over my being a lost baby. Why, papa, this isn't a girl at all! It's a young fellow with a smooth face, and, why, papa, look at it! It's none of ours. Look at that conceited smirk on his face! Must be some mistake."

Adam confronted his wife with the open locket in his hand. "Is that the one?" he demanded.

"Yes, yes, that's it! I'm so glad! How did you"—

"Woman, you cared so much for that, did you? That smirking"—

"Smirking, do you think? Well, he was but a youth, a young blade, maybe, but he loved me when I was also young." She kissed the picture, smiling.

Adam snatched the locket from her hand, threw it on the floor and set his heel on it.

"A young blade, eh? Then he must be an old blade by now and in need of grinding. I'll make powder of this, if I can't of the original! So that's the trouble, the crying in the night and all the rest of it. An old love affair that you never forgot! Jim Moller—nobody but Jim Moller ever smirked like that"—

A light dawned on Lorena Hedge's face. "Adam," she said softly, "you've forgotten many things. It's a locket you gave me on my sixteenth birthday, with your own picture inside. You said things that day, foolish, maybe, but sweet to remember. I was Renie then; now I'm Lorena. It's the same in everything. It's been like beginning in the morning with songs about roses and sunshine and ending at night with quarrels about the price of pork chops. If I had back the romance, the sentiment! Oh, Adam, it isn't the locket I cry for; that's just an excuse to hide what went along with it! If you'd speak to me as you spoke then, if"—

"Was that it? Haven't I shown folly enough in this last ten minutes to prove I'm still a boy? We men are such blame fools. We think when we care for a woman a hundred times more than we did for the girl she grew from she'll know it without any of our telling. Renie, I'm not a poet, but I wouldn't trade you for all the girls in America rolled into one giggly, slippery little bundle."

"I—I wasn't trying to make you say things, but— Oh, I'm so glad you've said them—glad the locket got lost!"

"There, now; don't you cry any more."

"I don't believe I will again, ever."

Unstamped Letters In England.

Many people are unaware of the fact that the sender of an unstamped letter can be proceeded against for the postage. The moment a person posts an unpaid letter he becomes a debtor to the postoffice. If it is refused by the addressee the sender is liable for the postage. An enormous number of unstamped letters are posted every year. No record is kept of the exact number. Many large firms give instructions at the postoffice that unstamped letters are not to be delivered to them. They are then returned to the senders, and in the case of frequent offenders legal steps are taken.—London Lady.

Her Simplicity.

A silly little lady had a husband, a lover of gayety, who was inclined to neglect his wife. This lady while spending the winter in Devonshire said one day at the country postoffice:

"Dear me, what a silly mistake you postoffice people have made."

"How, madam?" asked the clerk.

"Why," she explained, with a titter, "here I have just got a letter from my husband, who is working hard in London, and the envelope is postmarked Monte Carlo."—London Onlooker.

GOVERNMENT WAGES LOW.

H. T. Newcomb Gives Facts of Interest to Wage Earners.

From 1896 to 1904 the average retail cost of the ordinary articles of food used in the United States advanced no less than 17 per cent (16.96, to be more exact)—that is, the purchaser of food for a family had to pay $1.17 in 1904 for the same quantity and quality of food that $1 would purchase in 1896. These are official statistics compiled by the highly skilled experts employed by the federal government, and every housewife knows that they do not overstate the advance. Other necessities of life have advanced in cost with approximately equal rapidity.

Unquestionably wages ought, generally speaking, to have advanced somewhat in proportion to the increase in the cost of living. In private employment this has apparently taken place, the average wages per hour reported by the federal bureau of labor being 17.36 per cent higher in 1904 than in 1896 and the average weekly earnings 12.76 per cent higher. The advances thus represented are spread all over the country; they characterize every private industrial enterprise and have benefited all classes of workmen employed in private undertakings.

How is it with public employment? A few undertakings conducted under public ownership employ labor like that similarly serving private employers in the same communities, and in these cases the public rate of wages has slowly been advanced somewhat in proportion to the advance in the wages privately paid. But where any American government, municipal, state or national, is the sole or by far the largest employer of a particular class of labor the advances to meet increased cost of living have been so few that the ordinary investigator will be unable to discover a single instance.

Throughout the postal service, among the 25,000 clerical employees at Washington, in the customs and internal revenue services there have been no advances in pay to meet the rise in cost of food, clothing and shelter. The pay of letter carriers, for example, remains precisely where it was fixed twenty years ago by an act approved on Jan. 3, 1887.

The largest printing office in the world is that maintained at Washington by the government, and there the federal government employs a large force of intelligent and highly skilled workingmen. A change in the basis of payment in 1890 from the piece work to the per hour system prevents comparisons with dates prior to the change, but wages have remained stationary since March 3, 1869, although the official statisticians report that the cost of food has advanced since the rate of wages was fixed by statute fully 12.25 per cent. During the same years the wages of printers in private book publishing or job printing establishments advanced throughout the United States as follows: Compositors, male, 14.67 per cent; compositors, female, 20.30 per cent; press feeders, male, 22.41 per cent; press feeders, female, 21.27 per cent; pressmen, 11.75 per cent.—H. T. Newcomb.

DO YOU OWN A HORSE?

Electric Light Plants Are Like Horses In Some Respects.

The subject of depreciation is well worthy of the careful consideration of those who are prone to ignore that item in estimating the cost of lights supplied by municipal plants. But as more people own horses than lighting plants it may be helpful to consider depreciation as applied to horses.

You pay $250 for a five-year-old horse. That's original cost. If you borrow the money you must pay interest on it. If you don't borrow it you lose the interest you would get if you didn't buy the horse. Either way it's interest. You feed the horse, and perhaps hire a man to take care of him. That's operating expenses. You get him shod occasionally and call in the veterinarian when he is sick. That's renewals and repairs. After a few years, in spite of the best of care, the horse is no longer capable of doing the required work and is sold for $50, a loss of $200 as compared with the original cost. That's depreciation. If you haven't laid that by year by year out of the horse's earnings, you've got to borrow it to buy a new horse, and you may not find it easy to do so if you haven't repaid the original loan. That's what happens to municipal plants that don't provide an adequate depreciation fund.

Making Peter Pay For Paul.

Whether a public utility be administered by the government itself or by a private corporation, we hold that every person who uses it should be held to pay the cost of the service which he receives and that no man should be compelled by taxation or otherwise to bear any part of his neighbor's expenses for light and power, for telephone service or for transportation of himself or of his goods.

Every proposal that a municipality assume operation of all public utilities and reduce rates to persons using them, regardless of what the service may actually cost, is an attempt to force some men to bear the expenses of others, because where the outlay for operation exceeds earnings the deficit must be made up by taxation, and this we denounce as socialistic and therefore hostile to justice and subversive of democratic government.—Bourke Cockran.

Senator Sorghum In Doubt.

"Do you think that municipal ownership would eliminate graft?"

"I am not quite sure," answered Senator Sorghum, "whether it would eliminate it or simply originate a new kind."—Washington Star.

FORMS OF INSANITY.

Premonitory Symptoms by Which They May Be Detected.

There are certain premonitory symptoms of the more prevalent forms of insanity that can be counted on, as a general thing, as infallible.

In paresis, which is claiming its victims in tremendous numbers, there are many physical signs that are almost incontrovertible.

The exaggerated twitching of the facial muscles in conversation, the occasional tendency of the eye to turn outward, the weakness of the legs, the flabbiness of all muscles, are preliminary symptoms that give warning that a man is about to break down.

With the victim of mania—the maniac—the symptoms are often similar to those found in melancholia, though generally the disease gives the victim an appearance of great elation. The eyes are abnormally bright, the features are alert and loose and an air of tremendous excitement is apparent. This is from a constant fear that something is about to happen.

Another form of insanity is prevalent among postmen. Excessive strain, continual worry or trouble, allied to a weakened physical system, are the causes. It manifests itself through the gradual loss of some faculty that has been all right till now.

The loss of memory for details is an alarming symptom and one that should be given careful and immediate attention. The patient, if taken at the right time, may be cured, but not after the disease has got a firm hold on him.

Paranoia, which is a very prevalent type of insanity, is almost invariably indicated by a peculiarly self satisfied, conceited expression of countenance.

The patient poses, sneers contemptuously and in every way shows his tremendously "stage struck" condition. He is absolutely controlled by the "ego." Everything to him is "I, I, I." He is a monomaniac with one set idea, a single purpose.—Dr. Graeme M. Hammond in New York World.

A PROPOSAL IN JAPAN.

Quaint Custom of Placing a Plant In an Empty Flowerpot.

Old customs appear to be fast disappearing in Japan, a fact which cannot be wondered at considering the childishness which lay at the root of many of the most picturesque, but in some of the Japanese islands the quaintest marriage formalities are observed.

In houses wherein reside one or more daughters of a marriageable age an empty flowerpot of an ornamental character is encircled by a ring and suspended from the window or veranda by three light chains.

The Juliets of Japan are, of course, as attractive to the Romeos as those of other lands. But instead of serenades by moonlight and other delicate ways of making an impression it is etiquette for the Japanese lover to approach the dwelling of his lady bearing some choice plant in his hand, which he boldly, but, let us hope, reverently, proceeds to plant in the empty vase.

This takes place at a time when he is fully assured that both mother and daughter are at home, neither of whom, of course, is at all conscious that the young man is taking such a liberty with the flowerpot outside their window. This act of placing a pretty plant in the empty flowerpot is equivalent to a formal proposal to the young lady who dwells within.

The youthful gardener, having settled his plant to his mind, retires, and the lady is free to act as she pleases. If he is the right man she takes every care of the gift, waters it and tends it carefully with her own hands, that all the world may see the donor is accepted as a suitor. But if he is not a favorite or if stern parents object the poor plant is torn from the vase and the next morning lies limp and withered on the veranda or on the path below.—McCall's Magazine.

Dissuading a Tempter.

A pompous Chicago merchant, arrogantly carrying the signs of his prosperity about him, accosted an acquaintance of his who conducts a successful rescue mission and said:

"James, I'd like to attend one of your meetings."

"Certainly," rejoined the minister, "but leave your watch and diamonds with the hotel clerk."

"What?" asked the merchant in astonishment. "Are not the men of your mission converted thieves?"

"True," answered the mission leader softly, "but, George, you look so easy and wholesome. Really, I don't want my men to regret that they promised me never to steal again."

Historic Pharsalia.

It was on his way to the battlefield of Pharsalia that Caesar uttered the famous saying to the fishermen. He had come down to Brindisi to cross to Dyrrachium and, finding no galley, commanded the owner of a small sailing boat to put him across the Adriatic. On the voyage a violent storm occurred, and even the experienced mariners were terrified. But the great captain said: "Have no fear. You carry Caesar and his fortunes."

The Northern Substitute.

"In that tropical country," the returned traveler was explaining, "most of the houses are constructed with an inclosure in the center, which they call the court."

"I see," said the hostess. "In our colder latitude the parlor is generally used for that purpose."—Chicago Tribune.

Cannes, the perfume making town of southern France, smells so powerfully of flowers in the busy season that visitors are often afflicted with a flower headache.

THE WINCHESTER STAR.

VOL. XXVI. NO. 24. WINCHESTER, MASS., FRIDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1906. PRICE, FIVE CENTS

LOOKING BACKWARD.

At Winchester Center Railroad Crossing.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

At the present time when the public mind is in somewhat of a ferment regarding railroad crossings, it may be interesting, if not instructive, to glance backward at conditions which governed the use of highways by the Boston & Lowell railroad when the latter was first incorporated and allowed by law to cross public and private streets.

The Boston & Lowell Railroad Co., incorporated June 5th, 1830, was the first passenger and freight railroad granted a charter by a Massachusetts legislature. The Providence and the Worcester railroads were incorporated in June 1831, and the Eastern April 14th, 1836. Many other railroads were chartered from 1830 to 1840 but the Lowell railroad received the first charter which was somewhat different from later railroad acts of incorporation. Under lease to the Boston & Maine railroad it is still operating under the terms of its original charter, being exempt from the terms of the general railroad act passed some twenty years ago, which act does not apply to railroads incorporated previous to March 11th, 1831. Excepting as modified by the grade crossing act the Boston & Lowell railroad is therefore now running through Winchester and across her highways under the terms and conditions imposed by the legislature of 1830.

The act of incorporation (section 11) states that "if said railroad shall cross any private way, said corporation shall so construct said railroad as not to obstruct the safe and convenient use of such private way" If not so constructed, the party aggrieved can recover reasonable damages "If the said railroad shall cross any canal, turnpike or other highway, the said railroad shall be so constructed as not to impede or obstruct the safe and convenient use of such canal, turnpike or other highway." "And the said corporation shall have the power to raise or lower such turnpike, highway or private way, so that the said railroad, if necessary, may conveniently pass over or under the same." "If said corporation shall not so raise or lower such turnpike, highway or private way as to be satisfactory to the proprietors of such turnpike or to the Selectmen of the town in which said highway or private way may be situate, said proprietors or Selectmen may require in writing of said corporation such alteration or amendment as they may think necessary. If the required alteration or amendment be reasonable and proper, and the said corporation shall unnecessarily and unreasonably neglect to make the same, such proprietors or Selectmen may proceed to make such alteration or amendment and may institute and prosecute to final judgment and execution any action of the case against said corporation and shall therein recover a reasonable indemnity in damage for all charges, disbursements, labor and services occasioned by making such alteration or amendments, with costs of suit"

The fact that the Boston & Lowell railroad could not originally construct its road so as "to impede or obstruct the safe and convenient use of a highway" would seem to be clearly established by its charter. When the railroad was first operated the present Winchester Main street crossing was not impeded or obstructed or made unsafe or inconvenient as it is at present by the passing of trains and the use of the highway as a shifting point for the many freight trains, big and little, which now pass from the Winchester freight yard to points on the Woburn branch. Yet "ponderous gates" as they have been described by an old resident were then in use and were held at rest across the railroad and against the passage of any trains except when the highway was not occupied by teams or pedestrians. When a train appeared in sight, the man in charge of the gates allowed the trains to pass if the highway was clear and no teams were stalled upon it, otherwise the gates remained closed against the train. These gates were of such an important nature that they gave the name of "Woburn Gates" to the present Winchester square, a name it retained until a station was established at South Woburn. The late Luther Symmes once informed me that the first time he road on a railroad train, he footed it from Winchester to the "Watering Station," now Walnut Hill, and paid one dollar for a passage to Boston, as no train stopped at Woburn Gates at that time. The Woburn Gates were used to protect the highway from passing trains in the way described, for many years. They were then succeeded by sliding gates which were not much used, a flagman protecting the highway somewhat, the legend "Railroad crossing, look out for the engine while the bell rings" being painted on two large signs, one over each crossing (Main and Church streets). The flagman was the only protector of the public for many years or until about twenty years ago when the present tooth-pick gates were installed with several men to operate them. These gates are only called gates by courtesy or in accordance with railroad usage as they are not much more protection against thoughtless people running into danger than a chalk line would be. A farmer would build a better gate to protect his cabbage patch. Is the present construction of the railroad, with its cobweb gates at the Winchester crossing of that nature that it does not "impede or obstruct the safe and convenient use of the highway?" It certainly does not seem so, neither does the use of an important ancient highway for shifting purposes, if it "obstructs the safe and convenient use of the highway" seem to be a proper use of the highway under the original charter of the railroad.

It is not generally known that the present Winchester grade crossing was supposed to be abolished at one time. The railroad company took steps to abolish it before it erected "ponderous" and substantial gates to protect both Church and Main streets just before trains commenced to run from Boston to Lowell. The records of the Middlesex County Commissioners, page 471, records 1831 to 1835, state that the commissioners met at the house of Abel Richardson on November 21st, 1834, and after viewing the premises they directed the highways (Church and Main streets) to be altered and rebuilt so as to obviate a grade crossing. In the description, the southerly end of the upward grade commenced opposite the Unitarian Church taking "a part of the front yard of Zachariah Symmes," where the High School now stands. Thence the new location passed through the mill pond "above the present bridge" and "passing northerly of Abel Richardson's house and barn" (in the rear of the Middlesex National Bank) thence turning westerly so as to cross the railroad more at a right angle than the present location of Main street and so as to meet present Church street on a better line than the present junction line of the two streets. Northerly from the railroad, the upward grade begins at a point that will not make the approach on that side exceed four per cent. grade. On the southerly side the grade must not exceed three per cent. As to width the record states, "said highway, thus altered and turned to be four rods wide" which is 66 feet, six feet wider than present Main street. On Church street, the approach to the crossing commences "about thirty rods north-east from Collins' dwelling house" which house stood nearly opposite Dr. Church's present residence. From the point of beginning it followed the old road "westerly of buildings late of Abel Richardson 3rd," to Main street "as above altered." The "buildings" referred to formerly stood on the present site of Newth's hardware store.

The above record seems to be complete in every particular and there is no reference to its having been made officially null and void in any way. Under its charter the railroad would have to pay all the expense of abolishing the grade crossing and possibly the company thought the cost too great and therefore the substantial gates referred to above were erected to guard the crossing. It might be asked why the County Commissioners decree was not carried out but the records show that a great many decrees of the commissioners were not carried out in olden times unless there was the proper "push" behind to make them slide along and prove operative.

Before leaving the description of the 1834 County Commissioners' order for the abolition of the Winchester grade crossing, it might be said that as present Pleasant street was not in existence at the time no reference was made to it in the order for an inclined approach from the easterly side of the present crossing. Pleasant street was not laid out for several years after 1834.

It might be noted also that when the railroad location through present Winchester was finally decided upon, the R. R. Co., through its agent, Patrick T. Jackson, bought the Abel Richardson farm and mill privilege (which then included most of the center of Winchester) that it might locate its tracks, overhead crossings, etc., as it pleased. After the railroad was completed the farm and mill was sold by the railroad to Samuel S. Richardson with the exception of what it retained in its location.

A brief history of other railroad crossings in Winchester will be given in another issue of the STAR.

MR. T. B. COTTER

Retires from Management of Pinehurst.

The following was taking from the Pinehurst (N. C.) Outlook:

"Mr. Leonard Tufts, owner of Pinehurst, assumes, for the present, the personal management of the Village, succeeding Resident General Manager Thomas B. Cotter, who has been located here for five years past.

During Mr. Cotter's term of service Pinehurst has made wonderful growth, and his influence has been felt not alone in the village and the county, but in the State as well. He has been a conspicuous figure here and will be missed by many friends who join in wishing him unbounded succes in new fields"

Mr. Cotter will be remembered as one of Winchester's most prominent citizens and as secretary and treasurer of the local Co-operative Bank.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Holders of fire insurance policies issued by the "German" Insurance Company of Freeport, Ill., are hereby informed that this company is defunct, and its affairs are at present in the hands of a receiver.

The "Royal" Insurance Company of Liverpool, the largest Fire Insurance Company in the world, has agreed and arranged to re-insure all the liability existing under the outstanding policies from and after noon on the fifteen day of November, 1906.

As the direct agent in Winchester, I will issue new "Royal" policies for the full original term of the "German," dating from the delivery of old policies to me. Pro rata cancellation credit will apply to premium of each new policy.

Kindly forward policies to me as soon as convenient so that adjustments may be made before any losses or complications arise. The "German" is a company which I have never represented or endorsed, but as agent of the Royal, I will handle these adjustments in the interests of all concerned.

MISS BROWN'S EGYPTIAN LECTURE.

The opening of the spacious house of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Ginn on the evening of Nov. 27th, for the début of Miss Dorothy Temple Brown, with her lecture, "Up the Nile to Wady Halfa," was another instance of their spirit of helpfulness towards every kind of artistic effort, which reminds one of the art lovers of the time of the Renaissance. It means much to a young lecturer to make her first appearance under such patronage. Oriental hangings and rugs of great beauty, the light of many-colored lamps, and here and there glimpses of the avenue of Sphinxes at Luxor, the Pyramids of Gizeh, and the Obelisk of Heliopolis, seemed to create an eastern atmosphere. Brilliant tent-cloths hung over balustrades, behind which one expected to see red fezzed, black-eyed Arabs peering over at the beautiful picture below, for fairer dames and lovelier young girls in prettier attire are not seen in the land of Nile Gods, than graced those lofty halls and rooms.

As an appropriate prelude, Mrs. Lilian Hayman, accompanied by her young son, and exquisitely gowned in shimmering black and white, sang with much taste and feeling a group of descriptive Egyptian songs, so one really started on the Nile journey to the tinkling of camel bells and the movement of great caravans bearing their burdens of fragrant stuffs across the desert.

Miss Brown brings many things to her audience that are unusual in a lecturer—youth, enthusiasm, a quite charming personality, a clear, well-cultivated voice and perfect enunciation. She also has much repose of manner and a pretty way of looking straight into the eyes of her hearers. Her lecture, as a lecture, made no pretension of appealing to the scholar or Egyptologist, to any study of ancient religion of the Egyptians, the power of priest or Pharaoh, or the deeper phases of Egyptian history. It was a clear, straightforward statement of what she saw and the impressions made upon her mind, with an appreciation and an enlarged vision of beauty, whether of pylon, pyramid, or temple, of the great river, the mystery of the sunset, the Arab bowed in prayer, the Muezzin in his minaret, or the picturesqueness of Fellaheen or camel. More than most travellers to Egypt, Miss Brown was impressed by the grandeur of the Temples of Karnak, the Tombs of the Kings at Hundred-gated Thebes, the beauty and pathetic destruction of Philae, the Rock Tombs of Abû Simbel and the wonderful antiquities in the Museum of of Cairo. She looked at Egypt with fresh, intelligent eyes and an instinctive love for the land of the Pharaoh's which had grown with her home study of pictures and books. The bewildering hotels of Cairo and Assouan where congregate the tribes of the earth, the life at the Ghezireh Palace, the Barrage, the sand-storms along the river, the gymkhana and other scenes in the Egypt of today, were described truthfully and vivaciously. She held her company of over a hundred hearers absorbed for an hour an more, and this without the modern adjunct of stereopticon illustrations. Those who had been in Egypt were at once transported thither, and those who had not saw visions of a voyage which should land them in the ancient harbor of Alexandria, then on to Cairo and up the Nile.

Miss Brown has made an excellent début and in her chosen vocation has given an impression that seem to betoken success. In the audience were people from Boston, Brookline, Newton and our neighboring town of Arlington. Winchester itself was represented by its best, including a sprinkling of the members of our new Handicraft Society. M. E. N.

CHILDREN MADE HIT

In Operetta of "Little Boy Blue" in Metcalf Hall.

Metcalf hall was crowded to the doors Friday evening by an audience which assembled to witness the first performance of an original operetta, "Little Boy Blue; or, The Tale of the Ridiculous Cow," written by Ormsby A. Court of this town, with music by Walter H. Lewis. It was produced under the sole direction of Miss Lucy W. Bishop, who has spent weeks of careful and painstaking efforts in drilling the children in their parts.

The success of the affair was a delight to the fond parents and friends of the youthful actors and actresses, and rounds of applause greeted their efforts. The hit of the evening was the song, "A Very Little Girl," by Esther Cutting, herself a very little girl, who sang and acted in a captivating manner. In response to numerous requests the performance was repeated Thursday evening.

The cast of characters was as follows:

Betty, queen of the village archery club Beatrice de Bussy
Letty, a dairymaid Josephine Woods
Sue, a very little girl Esther Cutting
Fairy, Fairplay, good and true Alice Cutting
Corn Witch, old and evil Eunice Homer
Sheriff Bluster, the important Leslie Johnston
The ridiculous cow By Itself
Scarecrows and dairymaids, Helen Ayer, Frances Foster, Barbara French, Elizabeth Fiske, Miriam Grover, Ruth Hazelton, Lucile Hines, Shirley Himes, Lillian Knapp, Martha Locke, Pauline Miller, Helen Rowe, Elizabeth Symmes, Helen Sanborn, Barbara Wellington.
Scarecrows and constables, William Barnaby, Lloyd Clarke, Reginald Clarke, Warren Johnston, Geoffrey Neiley, Richard Neiley, Kenneth Pratt, Marshall Symmes, Dwight Thompson.
Pianist, Miss Helen Edlefson.

NEW AUTOMOBILE CO.

An automobile station has been opened by the Winchester Automobile Co. in a shop on Main street near Dover's blacksmith shop, the proprietor's being well known citizens. In the spring they will erect a building of their own in which automobiles will be built. Their repair shop is equipped to do first class work where repairing and rebuilding of gasoline and steam cars will receive prompt attention. A full supply of oil and gasoline is kept on hand. This firm is prepared to do all kinds of machine work. Now is the time to have your car overhauled.

ENGLISH VISITORS SURPRISED

At the Many Things Seen in the Winchester Schools.

The two English educators who were visiting the schools in town this week were much surprised at many thing that they saw. These two gentlemen are more particularly interested in the schools of towns, so that while other members of the educational congress were inspecting the city schools, they came to Winchester and other places in the suburbs. What surprised them the most was the class of pupils attending the schools, and when at the closing hour at the Wyman school they saw carriages lined up on the street to take the children home, they could not understand it. One of the gentlemen said that in England those who were able to have carriages did not attend the public schools, but went to private schools. So great was their interest in the sight that one of the visitors took a snap shot picture as the scholars were getting into the carriages.

Another thing that forcibly impressed them was the systematic manner of keeping the school supplies in the High school building and the method of distribution. Custodian Nichols who originated this system and has brought it to the present high standard of efficiency, explained the manner of keeping and disposing of the supplies and his system of keeping tally on the stock. This drew from the gentlemen the remark that they were surprised to see the position of janitor filled by so intelligent a man as Mr. Nichols, and mentioned the fact that a janitor in England was very far from being an important personage, so much so that the average class of people looked upon him as a menial and one not to be spoken to. However England is not America where class does not count.

We do not believe there is a town in the State where more care is exercised in the purchase, care and distribution of school supplies than in Winchester. The system is as near perfect as possible, and gives the utmost satisfaction to all who have to do with the supplies.

Mr. Nichols has charge of 475 books in the High School Library; 7,808 pieces of music, or 90 different kinds; 625 library books in the different schools; 215 kinds of text books in the High school, and 519 in the other schools; making a total of 14,297 in his charge. By his system of card cataloguing he can account for every piece and tell just where they are.

NEW OFFICERS AT CALUMET CLUB.

The officers for the coming year were elected at the Calumet Club on Tuesday evening. Following is the list:

President, Chas. E. Barrett
Vice President, George A. Burgess
Secretary, Edgar M. Young
Treasurer, H. Earl Richardson
Directors for three years, Henry Weed, Chas. W. Tarbell, Jere A. Downs.
Director for one year, Elmer P. Randlett.

The election this year brought a change in almost the entire executive staff of club officers, the former secretary and treasurer, Messrs. Jere A. Downs and Geo. H. Lochman, each deciding not to continue in office.

During the past year President J. Herbert Dwinell has made the club a most efficient head, leaves it in a very prosperous condition, and with a full membership list.

At the meeting Tuesday night the following committee was appointed with regard to the revision and correction of the constitution and by-laws: Messrs. J. Herbert Dwinell, Wm. D. Richards, Jere A. Downs and Ralph E. Joslin.

AN AFTERNOON OF WHIST AND MUSIC.

The second in the series of afternoon whist parties by the Ladies' Friendly Society was held at the residence of Mrs. Oren C. Sanborn, Central street, Tuesday afternoon. Like the first party, there was a large attendance, some twenty tables being occupied. It was a very pleasant occasion not only because of the interesting whist, but also owing to the excellent musical program. Mr. W. H. Hill of Watertown, delighted those present with a group of songs. Mr. Hill has an excellent voice which shows thorough training, and he left behind him most pleasant recollections. Mrs. W. F. Edlefson, our well known pianist, was the accompanist.

Mrs. Herbert Symmes won first prize, Mrs. W. F. Prime second and Mrs. Neinker captured the consolation prize. Light refreshments were served.

DOLL AND BEAR SALE DEC. 11th.

Waterfield Hall from 2 to 6. The ladies of the Parish of the Epiphany will hold a Doll and Bear Sale, grab bags and candy for the children. Dolls millinery specialties of all kinds. Come prepared for a good time children and surprises on all sides. Bear the date in mind, Dec. 11th.

Santa Claus will be present.

REV VINCENT RAVI.

GLIMPSES OF NORTHERN ITALY.

On Monday evening, Dec. 31, the Rev. Vincent Ravi will deliver a stereopticon lecture in the Methodist church on the subject, "Glimpses of Northern Italy."

Mr. Ravi has lived in Florence for four years, and in recent years has visited several times the "City by the Arno." While in Florence he attended the High school, consequently he speaks Italian fluently and with ease. Moreover his residence in America has not abated one iota his love for Italian history and art.

The lecture will consist largely of a presentation of the beauties of Florence, its monuments, churches, art galleries, palaces, gardens and streets. A number of slides of Pisa, Milan and Venice will be displayed, but the greatest part of the time will be devoted to the capitol of Tuscany.

Following the lecture, an experience social will be held under the auspices of the Epworth League. From 11 p. m. to 12 m. the Methodists, and all who care to join them, will unite in a watch-night service. The preacher of the occasion will be the Rev. Philip L. Frick, Ph. D., pastor of the Methodist church in Chelsea, and one of the strongest preachers of the New England Conference.

It is hoped that the above program will attract the attention of the general public, which is cordially invited to share in this intellectual, social and spiritual feast.

CALUMET CLUB BOWLING TOURNAMENT.

The results of last week's games left the teams again closely bunched with their standing relatively the same. Teams 1 and 8 each dropped four points, but still remained tied for first position. For second position teams 12 and 4 are very close with one match difference, while three teams are bunched in close behind them.

On Wednesday evening teams 3 and 9 rolled their postponed game, resulting in a straight win for team 9, placing it up with the leading teams again.

The score:

FROZEN TO DEATH.

For the first time in many years a man was frozen to death in this town. The victim of the sad calamity was James D. Eliott, well known to many as Mr. Edward Johnson's coachman. He was found on Highland avenue early Tuesday morning by Louis Goddu, who noticed the body lying in the road. Investigation revealed the body of Elliott, frozen stiff. The remains were found near the head of Chestnut street, and but a short distance from the Johnson residence.

Elliott left the Johnson residence on Monday noon for Boston, returning by electrics late in the evening. He evidently left the car at Main street and Highland avenue, below Symmes' corner, as marks in the snow showed where he had fallen several times before he finally succumbed.

Mr Goddu notified the police, and officer Thomas Dotten, accompanied by Mr. Wm. T. Dotten secured a team and took the body to the station. Life had been extinct for some time before the remains were found.

Mr. Elliott was the son of the late Daniel Elliott of Spruce street, being born in this town. He leaves a wife and a seven-year-old son, a mother and one brother.

The funeral was held on Thursday morning at the home of his brother, William Elliott on Spruce street. High mass of requiem was celebrated at St. Mary's Church by Rev. Francis E. Rogers. The pallbearers were Robert H. Sullivan, James McElroy, James Murphy and Sidney Stevens. Interment was in Calvary Cemetery, Montvale.

ENJOYABLE CONCERT.

The concert and dance given in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening was one of the most enjoyable affairs of a like nature yet given here. The affair was given by the Harvard Musical Clubs, which are admitted this year to be the best yet. A varied and pleasing program was listened to by a select audience composed of almost every Harvard man in town, to say nothing of the large number of directly interested in the college. To comment upon each number of the program would be but a succession of repetitions, as one and all were enthusiastically received and encored. At the close of the musical dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

60 SUMMER STREET

A WARNING AGAINST AUTOMANIA.

To the Editor of the Transcript:

This seems an opportune moment for a renewed public attention to a vital subject. The newspapers of today intimate that automobiles may be barred from Massachusetts avenue to Arlington street over Commonwealth avenue. The alleged reason is that these machines are excessively wearing out the roadbed. I hope that this suggestion will pass into an enactment ; but it is not simply that the Te ford pavement on Commonwealth avenue is suffering from the illegal speed of the automobile, not simply that households are suffering from the dust created, not only because horses and carriages are at a disadvantage, but from deeper considerations I favor the move.

The automobile is a useful machine In the language of the day, "It has come to stay." Used properly there can be no question about its utility. But the fact stares us in the face that it has become a menace to pedestrians, and a threatening symptom of things ahead in politics The highways of Boston and Massachusetts belong to pedestrians even more than to drivers. This is according to law. But we have come to a condition of things where all this is set at naught. The ordinary automobilist pushes on in a crowded thoroughfare, where people may be getting on or off of trolley cars, blows his horn, and expects everybody to get out of the way. I have seen instances where it was about impossible to do this, and individuals have shown alarm by running. The inmates of the automobile are accustomed to laugh, notably th woman passengers. The legal restrictions as to speed on the boulevards, and also in the streets of Boston, are completely set aside. I believe that Police Commissioner O'Meara is trying to do his duty, but he is powerless to cope with a rebellious sentiment so widespread. He cannot put a policeman at every crossing.

I want to call attention to the dangers ahead. There is no other positive motive that can be ascribed to me, since I am not running for any office, and have no conceivable ulterior aim. The average automobilist's insolence is a symptom; I understand that perfectly. But if it is restrained there may be an educational effect upon those who are nearing peril before it is too late. The last election shows that Massachusetts is restless. Yes, discontented with certain conditions. If a revulsion takes place at the next campaign it will be greatly because citizens, who call themselves lawabiding and honorable, fail to do their part in stemming this tide. Many who read this may laugh It is well enough to remember that those laugh best who laugh last. I have pondered on this matter some time and reluctantly go into print, but hope that others, of more importance will see the serious situation.

It is simply stating facts to say that the mania for automobiles has demoralized personal character to a great extent. Major Higginson spoke about the flaunting of these machine riches in the public eye, but he might better have said, in many cases, they exhibit the mortgage effrontery. Owners of these locomotives hire immature motorists, fully understanding what they are doing, and allow these representatives to insult the public. There is a perfect remedy. A friend on Commonwealth avenue, who owns one of these machines, told his man that he would be discharged at once when he transgressed certain rules. This is an exception but it ought to be made universal. There is scarcely a machine going over Commonwealth avenve, Beacon street and Boylston street, in the morning—streets which I am accustomed to walk over every day—but exceeds the legal rate of speed. The policeman who traverses this region in his own machine has orders to superivse the business "with judgement." We know very well what such a phrase means in the ordinary lax condition of public restraint. I claim it is utterly wrong that pedestrians, with their right of way, should be obliged to carry such a responsibility as is now loaded on them. We constantly read that someone has been run over, and the reporter kindly adds that, so far as known, "reasonable care was used by the motorist." If the machine had been held to a stated legal rate of speed, there would not have been such an accident. I do not know of any more pernicious law passed at the State House last winter than the one which allowed owners and runners of these locomotives to decide what is reckless speed and what is not. When anyone sizes up the individuals who have charge of these huge touring cars, we say at once such persons would never be trusted with any serious responsibility. They are often flippant, reckless, and glory in their misdeeds. They consider themselves heroes when they go into court to represent their masters, and pay a fine, walking out with a smile.

I predict that out of such continuous and afflicting experiences in our public streets there will be tumultuous and deplorable times in our civic and political affairs. The party that is in power will be saddled with a responsibility which it does not deserve. The complaint that one can make is that the members of that party (and it is mine) some of them very prominent, simply keep quiet, say nothing, do nothing. I have had conversations with scores of our citizens, official and otherwise. While the majority are just as much in earnest as I am, they decline to do anything, declaring that they are powerless. I do not agree with them, and hence this honest missive sent to you entirely from citizenship loyalty

The popular supposition that there are not enough men in Massachusetts to go around provided every woman in the state should desire to take unto herself a husband, is exploded by the report of the state bureau of statistics. It appears that every woman in Massachusetts may be provided for and still leave over 5,000 bachelors to seek for wives in other states.

BIENNIAL ELECTIONS.

The subject of biennial elections is being agitated by a Boston paper, and its readers are treated daily to lengthy dissertions on the subject, and opinions of correspondents and men in public life. The idea of annual elections is more in accord with the spirit of our institutions. The people are the real sovereigns in this country, the true source of political power. The tendency is to forget this function and neglect its performance. To once a year arouse the latent sense of responsibility is far better for the republic than to allow it to remain dormant for a longer period. It is said that those states that have adopted the biennial and quadrennial periods of official terms have never returned to the old way established by the founders of the nation. The reason for this may be found in the feeling of indifference and indolence with which so many holders of the elective franchise are governed.—[Lynn Item.

MOTH APPROPRIATIONS.

State Auditor Turner has received an estimate of the amount needed for the suppression of gyspy and brown tail moths the figure being $98,333 34, which is the amount allowed to the moth commission under the law. Accompanying his estimation, however, Superintendent Kirkland has sent to the auditor a statement that "an additional appropriation of $225,000 will be needed for the suppression of the gypsy and brown tail moths during the year 1907."

Congressman Roberts has announced that at the opening of the next session of congress he will introduce a bill asking for an appropriation of $100,000 to continue the fight against the spread of the gypsy and brown tail moths.

Dr. L. O. Howard, entomologist of the department of agriculture, it is stated, favors an appropriation of not less than $150,000 and it is reported that the secretary of agriculture will endorse his recommendation.

McCALL'S CHAIRMANSHIP.

Representative Samuel W. McCall, will be promoted to the chairmanship of an important committee—his first chairmanship—at the beginning of the 60th Congress. Representative McCleary, of Minnesota, chairman of the committee on library, went down to defeat in the recent election on his high tariff platform, and Mr. McCall, the ranking Republican, will move up a peg.

The committee room to which Mr. McCall will fall heir is a comfortable corner on the first floor of the capitol immediately below the speaker's room.

Your stomach churns and digests the food you eat and if foul, or torpid, or out of order, your whole system suffers from blood poison. Hollister's RockyMountain Tea keeps you well. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. A. B. Grover.

WILL ATTACK RATE BILL.

The rate bill is going to be the subject of some pretty elaborate attacks at the new session of congress and fairly strenuous attempts will be made to amend it and change it materially. Cong. McCall, who voted against it last year, is still understood to be set in his opinion that it is not a good measure, and he is being depended on to lead part of the campaign.

It is true that the rate bill demands a large amount of information from the railroads, but it remains to be proved that the information is of any special value. It would take years for the Commission to go through the reports and the digesting of them would be almost an impossibility. There is also a very decided call for some change in the various pass sections of the bill. The pass provision was the most ridiculous of all in this strange document and it has made trouble. Only recently the Massachusetts Press Association sought to have corrected the rulings which forbade them exchanging their space for transportation, and they were turned down on it. Now it is understood that the up-state newspapers in New York are uniting in a movement to bring about changes from the actual hardships which it has imposed on them, and it may be that they will be able to accomplish something out of it. Some of the republican party leaders are not altogether certain that the measure as a whole is going to be a good one for the party. The trouble will be to show what they have accomplished under it when the democrats begin the attack. It can be made a club, almost either way, in a national campaign, and the republicans declare that for actual reforms it is next to useless, and that is what makes them particularly fearful about it.—[Practical Politics.

GRADE CROSSING ELIMINATION EXPENDITURES.

From official figures just compiled it is shown that the expenditures on account of the elimination of grade crossings, since the act provided for their abolition was passed, amounts to $26,963,722. The outlay on this account for the present year is $2,753,395.

Of the grand total expended since 1890 for grade crossing abolition, the railroads' share has been $16,298,296, and the commonwealth's share $7,109,109, while the cities and towns have paid $3,578,177.

Grade crossing work this year has been going at 20 different points, as follows: Attleboro, Boston, Cambridge, East Boston, Fall River, Haverhill, Lee, Lenox, Middleboro, Natick, Newton, Northampton, Springfield, Stockbridge, Walpole and Westfield. The more important of these undertakings are at East Boston, where the work is rapidly drawing toward completion; Attleboro, where it is practically completed, and at Dudley street, where it has just begun.

The expenditure of other millions is being provided for and a number of the contemplated undertakings will rank with that with the Forest Hills, the Brockton and the Fall River improvements. These are the reductions of grades at Lynn, Harrison Square and at Taunton.

At the last election in Winchester there was much annoyance because of the ballot box failing to work right. The Cambridge Chronicle also complains because of boxes breaking down and says: "Their failure deprives the voters of one great protection of the purity of the ballot. Does anybody ever study the breaking downs, and find the causes?' Such a simple thing as a counter on a ballot box should cause no trouble from breaking down, as similar devices are in constant use in printing offices and no trouble is experienced.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

All Right In Theory, but Breaks Down In Practice.

Theoretically there is so much in municipal ownership of public utilities that the practical carrying out of its attractive features appears simple and of no serious moment, and for a municipality to take over and run water, lights, sewerage and even transportation appeals to taxpayers, and the trade is made without the first assurance that the conduct of these properties will be along practical and business lines.

It is the failure to assure the practical that works the evil, for municipal ownership is a general ownership, and a general ownership results too easily in its being no special business of any citizen or taxpayer to look into or inquire after the conduct of the properties under control. This leaves the management to a few, who soon find that they have only themselves to account to, that people are too busy to demand accountings and taxpayers accept any kind of report, just so there is the appearance of all being right and light, water, sewerage, etc., are given.

It is this indifference and neglect on the part of taxpayers to take note of municipal affairs which make municipal ownership of public utilities a hazardous and expensive matter. The theory of municipal ownership, with its great saving to each taxpayer, the extra service given and the great profits resulting, can all be placed in figures beforehand, but it is a failure unless the taxpayers shall give earnest and serious heed to the conduct of these public utilities, for unless this is done they will wake up some day with broken down properties and a big bond issue to make good.—Newbern Weekly Journal.

THE GREAT TRANSITION.

Public Property Wasted Because "It Costs Nothing, You Know."

"Hello!" said I. "What's that?" And I stopped to pick it up.

"That?" replied the boy who happened to be passing through the school yard with me. "That is nothing but a lead pencil."

"But it is a whole one," said I, "and with a rubber on the end."

"I know it," said the boy.

"What! Do you mean to tell me that you have seen this here before?"

"Yes, everybody's seen it."

"All the children in your school have seen this lying here day after day and not one boy has picked it up?"

"Of course. What should we pick it up for? There's plenty in the schoolhouse. The town buys 'em."

And I had been given a text for a long meditation. Not pick up a whole new lead pencil? And a pencil with a rubber on it!

When I was a boy we prized even slate pencils. A boy who hooked anybody's slate pencil was baited until he gave it up, but a lead pencil—we fought for lead pencils as the Greeks and Trojans fought for Helen. We scoured the countryside for old horseshoes to sell to the blacksmith for money enough to buy a lead pencil, and, having it, we cut our private mark on it, guarded it, kept it as our last resource in trade. Many a time a precious two inch lead pencil has turned an important jackknife trade one way or the other. I never had but one lead pencil at a time and very often hardly that until I was fifteen years old. And these ten-year-olds scorn to pick up a whole one with a rubber! Think of it! The best eraser I had was a piece of rubber boot heel!—Henry T. Bailey in Journal of Education.

Carelessness, Not Graft.

At a local government board inquiry held at West Ham, London, to sanction the borrowing by the corporation of £62,300 for electricity extensions it was stated that the electrical undertaking up to the present had resulted in a loss of £7,206, which had been charged to the rates. The inspector pointed out that loans of some thousands of pounds had been sanctioned by the board for purchasing various machines, and he found the council again asking for money to buy machinery for which they had already received the cash.—Morning Post.

The movement for municipal ownership in this country is a hunt by the demagogue for a new issue to catch votes.—Melvin O. Adams.

YOUR BEST TROLLEY TRIPS.

"What is the best trolley trip that you have taken over the lines of the Boston & Northern or Old Colony St. Ry. Co.'s?" The best answer to this question propounded by the Passenger Department of these companies will receive a cash prize of $25, the second best a cash prize of $15 and the third best a cash prize of $10. This is the substance of an interesting contest announced in the November issue of the Tri-State Tourist, the monthly publication by this department.

It is stated that it is realized that the nearly 900 miles of track of the two systems pass through some of the most delightful and interesting scenery and historical places in the country and that thousands of people have enjoyed trips through these scenes. The department now asks that they put some of their most interesting experiences on paper.

The department wishes to know which in the popular mind, are generally considered to be the most delightful trips which it is possible to take on these lines, understanding that different people see things differently. This contest will close March 1 and is not to be judged solely on literaty merit. Everybody except employees of these two companies is eligible to enter.

The announcement states that people of trained literary ability will not necessarily have an advantage over those who have not had such experience. It is for the old and young, everybody. The contest offers a chance for the observant, those who can see, appreciate what they see and tell about it in plain, straight forward English. The articles are limited to 1200 words in length. One contestant may enter as many articles as desired. They are to be sent to the Passenger Department of the Boston & Nothern and Old Colony St. Ry. Co.'s at 309 Washington street, Boston. Full particulars as to the details of this contest may be found in the November issue of the Tri-State Tourist, which may be secured on application to the Passenger Department, as well as any other special information concerning it desired.

A DAY OF RECKONING.

You Cannot Fool All of the People All of the Time.

The recent condemnation as unfit for further service of a number of gas and electric light plants and the closing down of some of them at a dead loss to the taxpayers should serve as a warning to other cities, for this is the fate that is likely to overtake all such plants in the long run. For the first year or two, when no expensive repairs are needed and the plant is thoroughly up to date, it ought not to be difficult to make a good showing. For a few years longer the bad bookkeeping and inadequate reports, that are unfortunately the rule rather than the exception, may blind the citizens to the deterioration of the plant and to its increasing losses. But the day of reckoning inevitably comes when breakdown, bad service or demand for new equipment that cannot masquerade as "extensions" causes an investigation, and then it becomes evident that the plant has been a losing proposition almost from the start. No plant should be accepted as evidence of successful municipal management until it has been operated for several years and then examined by expert engineers and accountants.

TRIBUTE TO THE DOG.

The following is a part of an address to a jury in a suit against a man who had shot and killed his neighbor's dog. Senator Vest of Missouri was attorney for plaintiff from whose address to the jury the following is an extract:

"Gentlemen of the Jury: The best friend a man has in this world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son or daughter that he has reared with loving care may prove ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him, perhaps, when he needs it most. A man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-gotten action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees to do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads. The one absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is his dog.

"Gentlemen of the jury, a man's dog stands by him in prosperity and in poverty, in health and in sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground, where the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer, he will lick the wound and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces he is as constant in his love as the sun is in its journey through the heaven. If fortune drives the master forth an outcast, in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him to guard against danger, to fight against danger, to fight against his enemies, and when the last scene comes, and death takes the master, if all other friends pursue their way there by his graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad but open in alert watchfulness faithful and true even unto death."

What Fishing Develops.

To those who are satisfied with a superficial view of the subject it may seem impossible that the diligence and attention necessary to a fisherman's success can leave him any opportunity while fishing to thoughtfully contemplate any matter not related to his purpose. Such a conception of the situation cannot be indorsed for a moment by those of us who are conversant with the mysterious and unaccountable mental phenomena which fishing develops. We know that the true fisherman finds no better time for profitable contemplation and mental exercise than when actually engaged with his angling outfit. It will probably never be possible for us to gather statistics showing the moving sermons, the enchanting poems, the learned arguments and eloquent orations that have been composed or constructed between the bites, strikes or rises of fish. But there can be no doubt that of the many intellectual triumphs won in every walk of life a larger proportion has been actually hooked and landed with a rod and reel by those of the fishing fraternity than have been secured in any one given condition of the nonfishing world. — "Fishing and Shooting Sketches," by Grover Cleveland.

Grade Crossing Hearing.

The special committee on abolition of the grade crossing will give a hearing in the small Town Hall this Saturday evening, Dec. 8, from 4 to 6 p. m., to all persons who have plans to present for the abolition of the grade crossiing.

On Tuesday evening, Dec. 11, at 7 p. m., a public hearing will be held at the same place for the purpose of hearing all persons who have helpful suggestions to make to the committee.

Citizens should show their interest in this most important matter by attending the public hearing of next Tuesday evening.

The STAR Best Advertising Medium.

On the eve of the holiday season we would remind the business men of Winchester that there is no other medium that reaches the purchasing classes of this town so effectively as does the STAR. It goes straight to the homes, in every part of the town, is read by all members of the family and is not thrown at back or front doors in only thickly settled portions of the town or seen blowing about the streets. Furthermore we would remind the merchants who belong to the Improvement Association that the STAR IS SET UP AND PRINTED IN WINCHESTER, and gives employment wholly or in part to about a dozen persons who spend their money here.

Merchants who believe in patronizing home industries should patronize the STAR where the best all round results are to be obtained, and not be bluffed by specious stories that will not stand investigation.

FIRST BAPTIST NOTES.

Special evangelistic services will be held in the Baptist Church today, Sunday and Monday, conducted by the Rev. J. A. McElwain, who for 30 years has been connected with the Clarendon-street Baptist Church, Boston. Mr. McElwain is a very devout, sincere and prayerful man of God, and a forceful preacher of the Gospel. He was with us in a similar series about four years ago, much to our profit and delight. He is accompanied by Miss Ivy T. Pierce, Gospel soloist. The first meeting will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock, followed by another at 4 o'clock, the latter for scholars of the Sunday School. These two services will be followed by preaching service at 7.30 tonight. No meetings willl be held Saturday. But Mr. McElwain will speak at all the services Sunday, and conduct a special meeting for men at 3 o'clock. Every one who attends will receive great help from this fatherly and devout man of God.

On Wednesday afternoon, preparatory to Mr. McElwain's coming, a series of five consecutive half hours of prayer was held from 2.30 to 5 p. m., conducted by Rev. A. L. Winn, A. P. Briggs, F. S. Osgood and the Pastor. These meetings were well attended, and were pervaded by an earnest spirit of prayer. In the evening the largest prayer meeting of the year convened, about 60 being present. The S's assisted.

DOOLEY ON CHRISTMAS.

"Hinnissy, I see be th' pa-aper undher ye'er ar-rm that ye have th' Christmas spirit. Th' poor nearly always have it. Ye can't understand givin' or rayceivin' onless ye undherstand want. If a rich man gives ye a prisint he'd give ye a bar'l iv flour, because he thinks that's what ye want. But it isn't. It's what ye need. What ye want is a stovepipe hat. I'm glad to see ye takin' home a set iv boxin' gloves to Packy. He needs a pair iv shoes, but if ye give him a pair iv shoes on Chris'mas day I'd spurn ye'er acquaintance."

"It costs money," said Mr. Hennessy; "I'm sometimes glad it comes but wanst a year."

"So does Wash'nton's birthday," said Mr. Dooley. "but I niver cud feel th' same about it."—[From the American Magazine.

A JOLLY BIRTHDAY PARTY.

The cold storm of Thursday night, did not prevent twenty-five of Ruth Dunning's friends enjoying a pleasant evening at her grandmother's, Mrs. Charles U. Dunning, 18 Vine street. During the evening refreshments were served, and games of all kinds were played. The guests departed at an early hour, with best wishes for many happy birthdays. The following is a list of those invited to be present: Nellie Platt, Margaret Mason, Annette Symmes, Eunice Homer, Susie Guernsey, Margaret Winn, Cora Mitton, Bertha Adams, Dorothy Armstrong, Ruth Berry, Flora Carter, Mina Hartley, Margaret Murray, Rachael Beal, Almena Cogswell, Lucy Stearns, Clara Purrington, Eleanor Homer, Helen Ordway, Harriet Hendrickson, Doris Goddu, Gladys Partelow, Marion Hazelton.

LYNN BOILER EXPLOSION.

By the explosion of a boiler in the shoe factory of P. J. Harney & Co. of West Lynn yesterday morning, some 21 persons were injured, 7 dwelling houses, five factories and a railroad station were burnt, and some 1000 persons thrown out of work. The loss is estimated at $568,000. It is claimed that the boiler was defective.

The explosion occurred shortly before seven o'clock, and was immediately followed by one of the fiercest conflagrations in the history of the city. Had the catastrophe occurred ten minutes later, when the operatives of the factory were at work, the loss of life would have been enormous.

SAFETY IN ELECTRICITY.

Safety and reliability are among the advantages of electric power. No boiler explosions occur when electricity for power is supplied by the Edison Company. If you have electric power a touch of your switch will give you just the power you need--for all or any part of your plant--convenient, efficient, economical, safe power.

Have you learned to be light-wise?

Our Sales Agent can give you true statements of the cost of electric power as used in all sorts of manufacturing establishments -- tell you of many advantages also. Will you write him, or call, or telephone "Oxford 1150, Collect."

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

The quarterly meeting of the Vestry will be held Tuesday, December 11, at 8 p. m., at the Rector's house.

The Vestry has voted to devote next Sunday morning, December 9th, to a special collection to clear up the amount needed to complete the Organ Fund. This sum is $379.01 and it is believed that the parish will wish to make offerings to cover this comparatively small balance in the total amount of the fund, before the beginning of the new year.

The afternoon of Sunday, December 16, is announced as the time for Infant Baptism. The hour will be 4.15 p. m., and parents intending to bring children at that time are asked to inform the Rector.

There is to be a service of ordination held in our church, Wednesday morning, December 12th. The hour of service will be 10.45 a. m. Mr. Francis L. Beal is to be ordained deacon. Mr. Beal is a resident of this town and has for several years been in charge, as lay-reader, of the mission in Saugus. All are cordially welcome at this service.

There will be the usual five o'clock service on Wednesday.

The Epiphany Club is to hold a meeting Thursday evening, December 20, in Lyceum Hall, at which time it is expected that Mr. Edwin D. Mead and the Rev. Fr. McCormack, St. Joseph's Church, Boston, will address the club. Due announcement of this meeting will be sent, not only to members but to all men in the parish, and it is hoped there will be a large attendance.

The St. Cross Class will meet Monday, December 10th, at 4 p. m. at the Choir Room, at which time announcement will be made in regard to future meetings.

SHERLOCK HOLMES.

The greatest theatrical event of the season at the Castle Square will be the production of "Sherlock Holmes" during the week of December 24. Apropos, the following document is an interesting one. Written personally by William Gillette directly to the Castle Square management, it sets at rest all claims in favor of any other authentic "Sherlock Holmes" play. Writes Mr. Gillette: "The play 'Sherlock Holmes' in which I appeared for four years in the United States and England, and which is to be produced at the Castle Square Theatre, Boston, on December 24th, is an absolutely original drama and cannot be produced or performed without my permission or that of Mr. Charles Froham. It is also the one and only 'Sherlock Holmes' authorized by Conan Doyle."

W. H. S. NOTES.

The game scheduled with Woburn H. S. for last Wednesday afternoon was cancelled Monday, by Woburn. On account of this, Manager Parker was forced to hunt up a team to fill the date, which he did, securing Ballou and Hobigand School.

The first evening basket ball game takes place tonight with Cambridge H. S. in our High School gymnasium, at 8 o'clock.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Naturally everyone in business in the Centre and the property owners there are in favor of the plan of grade crossing abolition that will least interfere with existing conditions. However, as all will have a chance to be heard no harm has been done in the make up of the committee, although it might have been well to have given the business centre representation upon it. If all citizens will study the problem the chance for a mistake will be small, so constitute yourself a committee and have ideas of your own about it and not swallow without careful consideration what some other fellow or fellows say.

The Selectmen have certainly made a departure in planning new work for December, and even if they put in "weather permitting" it hardly fills the bill for satisfactory work either in quality or economy. It would be decidedly better to have a balance March first that seemed too large than to expend it in mid-winter. Several of the side hill streets might be shaped up to prevent washing before spring better than any new work now.

Yes and "people of Winchester" was what Mr. Coolidge said, too, and not the taxpayers, as quoted by Speakers and writers. If they would say property owners there could be no objection to that, but the expression taxpayers as they mean it, is objectionable, although it is frequently used, but not nearly so much as it used to be.

When it comes to changing the grade of the railroad it must have not only the approval of the Special Commission but of the Railroad Commissioners, and therefore the most important point in connection with the Selectmen's plan is the depressing of the tracks, and yet it seems to have been left in the air so far as the feasible extent and the B. & M's feelings are concerned.

The Boston Journal had some interesting interviews with prominent lawyers this week about the great number of cases in the Suffolk County Courts with reasons for the number and suggestions how they might be reduced, but not one of the interviewed stated what he would have privately, namely, that fake street railway cases are responsible for the larger part of the congestion. The bar association has not attempted to do anything about it however.

If it is the President's intention to write a message that few would read he certainly succeeded, as its length even in contemplation is tiresome. With all his good and strong qualities there is a tone that is irritating; he seems to consider himself a ruler giving advice to subjects not over bright, and bringing in things in a fatherly way which might better have been left out.

Deputy Sheriff John E. Tidd, one of the best known officials of Middlesex county, dropped dead at the court house at East Cambridge Tuesday morning. His residence was in Woburn and he was well known in Winchester.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

In making selection of Christmas gifts it would be well to keep in mind that a big variety can be had at Newth's hardware store. They comprise the useful as well as ornamental, and include pocket knives, tool chests and cabinets, skates, hockeys, the latest sleds, razors including the safety, brushes and straps, scissors, knife sets, chafin dishes, fern dishes and in fact so many things suitable for the holidays that it would take a column to enumerate them all. The prices will be found all right.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet Friday, Dec. 14, in the Cong'l Church vestry at 3 p. m. The devotional hour will be led by Mrs. N. F. Colver of Marengo, Ill, who has been an active worker in her own state. We are glad to have her assistance and welcome her most heartily to our meetings while she remains in town. Let all who can show their appreciation by attendance. All are welcome.

A letter from Rev. Charles Pierce, Chaplain of Marine Corps, Washington, D. C., has been received expressing thanks for the small contribution sent to him, also his book of sermons preached at open air services in Washington.

The large party of delegates to World's convention which sailed from Philadelphia Nov. 9, were the recipients of many social courtesies from friends in the Quaker City and in Washington. In the latter place Pres. Roosevelt received them. Mrs. Kaji Yajima, president of Japan W. C. T. U., expressed to the President the deep gratitude of her people for his intervention in the deplorable war between Japan and Russia. Her grand niece, Miss Ochimi Okubo, interpreted for her. Both have been special objects of interest to newspaper representatives in every city they have visited.

DR. LYMAN B. SPERRY WILL SPEAK.

The Boston Young Men's Christian Association has secured Dr. Lyman B. Sperry of Oblerlin, Ohio, to address the mass meeting for men in Tremont Temple next Sunday afternoon at 3 30 p. m. Dr. Sperry is to speak on the subject, "The Significance of Sex." He is perhaps the best known man on the platform today considering the particular subjects that he has chosen for his various addresses and to the men of almost every large city in the United States his name has become a familiar one. The doors will be open at 3 p. m. Nearly 15,000 men have attended the last five meeting in Tremont Temple.

PUFFER MANUFACTURING CO.

This company which has acquired the large factory of the United Shoe Machinery Co. in this town offer for public subscription $250,000 cumulative six per cent. preferred stock—being 2500 shares at par value, $100 per share, preferred both as to principal and dividends.

There is at the present time common stock outstanding to the amount of $300,000. None of this stock is for sale.

The Puffer Manufacturing Company has hitherto been a close corporation. The entire existing common stock is owned by five of the Messrs. Puffer, who are all actively engaged in the management and direction of the business. Their manufactures consist at present of soda water apparatus, carbonators, and the principal accessories of the Soda Water trade; but it is now intended to branch out into other kindred lines and with this view the Company has this year largely increased their manufacturing plant. Additional capital is required to develop the business along the lines indicated, and it has been decided by the management to make this issue of preferred stock, in order to obtain the same.

The Messrs. Puffer have been for the past three generations engaged solely in the manufacture of Soda Water Machinery, and have built up an extensive and highly profitable business. The individual members of the Company have devoted their entire and undivided time, energy, and attention to the interests involved, and have succeeded in placing their manufacturers in the front rank. The management has been conducted economically, and the officers of the Company draw only moderate salaries, the surplus earnings having been chiefly expended in the improvement and development of the business.

The preferred stock now offered is guaranteed six per cent. but will participate with the common stock up to eight per cent. should that dividend be earned and declared.

As the common stock is held only by the Messrs. Puffer, they can receive no dividends on their holdings until the full guaranteed dividends are paid on the preferred stock.

The President and the Treasurer of this Corporotion have had upward of thirty-five years experience in the manufacture of Soda Water Machinery, and they wish to state that the demand for their product is greater at the present time than ever before.

The yearly profits of the Corporation are, and have been since its incorporation, sufficient to pay the preferred dividend many times over, but as already intimated, they have been allowed to remain in the treasury as an asset, or have been used in the necessary and legitimate development of the business.

Manufacturing plant, Winchester, Mass. The largest plant in this line. Upward of three acres floor room, modern equipment. About fifteen acres of land. For further information, address, The Puffer Manufacturing Co., 44-48 Portland street, Boston.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Few merrier plays have been written than Cousin Kate which is to be the attraction at the Castle Square Theatre next week. First played in this country by Ethel Barrymore it was an instant success by its delicious comedy, its quaint characteristics and is piquant scenes, and many have been the applications for its revival at the Castle Square. Its plot tells a sprightly romance and love story, and there is not a movement in its three acts when the audience can lose its interest or refrain from gentle smiles and hearty laughter. The title role will be played by Miss Thais Lawton with Mr. Hansel and the other Castle Square players in the leading characters. The following week will bring a revival of Sheridan's famous old English comedy, "The Rivals," and during Christmas, as the long expected production of William Gillette's Sherlock Holmes will be given.

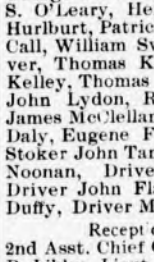

APPRECIATE INTEREST.

The directors of the Home for Aged People in Winchester heartily appreciate the interest shown by the townspeople in in its weltare and gratefully acknowledge the generous contributions recently made in the Congregational and Unitarian churches for the benefit of the Home.

The collection at the Congregational Church on Old People's Sunday amounted to $183 22. Of the contributions made at the Union services held in the Unitarian church Sunday evening Nov. 25, and on Thanksgiving morning, the Home has received one half, viz.: $31.12, the Visiting Nurse Association receiving an equal share.

The Mysterious Bird of Mont Pelee

By MARION E. CROSSKILL

Copyright, 1906, by Marion E. Crosskill

IN the fall of 1901 Tom McLaren sailed from New Orleans on board a vessel bound for Rio Janeiro. He shipped as second mate, with every prospect in the world of promotion.

We were to be married on his return, and the last words he said to me before he jumped on board the Kitty Kelly the morning he sailed were, "The next time I go away, Lucy, I'll be leaving my wife behind instead of my sweetheart."

The Kitty Kelly was expected to return to New Orleans in five months, but the five months lengthened themselves out into seven, and still no tidings of the vessel had been received since she had left Rio on her return trip, and as the rays passed the anxiety began to wear on me in spite of my efforts to keep my courage up.

Ever since my childhood I had heard of an old negro sorceress who lived in a lonely spot some distance outside of the city and who was said to possess wonderful powers of divination and prophecy.

I found myself listening to black Sarah's account of how this old woman told them where little Sam Lathrop was after he had been kidnaped, and they found him exactly as she said.

Driven now by anxiety and fear to seek out any possible source of comfort or advice, I at last decided to go to the old woman.

I found some difficulty in following the rough, ill defined path which had been indicated by old Sarah, but after much trouble I at last succeeded in reaching the little hut, half hidden in a clump of magnolia trees. As I approached it the door opened, and a woman stood in the doorway.

I started in surprise. I had expected to see a little wrinkled form, bent with age, for the negress must be old, very old. Nobody remembered the time when she had not been called "the old woman over the hill."

Instead of being small and bent with age I found myself gazing with a feeling almost of awe at a large, erect and well proportioned figure with a fearless, somewhat commanding air. Her skin was a smooth ebony black. Her features were peculiar. Instead of the thick lips one always associates with the race hers were thin. Her nose was straight and well shaped, the nostrils spreading very slightly. Her eyes were large and prominent, showing a great deal of the white, which gave them a strange, wild look. She had a fashion of narrowing them sometimes, like a near sighted person, and at these times it seemed as if their owner were looking out at you from another world. So clear cut were her features and so straight, strong and well poised her figure that I could think of nothing which she might be so fitly compared to as a statue of black marble. This effect was heightened by her dress. She wore a queer one piece garment of some coarse black material, and a colored handkerchief was twisted about her head.

I had not recovered from my surprise at her appearance when she spoke, and her voice startled me as much as her looks. It was not the voice nor the speech of the negro. The tones were deep and resonant, without a touch of the soft accent of the race. There was instead something foreign in their sound.

"For what have you come?" she asked, narrowing her eyes and looking at me intently.

I explained my errand as I followed her into the hut. She pushed a chair for me, while she stood at a little distance, regarding me intently.

After a minute she said:

"You want to know about—yes, yes, but I may have to go a long distance to find him, and you must sit where you are and not stir."

She turned to leave the room. On reaching the door she stopped, and, looking me through and through once more, she said:

"Remember, no matter how long I am gone, you must not leave your seat or I can't tell what will happen."

I waited a long time, so long that I began to fear dark would overtake me before I could get home, and there was a storm coming.

As I sat looking about me my eye rested on a little window, consisting of two small panes of glass, high up in the wall at the farther end of the room. This window evidently gave light to some other room. But, no: there was no door except the one by which I had entered, and the woman's bed stood in a corner. The window must be one looking outdoors, though it did not seem to admit any light. I sat looking at it for some time, and as I looked it struck me as odd that there should be a curtain on the outside of the window. This curtain consisted evidently of a piece of calico or some material about that thickness.

I remembered her injunction not to leave my seat, but curiosity at last gained the mastery. After I had sat a little while longer, wondering and speculating about this curious little window, I arose and tiptoed across the room toward it.

I tried to peer through the curtain, but it was too thick. I could see nothing. I examined the sides. They were close and admitted no glimpse of what was beyond. The top was above an ordinary person's reach; but, being tall and supple, I could, by clinging to a peg on the wall and raising myself on tiptoe, bring my eyes to a level with the top of the window, where the curtain sagged slightly, leaving a narrow crack. Peering through this crack, I found myself looking into another room, a small room, so dimly lighted that at first I could scarcely make it out. After a minute, however, as my eyes grew accustomed to the darkness, I saw a long, narrow apartment, evidently a strip partitioned off the end of the cabin and running all the way across it. The floor was covered with some sort of carpeting and rug. I could hardly make out what, and, stretched full length upon it, was a naked form.

I drew back for a moment in terror; then, regaining courage, I once more placed my eye to the window. This time I could see more clearly. The form was that of the negress. Her black body was stretched rigid, motionless, upon the floor. For a moment I gazed at her with a strange terror creeping over me and then again withdrew my eye from the window. As I did so a muffled shriek, a cry of terror, reached my ear from somewhere out of sight. I went hastily to the door and, opening it, looked out. There was no one about. The voice had come apparently from the clouds. Could it possibly have been the wind, which was blowing hard now? No; I felt positive it was not.

It had suddenly grown darker. Stormy looking piles of clouds loomed up on the horizon, and the rain had begun to fall. I made up my mind to leave the hut and go home as quickly as possible, but anxiety to hear what the woman might tell me concerning Tom, after having come so far and waited so long, made me turn back into the cabin, close the door softly and slip into my seat again.

In a minute the door opened, and the negress entered. Her piercing black eyes looked so wild that my fright returned, and I heartily wished myself safe out of the place. Her clothes seemed to be tossed about, as though she had been out in the wind, but save for a drop or two of rain she was not wet, so it was impossible that she could have come far. Again the sight of her naked form, stretched only a few feet from where I sat, rose up before me, and I felt the creeps go up my spine.

"You disobeyed me," she said, coming quickly toward me. Her look, voice and manner betrayed great agitation.

"Your disobedience nearly cost me my life," she continued. "Why did you leave your seat? If you had not taken your eye from that window just when you did I should have been killed."

"I am so sorry," I began, but she continued, without appearing to hear me:

"I had to go a long distance to find him—a long distance—and I am tired, for dangers beset me. But I found your lover. He is safe and well on board a vessel becalmed in the Caribbean sea."

"His vessel, the Kitty Kelly?" I cried.

"No; not his vessel. That was wrecked off the coast of Trinidad. You will see him soon if he escapes the fiery mount."

"The fiery mount?" I echoed.

"Yes. Danger awaits him. It is near, very near. If you do not hear from him within the month you will know that he is dead."

"Can nothing be done to save him?" I cried.

The woman looked at me in silence for a moment and then said:

"Nothing, unless I again risk my life."

"But I will not disobey you again," I said earnestly.

"It will not depend on you this time," she returned.

"I will pay you whatever you ask; only save him." I found myself trusting implicitly this woman whom I had not before believed in.

The negress gave me a strange look and said, "Go home and wait."

I would have ordered her further, but she waved her hand.

"Go now. I am worn," she said wearily, and, passing her hand over her forehead she sank down on a rough seat beside the table with the air of one who had been through a great struggle.

I took from my pocket the purse which I had brought with me, and, laying it on the table beside the woman, I said softly:

"I am sorry I disobeyed you. I will know better another time." Then I turned and went out of the cabin and, setting my face toward the town, walked as fast as wind and rain would permit.

This eventful visit to the seeress was made on May 4, and nearly a month had passed when I received a letter from Tom.

He had had many adventures, he wrote, and had passed through many perils, concerning which I should hear on his return. The letter was followed in a few weeks by Tom himself, alive and well and looking as brown and rugged as a sailor should, and I listened with excited interest while he recounted all that had befallen him since sailing from New Orleans.

"On leaving the Bahamas," he said, "we proceeded to Rio Janeiro and discharged our cargo. We intended to touch at Trinidad on the return voyage. We, however, encountered storms, and our vessel was wrecked within sight of the island. All on board were saved. I had the good luck to fall in with a vessel bound for Santo Domingo. From there I was in hopes of finding a berth on some northward bound vessel.

"I was to have more adventures, however. During the voyage we were driven by adverse winds far out of our course and lay for a long time becalmed in the Caribbean sea, not far from the island of Martinique.

"One day, as the vessel lay in a sea so calm that it resembled a great mirror, suddenly, from nowhere apparently, there appeared directly over the mainmast of the vessel a huge black bird. It was not like any bird I had ever seen in the tropics, nor anywhere else, in fact. Its large head resembled that of an owl, and the body was almost like an eagle's, except that it was black as a raven.

"I was not the only one who saw the bird, and in an instant a sailor came running with a gun in his hand. But the others begged him not to shoot.

"'It will bring bad luck to the ship,' they cried. 'Put up the gun.'

"I was not superstitious, however, and, seizing the rifle from the sailor, who stood irresolute, I raised the muzzle and took aim at the bird.

"But now a strange thing happened. Just as I was about to pull the trigger the bird disappeared. Nor did it fly away, but, poised in midair over the ship, it vanished as it had come—on the instant.

"I lowered the gun, blinked my eyes and looked about me.

"'Did you see that?' I asked, turning to the sailor who had brought the gun.

"'Blow me!' he said. 'Where did it go to?'

"Then I looked around at the others, all of whom had seen the thing.

"'I told you so,' repeated first one, then another. 'It is lucky you did not shoot. No good would come to the ship.'

"By this time the captain was on the scene with his glasses and carefully scanning the sky, but no bird could be seen. It all happened in a minute, and I can hardly believe to this day that it was not a dream."

"What date was that, Tom?" I asked eagerly.

"May 4. I remember it well, because that night a breeze sprang up, and we made the island of Martinique before daybreak.

"The second night we lay in St. Pierre. At about the middle watch I was awakened by a sound as of some one moving about the cabin. At first I was going to call out, but before I had time to open my mouth a strange light began to glow around me, and suddenly the side of the ship seemed to open, and I saw Mont Pelee a seething mass of flame, which shot upward to the skies. As I gazed at the sight the same rustling noise which I had first heard again fell on my ears, and the strange black bird that had appeared above the ship two days before swooped down, spreading its huge body and wings between me and the scene. It was nearer now, and its head, I could have sworn, was the head of a human being, with a look of unmistakable warning in its eyes. As I raised my hand, with a cry of alarm, it disappeared, and I found myself sitting up in my berth staring wildly at the wall of my cabin, where a moment ago Pelee had shot forth flame and smoke.

"Only a dream? Yes, of course. But the strangest part of it has to come. The next day there was a consultation as to whether we should remain in harbor another day or sail at once. The vision of the previous night rose up before me, and I felt relieved when it was decided to set sail right away. Some delays occurred, however, and finally we sailed out of St. Pierre a few minutes before 8 o'clock on the 8th of May. I shall never forget that day as long as I live. We were just barely out of the harbor when a terrible thing happened. The most terrific noise I ever heard in my life sounded from Mont Pelee. I could think of nothing but the crack of doom. It seemed as if it must be heard around the world. Every eye was turned toward the volcano, which for some time had been sending out ashes and cinders. As I looked toward it a great volume of black vapor rose from the crater. This was filled with sparks, like electricity. Then a sheet of flame like a huge blast furnace rose heavenward. I think the whole mountain must have blown up. Again my vision of the flaming mount and the great black bird rose in my mind, but now neither body nor wings of bird, beast or spirit hovered between my eyes and the terrible sight. This time it was no dream, but a fearful reality.

"In another minute the air about us was filled with choking vapors. Ashes and dust rained upon the deck of the vessel, which rocked in a tidal wave.

"When we reached Santo Domingo we heard that St. Pierre was totally blotted out, and I shuddered at the doom from which we had escaped."

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention this paper and don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

Home of Swamp-Root.

Simplified.

It is said of a noted Virginia judge that in a pinch he always came out ahead. An incident of his childhood might go to prove this.

"Well, Benny," said his father when the lad had been going to school about a month, "what did you learn today?"

"About the mouse, father."

"Spell mouse."

After a little pause Benny answered: "Father, I don't believe it was a mouse after all. It was a rat."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Sweet Girl's Way.

After a girl has worked for six months to get a young man, lying awake nights to think up new schemes of fascination, it is amazing to witness the coolness with which she can look up into his eyes after he has finally proposed and murmur tenderly, "You hypnotist!"—Somerville Journal.

The Burglar's Jimmy.

Why does the burglar call the tool with which he opens windows and doors a "jimmy?" No one seems to be sure. Perhaps it is merely a pet name. The French burglar calls his jimmy "Frere Jacques," which is first cousin to "Jimmy."

HOW TO SHOW A PROFIT.

Tricky Bookkeeping Puts Losses on the Profit Side.

The printed report of a municipal electric light plant in Indiana has just been received. It shows a profit. There is no question about it. It shows a large profit. The figures are there in black and white, and they show a profit equivalent to 30 per cent of the gross income and 18 per cent on the capital invested. That is what we call a profitable business.

How was this plant able to make so good a showing? In a way so simple that any municipal plant could adopt it with success if its superintendent were good at figures. And the best of it is that it makes competition by private plants impossible because—well, stockholders are too inquisitive.

In the first place the fixed charges for interest on the capital invested and for depreciation were entirely ignored. Then no allowance was made for taxes lost by having municipal instead of private ownership. Next, while full charge was made against the water department and the city offices for lights and supplies, the superintendent conveniently forgot to charge the lighting plant with the water used in its boilers and condensers or with its share of the salaries in the city accounting department. Insurance was also overlooked. Finally, to make assurance of profit doubly sure, a number of items properly pertaining to maintenance were charged to "new construction." At the same time the charge for street and public building lights was quite as high as in surrounding cities served by private companies, which had somehow or other to provide for all these omitted items.

It is perhaps needless to add that except for the judicious way in which the superintendent prepared his report a considerable deficit would have appeared instead of the gratifying profits. Of course the taxpayers will have to provide the money to make good these paper profits, but they may not for some years see the connection between their profitable plant and the higher tax rate, and meanwhile are happy in the contemplation of its profits and will doubtless testify enthusiastically to the benefits of municipal ownership.

From the above we may deduce the following rule for showing a profit: First, omit all items of expense that can without too much danger of detection be saddled upon the general tax list or other departments; second, charge in as vague a way as possible to new construction as many items of maintenance as may be necessary to show a large profit. (N. B.—The profit must be large to provide for the contingency of some carping critic discovering one or more of the concealed items of expense and ruthlessly drawing them forth from their hiding places.)

If the above rule is scrupulously followed there seems to be no reason why every municipal plant should not show a profit.—"Concerning Municipal Ownership."

GONE OUT OF BUSINESS.

Millions Sunk In Unsuccessful Municipal Lighting Plants.

During the past few years at least sixty cities and towns in the United States have sold, leased or abandoned their lighting plants. In a few cases they still retain their distributing system, buying the current from some company, but in most instances they have gone out of the business entirely. A number of other places have made unsuccessful efforts to dispose of their plants.

As with few exceptions municipal lighting plants have been in operation but a short time, this is a remarkable showing of failure and one, it need hardly be said, that is sedulously avoided by those who for ends of their own are urging other cities to make similar experiments.

As it usually takes some years for a city to realize how great a burden it is carrying in its lighting plant, it is probable that the number of admitted failures will increase rapidly from now on, for, as an eminent electrical engineer recently said, "There are already indications that a considerable number of these municipalities which have engaged in improper undertakings are entering upon a period of financial difficulty."

Faults Enough as It Is.

The political machine that dominates New York city is strong because large powers are delegated to it, and the expenditure of $100,000,000 is given absolutely into its keeping. We have faults enough without municipal ownership in most of the cities of this country, and the ordinary business man fails to see the wisdom of making the situation more complex and dubious than it is by adding the problem of municipal ownership with all that it implies.—Binghamton Herald.

"If."

"Municipal ownership," remarks the Winnipeg Free Press, "should not be discredited because of its tendency to increase municipal debt, provided the new enterprises are made to be fully self sustaining." Neither is dynamite dangerous if carefully handled. It is just about as safe to intrust the management of a municipalized service to the average municipal council as it would be to engage a seven-year-old boy to handle dynamite.—Montreal Gazette.

Who Would Fine the City?

An exchange notes the fact that a city council recently fined a water company $1,000 for supplying impure and unwholesome water. That is right. But if the waterworks had been owned by the city—

Mother Goose.

The most popular children's book ever written was "Mother Goose's Melodies." Mrs. Goose, or Mother Goose, as she was familiarly called, was the mother-in-law of Thomas Fleet, a Boston printer early in the century. When his first child was born his mother-in-law devoted all her attention to the baby and, it is said, greatly annoyed Fleet by her persistent and not particularly musical chanting of the old English ditties she had heard in her childhood. The idea occurred to Fleet of writing down these songs and publishing them in book form. The oldest extant copy bears the date of 1719. The price marked on the title page was "two coppers." This account of the origin of Mother Goose is discredited by some critics, who declare that in 1697 Perrault published "Contes de ma Mere l'Oye," or "Stories of Mother Goose." The name Mother Goose was familiar in French folklore, being used by writers of this literature over a century before the time of Perrault.

The Status of a Meteorite.

A meteorite fell on a Vermont farm in 1856. It was a valuable meteorite, and the landlord at once stepped up and claimed it. "All minerals and metals on the land belong to me," he said. "That's in the lease."

But the tenant demurred. "This meteorite," he said, "wasn't on the farm, you must remember, when the lease was drawn up."

The landlord perceived the justice of that claim. He thought a moment. Then he said decisively, "I claim her as flying game."

But the tenant was ready for him. "She's got neither wings nor feathers," he said. "Therefore, as ground game, she's mine."

They continued their argument, and in the heat of it a revenue officer, arriving with a truck, proceeded to put the meteorite aboard. "I claim her for the government," he said, "as an article introduced into the country without payment of duty."

A Hotel Experience.

One fashionable hotel on Fifth avenue refuses to give any receipt for jewelry deposited in its safe or hold itself responsible for a greater amount than $250. Its explanation of this rule is based on an experience which seems excuse enough. Two guests of the hotel kept their valuables and money in the safe. They left them there when they went abroad, sometimes to stay for six months. Once the wife came back alone and drew out all the money and valuables. As she had often done so before the clerks gave the box to her as a matter of course. It was not until her husband had returned and wanted the same valuables that the hotel knew of their divorce. The husband brought suit and recovered all he claimed. Since that result of its confidence in its guests the hotel has limited its responsibility to $250.—New York Sun.

A Cholera Belt.

"The cholera belt," said a pale Anglo Indian, "is not an imaginary girdle, like your pie belt, but a real girdle, which every foreign resident of India wears day and night. In winter the belt is made of heavy wool. In the summer it is made of light wool. It is never taken off. Even when you are sleeping in a temperature of 105 degrees, tossing and moaning and perspiring, despite the punkah that fans you from above, you still keep on your cholera belt, no matter what else you shed. Every Anglo-Indian has a couple of dozen cholera belts. They are said to prevent cholera, and I have no doubt they do so. At any rate, I never heard of any wearer of a cholera belt whom cholera ever seized upon."

The Light That Failed.

It was by an accident that Mr. Kipling got his famous title, "The Light That Failed." He had almost decided to call the novel "The Failure," although he was dissatisfied with this. One evening as he was sitting in his study reading by lamplight the light went suddenly down—almost failed, in fact. In a second Kipling jumped up, exclaiming excitedly, "By Jove, I've got it!" Pointing to the lamp, he said, "The Light That Failed."—London Standard.

The Man Fish.

Mathew Buchinger, mentioned in old English wonder books as the "man fish," was the most remarkable monstrosity of his time. He had neither hands, arms, feet nor legs. From his shoulders grew two finlike excrescences, and along his back there were several rows of scales. He had the lidless eyes characteristic of the fish species and a queer puckered mouth and no ears.

The Two Garricks.

George Garrick, brother of the celebrated David, was the latter's most devoted slave and laborious pack horse. On coming behind the scene he usually inquired, "Has David wanted me?" It being asked once how George came to die so soon after the demise of his famous brother, a wag replied, "David wanted him."

Love and Dyspepsia.

Young Wife (sobbing)—I am afraid, Karl, you have forgotten what the Herr Pastor said so beautifully at our wedding—how love believes anything, suffers anything— Young Husband—Oh, no; I haven't, but I didn't hear him say that love can eat anything.—Fliegende Blatter.

Self Made Man.

A rich financier said to one of our confreres who has more wit than wealth, "When I began business, sir, I had nothing."

"But those with whom you did business had something."—Independance Roumaine.

Wednesday the High school first team opened its season by defeating the strong Ballou and Hobigand school team in the W. H. S. gymnasium. The game was exceedingly close throughout. The score at end of the first half stood 17 to 11 and at the end of the game 30 to 23. The team play of both teams was ragged and the men were bunched most of the time. The team play of the High school at times, however, showed that with more practice the team would work as one man. Ballou and Hobigand played better individually. Capt. Webber, Collins, and Larive put up a good game for the High school, while Quinn played the best for Ballou and Hobigand.

BURGLARY SUNDAY EVENING.

Last Sunday evening between five and eight o'clock the residence of Mr. Gurden E. Fuller on Mt. Pleasant street was entered by thieves during the absence of the family and about $300 in jewelry and silver taken. The family left the house at about five o'clock, and it is thought that the thieves first rang the door bell to ascertain if anyone was at home. Receiving no answer, a side window was raised, a small plant stand removed from in front of it, and the entrance made. The window was forced with a jimmy.

The entire house was ransacked from attic to cellar. A bag which had been placed in the back of an upstairs closet, containing documents, was found on the sideboard packed with silver, the return of the family evidently surprising the burglars. Mr. Fuller's revolver was also found, and from indications it would seem that the men had carried it with them from room to room. The police are working on the case.

THE LATE DR. RUST.

In writing of the late Dr. Charles Manning Rust, who recently passed away, the Cambridge Chronicle says:

"Dr. Rust was born in Richmond, Va., but came to this city when quite young with some of his father's family. After graduation from the high school he entered the employ of his relative, the late J. M. S. Williams, of the well-known shipping firm of Glidden and Williams. Later he began the study of medicine, to which profession he was to devote the rest of his life. In the spring of 1864 he enlisted in one of the Cambridge companies with Moses A. Wood, formerly of this city, whose sister Mary he soon afterward married. For over 30 years Dr. Rust resided in Winchester and was well known as a physician both in this town and in Boston. Dr. Rust's father was a Virginian slave holder and was married three times, his third wife being the sister of Gen. Samuel E. Chamberlain, formerly of this city."

GRADE CROSSING COMMITTEE MEET.

The special commmittee appointed by the town to decide on some plan for the abolition of the grade crossing and to report at the adjourned town meeting to be held on the 17th, met at the centre last Saturday afternoon and on the ground looked over the several plans thus far presented. The Committee spent some two hours in the biting cold looking into the different propositions, after which they went to the small Town Hall for the purpose of receiving other plans that might be presented. Tax Collector Bell was the only one to offer a new solution of the problem and his presentation consisted of iron roller gates. Mr. Bell was called to the front and explained to the committee his rough draft of the workings of the proposed gates. After waiting a while for further plans and none forthcoming, the committee adjourned to the Selectmen's room and went into executive session.

It hardly seems possible that the committee will be able to report at the town meeting next Monday evening.

PUBLIC HEARING.

The committee gave a public hearing Tuesday evening in the small Town Hall for the purpose of getting an expression from the citizens on the plans that are now before them for adoption. Thirteen members of the committee were present, while about the same number of citizens were in attendance—showing an unusual lack of interest on the part of the citizens. Mr. Charles T. Main, chairman of the committee, presided.

Geo. L. Huntress, Esq., was the first speaker. He announced on taking the floor that he appeared for no one but himself, and that he had no personal interest in the plans and was not even acqnainted with the gentlemen who had submitted them, but was present as an interested citizen who had been a resident of the town for the past twenty-one years. He was opposed to the Vinal plans, first because of the bridges, which he had strong objections to, and which should be avoided in the elimination of the crossing if possible. Again he objected to cutting off Main, Church and Pleasant streets, highways that had been established for years. Mr. Huntress believed that a subway for foot passengers under the present crossing would become a nuisance and a danger to all who used it. To close up the present centre, he claimed, would tend toward a separation of the people of the east and west sides of the town—a thing to be avoided. Real estate would be greatly damaged, and owners of property could not recover one cent. There was only one thing to be said in favor of the Vinal plan and that was the expense, and yet with the two bridges it would cost fully as much as it would to raise the land about the crossing. In speaking of the Guild plan, he said that after it was carried out it left the centre practically as it is today. Suppose it did cost $100,000 or $200,000 more than the Vinal plan, it was well worth it, and he hoped the committee would adopt it. Mr. Huntress was much opposed to hastening the matter, and hoped the committee would take all the time necessary, secure estimates from competent engineers on the cost of both plans, and if the Guild plan should be found to cost even $200,000 more than the other, which he doubted, he believed the committee would find that it was well worth the extra money.

Mr. John H. Carter agreed with all that Mr. Huntress had said. He was opposed to placing the station at the crossing because there was not room enough there for it. There was only two ways of abolishing the crossing, he said, either by raising the tracks or raising the street over the railroad. Some time ago an engineer of the B. & M. told him the limit to which the tracks could be depressed was three feet, and this is one of the most important questions that will come up in connection with the Guild plan.

Mr. Henry F. Johnson said that the town should not count on paying merely 10 per cent. of the expense but 40 or even 50 per cent. Owing to the heavy town expenses, he hoped the abolition of the crossing would be put off as long as possible. Erect a fence between the tracks and have suitable gates to keep the people off the railroad, and he believed the question would be settled for many years. When the crossing is abolished it will have to be done by raising the centre, and he urged the committee to insist on a three per cent grade even if it did cost more, as it is to last for all time.

He advocated throwing the matter onto the grade crossing commissioners for a settlement.

No one else desiring to speak, the hearing was brought to a close shortly after half past eight.

MISS MAXWELL ENGAGED.

At a luncheon given by Miss Beatrice Whittemore at her home on Naples road, Brookline, Friday, the engagement was announced of Miss Virginia Maxwell to Mr. John M. Brooks of Boston. Miss Maxwell who is an especially attractive young woman and a well known writer is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Maxwell of this town.

CALUMET CLUB BOWLING TOURNAMENT.

Team 12 held its own on Thursday night by taking the odd point in its game with team 6, thus placing it well up in the bunch. The handicap of 41 pins helped some in the game, it winning the total by one point. Capt. Caldwell of team 6 was high man for the match.

PRAISE FOR MR. CLARKE.

Banquet for President of the County Gas Co.

Wednesday night the banquet hall of the Bay State hotel at Springfield rang with the praises of Alfred Clarke of Winchesrer, president of the Worcester County Gas Co., which has just completed a 40-mile high pressure gas main between Worcester and Palmer, which latter town for the first time in its history is now being lighted by gas.

The occasion was a complimentary dinner tendered Mr. Clarke by the Massachusetts lighting companies of Boston, with which the Worcester county company is affiliated.

Gathered about the banquet board were the representative men of the towns along the line of the new gas main which has its central point in Spencer, and at the close of the feast most of the men present were called on for speeches.

As soon as the coffee was served and the cigars had been passed, Arthur E. Childs, president of the Massachusetts lighting companies, who acted as toastmaster, made the address of welcome.

The toastmaster then called on Mr. Clarke to address those present. Mr. Clarke said in part:—

"Mr. President and gentlemen: When I first appeared to you, gentlemen, and the rest of those in the various towns, I appeared in the guise of a suspicious person. Many acted as if they thought I wanted to steal something. I had nothing to present to them except promise. This was all that I could show, but tonight I take a great deal of pleasure in standing here, confident in the fact that I have fulfilled every promise that I have made to you, gentlemen.

"I do not blame any of you for being incredulous. Even the members of my own society of gas engineers doubted that I could get good illuminating gas at high pressure for 40 miles, and still give it to you in good shape.

"As a matter of fact we are giving better gas than we promised to give you. It is a fact that we have gas from Leicester to Palmer and the best gas at that. When it first started and up to the present time, there is not a town that we have gotten into that has been without gas for a moment, and we can see no reason why this should not continue. I fully appreciate your attendance here, and as this is the first time in my life I have ever been so honored, I doubly appreciate this evening and this honor."

Other speakers were Senator Prouty of Spencer, J. A. Johnson of the state Highway Commission, C. D. Jenkins inspector of the State Gas Commission, Alexander Porter of Boston, and other important personages, complimenting the gas company on attaining the distinction of having successfully built the longest single gas main in the country, and thereby opening up important industries and furnishing the public with gas of a considerable higher candle power than the State laws require.

The banquet was attended by a large number of prominent men.

Mr. Clarke, who is a well known and active resident of Winchester is president of the Arlington Gas Light Co., which furnishes Winchester with its gas.

REVIVAL OF AN OLD CHRISTMAS CUSTOM.

The revival of an old custom of sending Christmas cards has gained by leaps and bounds in recent years. The custom has always been very much in vogue in England, but only recently has it come into such popularity at home. The revival of the Christmas card is due, no doubt, to the souvenir postal card, of which there are so many handsome and elaborate designs, but this season the demand at home for the real Christmas cards has been so great that several firms have imported some of the prettiest English designs. The cards are now used, not only to send singly, but to put with the gifts, many of them having the words "to" and "from" at the close of their verse or quotation.

Some of the daintiest and handsomest of both the English and domestic Christmas cards can be found this year at Wilson the Stationer's, in addition to an unusually large line of souvenir postals.

WHAT OUR MERCHANTS OFFER FOR CHRISTMAS.

Some of the most seasonable and acceptable gifts are offered by F. A. Newth & Co., who are showing the largest line of skates at all prices, pocket knives sleds of all kinds, safety razors, shears, etc., etc. This firm is also showing a fine line of chaffing and baking dishes in silver and copper, and some fine oak jardineres, bound with brass. Get your safety razor here.

McLaughlin the shoe man is furnishing gifts which are not only acceptable but extremely useful. His stock includes everything for the feet—pretty and serviceable slippers of many kinds, shoes, rubbers, gaiters, overshoes, storm boots, and, in fact, everything which is needed for winter.

For Christmas wreaths and green you should see Arnold. His flowers, plants and evergreen are of the best, and are all personally selected by him. Arnold's wreaths are acknowledged to be the finest in town while no holly or mistletoe will have as many berries or as much foliage as his. He also has flowering plants of all kinds and cut flowers.

Chrismas candy of all kinds, made here in town of only the best ingredients, will be found at Gray's Spa. Here you can get the finest candy canes, baskets, images, chocolates and broken candy. No better ice cream, sherbets or frozen pudding can be had than that furnished by this firm.

The Boston Cash Market has a fine line of Christmas groceries, nuts, layer raisins and all the things which are needed for a good dinner to celebrate the day, including turkeys, chickens, choice beef, lamb, etc.

For jewelry, silverware and leather goods Winchester has one of the finest stores in any of the suburbs. Scales the jeweller has many articles which will just fill that present which you could not decide upon. New leather goods, cut glass, stick pins, watches at all prices, hand some photo frames, silver toilet articles, pocket books, clocks, and, in fact everything you can ask for in his line, will be shown in new and attractive wares, all in the most dainty patterns.

Miss F. J. Boston has the largest stock of goods for Christmas she has ever shown. Here you can find the latest styles in ladies neckwear in dainty boxes, full line of up-to-date pocket books, embroidered and linen handkerchief and handkerchief boxes; beautiful linen table doileys and center-pieces; Damask tablecloths, with napkins to match; extra fine linen towels; all kinds of toys, games, dolls, banks, cards and calendars.

Wilson the Stationer is showing the handsomest and daintiest Christmas articles yet, including all of the Dennison specialties—holly boxes, all sizes; all kinds of Christmas art diaries, paper knives, holly cabinets of fine note paper, games, toys and everything in the stationer's lines.

The Winchester Exchange is filled to overflowing with dainty and useful gifts, and the stock includes many new and attractive novelties which you must not miss seeing. Orders are taken here for passepartout framing, and you can find the new High school pillows, neckwear, hand embroidery and other hand work, toys, dolls and a large and varied assortment of fancy articles.

If your turkey comes from Richardson's Market you will be assured of a good Christmas dinner. He has everything to dress it too, with nuts, raisins, grapes, figs, and candy. You can get poultry, if you prefer, or a nice juicy steak or duck. He has everything in the grocery line.

MRS. SUSAN D. GOODRICH.

Mrs. Susan Dolby Goodrich died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Chas. E. Lee, No. 10 Glengarry, on Thursday last. She was almost 86 years of age. Her death was brought on by the grip, contracted during the early summer, agrivated by a shock last October. Her health had been poor for many weeks.

Mrs. Goodrich was born in Kensington, N. H, having made her home with her daughter, wife of Charles E. Lee, general superintendent of the Boston & Maine Railroad, for some years. She had been a resident of Winchester for the past three years.

A sister, Mrs. Eunice L. Sanborn of Hudson, Mass., and six children survive her. The children are: Walter H., of Hudson, Mass.; Mrs. Nonie A. Whitney of Boston; Mrs. E. L. Johnson of Clinton; Chas. S., of Epping, N. H; Mrs. Charles E. Lee of Winchester, and William S., of Epping, N. H. In addition she leaves 20 grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Funeral services were held from her daughter's home on Monday. Rev. D. Newton, pastor of the Frst Congregational Church officiated. The bearers were Mr. Lee and her three sons. The interment was in Hudson, Mass.

FELL DOWN ELEVATOR SHAFT.

Thomas Welsh, employed at the Gelatine Factory, and living in Woburn, fell down the elevator well at the factory Tuesday, a distance of some 30 feet. He fell into fifteen inches of water at the bottom of the well, which broke the fall, he being apparently uninjured except for a bruised back, where a piece of casing, which fell with him, hit him. At the time it was thought he was badly hurt and he was taken to a Boston hospital, later being discharged as no injuries could be found.

The bowling prizes for the winter tournament at the Calumet club consist of the following: 1st team prizes decanters; 2nd team prizes, comforts; 3rd, almond dishes; 4th, cut glass vases; 1st individual prize, cigar holder: 2nd, pitcher. These prizes will be on exhibition at the club in a few days.

A GLANCE AT OUR MINOR RAILROAD CROSSINGS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In addition to Winchester centre railroad crossing historically considered in last week's STAR, seven other public railroad crossings exist in town, one grade crossing and six bridge crossings. The first of the latter class is the crossing under the railroad on Mystic Place, leading from Grove street to the Parkway near the bridge at the head of Mystic lake. Present Mystic Place is an ancient colonial street which originally led from Grove street to the Symmes mill and farm, the former being situated near the bridge and the farm house being identical with the old John Bacon house torn down a few years ago. It was a street of much importance in olden times especially when Robert Bacon owned the mill and manufactured a large quantity of hats and felting. It was the only approach to the mill from the southerly side of the river when the Symmes family owned the property as Bacon street was not laid out for over one hundred years after Mystic Place was well established. The first railroad station established in this part of Winchester was at the overhead crossing we are describing and the station was named "Bacon's Bridge," the locality at that time being of more importance than the site of the present station on Bacon street.

As described in last week's STAR, the charter of the Boston and Lowell railroad was mandatory upon the company to construct all street crossings to the satisfaction of the owners of private ways or the selectmen of towns controlling public highways. At the time the railroad was built, Medford included present Winchester territory south of Black Horse Terrace including present Bacon street. The Medford selectmen, according to the record, were not satisfied with the railroad construction of either the Mystic Place or the Bacon street crossings and gave notice in writing to the county commissioners to that effect, the commissioners representing the town in contention with the railroad company. In railroad charters granted later than the Boston and Lowell, the towns were eliminated as having anything to say about railroad crossings, the county commissioners being the only representatives of the people in the matter. Of course it was, and is much more convenient, for the railroad company to satisfy a board of three commissioners than a majority of inhabitants of towns through which the railroad passed, therefore while the the people were sleeping the change was made, just as many such changes are made today at the instance of corporations. In the present instance the Medford selectmen claimed that Mystic Place Bridge was too low and the drainage not good, the work not done in a thorough manner. The selectmen also claimed that present Bacon street bridges, one over the river and one over the railroad, at present Wedgemere station, should be rebuilt and improved as per the board's specifications. On September 14th, 1835, the county commissioners issued a decree on behalf of the selectmen of Medford to the railroad company that the "way leading to Robert Bacon's hat factory be so lowered that the surface thereof be eleven feet below the lowest part of the bridge and that there be made one or more good water culverts to conduct the water from the easterly to the westerly side of said railroad, under the traveled part of said way or otherwise." This quotation is taken from County Commissioners Records, 1835 to 1842, Page 50.

What a disreputable state of affairs exists at old "Bacon's Bridge" at the present time when compared with conditions above cited! From alterations in the bridge itself and from want of proper drainage, to prevent street washings, the distance from the "surface" of the road to "the lowest part of the bridge" at present, is just five feet, ten inches. The chairman of the Winchester board of selectmen of today would have to unbend his graceful form to a considerable extent to pass under this bridge and not lose his head. He might have to walk bare-foot and take off his hat at that to do the feat successfully! As to the "water culverts," as described, there is no trace of them at this late day but there is abundant evidence that the street is being washed away on one part and filled up in another for the want of good surface drainage. This ancient way might be made a convenient and safe entrance to the parkway from Grove street (one of the most attractive streets in town) if put in decent order instead of being made a gutter to take the drainage of Grove street. So dangerous is the passing over this street that the park commissioners have erected two danger signs at the junction of the street with the parkway on which is plainly printed, "Low Bridge, Dangerous." This state of affairs is not as it should be and it is a disgrace to such a community as Winchester to allow it to continue. This crossing should be made safe for travel or it should be discontinued. Within the time of many older inhabitants of Winchester, goods of all kinds could be transported in teams under this bridge. The Symmes family formerly teamed hay from their meadows through the bridge and there is no doubt but what it is in much worse order at present for team and carriage use than when it was first build by the railroad company.

At present, Mystic Place is said to be a private street. In the first instance it was a private farm road and mill entrance belonging to the Symmes family. After the mill passed from that family, the selectmen of Medford in 1828 laid it out as a private street for the benefit of Robert Bacon. In March 1841 on petition of John Symmes and others, the Medford selectmen laid out the street as a town way but the town would not accept the layout. The petitioners then appealed to the county commissioners who laid out the street as a town way awarding Robert Bacon $29 69 damages. The commissioners also refused to discontinue the street as a public highway. It is said that subsequent to these proceedings, Medford was petitioned by Robert Bacon to discontinue the road as a public street which petition the town granted and since that date it has been a private way. The writer has not looked up the Medford records on this point but presumes the statement to be correct and at present the street is a private way, though it ought to be made a public way and put in order.

In regard to Bacon street railroad crossings, the highway commissioners September 14th, 1835, ordered the water bridge rebuilt by the railroad company in a substantial manner, and the approaches to the railroad bridge improved so as not to exceed a grade of three and one half degrees. They also ordered the crossing widened to full width of "the present railing." It may be noted here that the town of Winchester about twenty-five years ago foolishly moved the bridge over the river (which the railroad had to raise considerably in making its overhead crossing) to its present location, its original location being quite close to the present railroad bridge. The reason given by the Selectmen for moving the bridge was the expense of rebuilding the high abutments as they had become unsafe. They had to be braced with timbers for some years to keep them in an upright position. The town forgot that was the railroad's affair to keep the abutments in order as it was a part of its construction of the overhead crossing. Of course as the railroad was never called upon by the town to pay anything toward moving the bridge, it never volunteered anything, but it got rid of quite an expense by the shortsightedness of the town of Winchester. The present bridge over the river cost the town about $4500 and it was built of such small capacity that its foundations have been undermined and it is now in such an unsafe condition that it should be entirely rebuilt.

ARTHUR E. WHITNEY.

December 12th, 1906.

Readers of the STAR have been much pleased with these articles from Mr. Whitney, and express the hope that he may continue to dig up the Winchester of the past.

BURGLARS IN TOWN AGAIN.

Burglars made their appearance in Winchester again last week, entering the home of Mr. E. Alden Bigelow on Francis circuit. It was shortly after eight o'clock on Friday evening when officer Hargrove at the police station recevived a telephone call from Mrs. Bigelow that there was some one in her house. Mrs. Bigelow was alone in the house except for her small son, who was asleep.

When the officer arrived, he found no sign of anyone, although he fancied he heard someone moving at different times. Two windows, one on the first floor and one in the attic, were found open, and a quantity of silver had disappeared. A thorough search of the premises and constant watch revealed nothing further.

Later, on the following day, all the silver with the exception of some spoons, were found hidden under a bush in the yard. It is supposed that the intruder learned of his discovery and was afraid of being caught with the spoils, hiding it in the yard and making his escape.

SUITABLE CHRISTMAS PRESENT.

Cigars make a suitable present, that is, cigars of good quality. A poor article takes away all kindly feelings during the contemplative period when relaxation from business cares are in order. One of the best brands of cigars made is the Vincent Club Perfectos. Their equal, for the price, cannot be found in Boston, and they will give unalloyed satisfaction to the recipient.

The Warren F. Witherell Co 91 Causeway street, opposite the North station, make a specialty of this cigar. They also carry one of the best lines of fancy groceries to be found in the city, including everything for Christmas.

AN ADMIRABLE PROGRAMME.

The meetings of the Epiphany Club of Winchester have been rather exceptional in the strength and variety of the addresses made. The coming meeting on next Thursday evening at Lyceum Hall will be more than usually interesting. Edwin D. Mead, whose fame is international, will speak on "America among the powers of the Earth" and William Barry of Boston will speak of the work of St Joseph's (R. C.) Church, situated near the North Station, whose activities are very interesting. One of the clergy, Rev. P. J. McCormack, had intended to tell of the work, but he was compelled to cancel the engagement and has sent Mr. Barry as his substitute. All men of the Parish of the Epiphany are urged to be present and hear this admirable programme.

The prettiest Christmas cards will be found this year at Wilson the Stationer's

THE FIREMEN'S BALL.

In Hose Coupling Contest Woburn and Wakefield Tied.

The concert and ball of the Winchester Fire Department in the Town Hall last Friday evening was a big success and the sum realized for the widow of Patrick Monahan must have been considerable Mr. Monahan had been a member of the department for some years, and his death was due to a cold contracted at a fire. The hall was crowded with dancers and onlookers, and at times dancing was rather difficult. Everything passed off smoothly under the management of the several committees printed in last week's STAR, who are entitled to much credit.

In the hose coupling contest Andrew Cuneo and Edward Long of Woburn finished in first place, tied at 15 seconds with the Wakefield team, Fred D. Graham and Ira B. Winters. The two teams divided first and second money.

A call to a chimney fire just after the concert interfered with the program, but the fire laddies soon returned and the affair went smoothly on.

The judges were:

Chief Sturtevant	Stoneham F. D.
Chief Cade	Wakefield F. D.
Chief Philips	Lexington F. D.
Capt. Edw. Shallow	Ladder 1 B. F. D.

EX-GOV. GARCELON IS ASPHYXIATED.

Former Gov. Alonzo Garcelon of Maine died from asphyxiation by gas at the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. G. Dennis, 18 George street, Medford, last Saturday. He was 93 years of age. He was discovered by his daughter lying on his bed when she went to his room to call him.

His non-appearance caused his daughter to go up to his room. She knocked on the door but hearing no response pushed it open. The volume of escaping gas almost overcame her, but she held her breath and went into the room, finding her father lying across the bed where he had fallen when overcome. After making an effort to resuscitate him Dr. Cleaves pronounced the aged ex-Governor dead.

The funeral was held from the home of Mrs. E. G. Dennis on Monday morning at 11 o'clock. After the service the body was conveyed to Lewiston, Me., where more elaborate services were held.

The Ex-Governor was father to former Postmaster Garcelon of Winchester.

ELECTRICITY.

You can get the cleanest, the most convenient, and the most effiicient of all artificial illuminants when you install the Electric Light. You also get the safest. The Electric Light does its work — gives you light — with no trouble or bother and without spoiling the air or harming draperies, decorations and painted work.

Have you learned to be light-wise?

You ought, for your own sake, have full information concerning the electric light and the favorable terms upon which you may obtain it. Will you write our Sales Agent, or call, or telephone "Oxford 1150, Collect?"

METHOD OF TREATMENT AT RUTLAND SANATORIUM.

The treatment at the Sanatorium in Rutland for tuberculosis consists chiefly of generous diet, plenty of milk and eggs, fresh air at least eighteen hours per day (windows wide open all night, unless very stormy,) cold baths, moderate exercise only, and plenty of sleep—in short, a simple, regular life, devoid of excitement and irregularities. There is a good library connected with the institution, and daily papers and the U. S. mail are received twice a day. All patients are required to be in bed by 9 o'clock p. m., and the nurses make the rounds of every ward three times nightly. All are under medical supervision constantly, each patient's pulse and temperature being taken two or three times daily. The baths and cold air treatment are not at all rigorous and are very beneficial. Patient are coming and going all the time, the winter months being considered the best for treatment.

This treatment is just as effective here as at Rutland.

QUESTION OF SKILLED LABOR.

A crowd of people in Boston almost reaching the proportions of a mob, and requiring the services of several police officers to preserve order, flocking to the doors of the just opened free employment bureau, was an object lesson in the unwisdom of present methods or rather lack of method in trade unions. Almost without exception the applicants were outside the class worthy the name of skilled labor, and yet these hundreds are anxious, apparently, to obtain work. On the other hand, there it hardly a branch of industry requiring mechanical skill that could not give employment to more hands if competent men were obtainable. Under rules established by labor unions mechanics cannot train apprentices under their own eye to become skilled workmen, and only the ambitious boy who is bound to succeed and advance in spite of hindrances, comes at length into the ranks of the skilled workmen. So long as this rank injustice exists, needy incompetency will be knocking at a close closed door and an unthinking public will be paying for something that it does not get.—[Arlington Advocate.

TRAVELS OF A FOX.

About a year ago a vessel from Machias, Me., was in Provincetown, and had a tame fox on board. The animal was given to Alfred Joseph of Provincetown, with whom it appeared perfectly contented, and was very tame. It wore a leather collar on its neck, and to this attached a light line. One day the fox disappeared, and was seen afterward in the woods with four hounds following it, since which time it passed beyond the ken of its former master. Last week a boy led into a police station at Jamaica Plain a fox wearing a collar like the missing animal's to which a piece of cord was attached, he having caught the creature in Franklin Park. It was undoubtedly the missing pet, but how it travelled the long route of 120 miles without having any mishaps befall it, and had maintained itself for a year is a good deal of mystery.

CANADIAN MID-WINTER EXCURSION.

The Canadian cities of Montreal and Quebec are proving more attractive year by year to the average tourist. So much so, in fact, that it is not only the summer season that attracts but the winter as well, and in accordance with a custom established a few years ago, an excursion to these cities is to be run from Boston and other points in New England at the end of this month, tickets being sold December 28th to January 2nd, inclusive, and good to return until January 31st, stopovers being allowed at all points on the Canadian Pacific Railway in Canada.

The round trip rate from Boston to Montreal will be $10.00, and to Quebec $12.00, allowing stopover in Montreal going and returning.

It is probable that a large number of New England people will take advantage of these rates, as Montreal and Quebec in winter offer many attractions in the way of outdoor sports that cannot be equalled.

The Canadian Pacific Railway issues booklets on Montreal and Quebec, which will be found of interest, and may be had upon application. Through trains via the Montreal and Boston Air Line leave Boston at 10 a. m. and 8.30 p. m. daily. On the day train are through coaches, cafe dining-car and drawing-room car. On the night train through coaches and sleeper, in which accommodations may be secured as far in advance as desired.

Tickets, reservations, and any other information required may be had by applying at the Canadian Pacific Railway, 362 Washington street, Boston, or by writing to F. R. Perry, District Passenger Agent.

The congestion of Christmas goods in the stores has a close relation to the extra demands on the advertising columns of the STAR. This advertising news should appeal to every person intending to make a Christmas present. We wonder if some, particularly at Christmas time, do not overlook the importance of this fact: that without good stores we cannot have a first class town; and a continuance of good stores depends on good patronage. Take the thought home.

HONORS FOR A WINCHESTER BOY.

Calvin W. Rice New Secretary of Society of Mechanical Engineers.

The following article written by John W. Lieb, jr., was taken from Cassier's Magazine for December, and will no doubt be read with much interest by Winchester people. The subject of the article, Mr. Calvin W. Rice, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Rice of Eaton street, and he is one of the shining lights in the engineering world of today.

"Some months ago considerable interest was excited in engineering circles by the announcement that Prof. Frederick R. Hutton, who had served the American Society of Mechanical Engineers as secretary so long and with such conspicuous success, had signified his intention of retiring.

It was to be expected that many candidates would be mentioned for a position of such honor and with such wide opportunities for usefulness, and those interested in the welfare of the society were much pleased when they learned that Mr. Calvin Winsor Rice, to whom the position was offered, had consented to serve.

Mr. Rice has seen considerable service in the councils of engineering societies, and last year he was chairman of the committee of papers and meetings of the Mechanical Engineers. By temperament, education, and professional experience he is peculiarly qualified to fill the position of secretary of one of the most influential engineering bodies, and it opens to him a career of distinction and wide usefulness.

Mr. Rice was born at Winchester, Mass., on November 4, 1868, and received his early education in the public schools of Boston, New Haven and Winchester. He entered the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1886, graduating from the course in electrical engineering. He was already familiar with the handling of machine tools, and after some practical experience in the draughting room and in various subordinate positions, was advanced to the position of assistant engineer in the Power and Mining department of the Thomson-Houston Company, at Lynn, Mass. When the consolidation with the General Electric Company took place Mr. Rice was transferred to its Schenectady works. He was soon advanced to a position of greater responsibilities as district engineer of the company, with headquarters at Cincinnati, a field in which his services were called upon in many branches of electrical engineering work, — railway lighting, power, and mining.

He then turned his attention to mining work and after service in the Silver Lake Mines, at Silverton, Col., he became connected, as consulting engineer, with the Anaconda Copper Mining Company of Butte, Mont. There he obtained a wide experience in the development of water powers, in their transmission electrically to distant points and in the economical handling of large steam plants. Returning to the East, he was appointed electrical engineer of the Kings County Electric Light & Power Company, and later took part in the engineering work in connection with the consolidation of the lighting plants in the Manhattan and the Bronx, of the city of New York, under the auspices of the New York Light, Heat & Power Company, succeeded by the New York Edison Company. As Engineer in charge of one of the operating departments of the company and engineer of the company operating the high-tension subways of New York City, he became thoroughly familiar with all branches of central station work.

In 1902 Mr. George Westinghouse was preparing to introduce the Nernst lamp to the American public, and Mr. Rice received a call to direct the work as second vice president and manager of the Nernst Lamp Company. The year following he returned to the service of the General Electric Company as consulting engineer of the New York office, where he made a specialty of steam engineering, with particular reference to steam turbines.

Mr. Rice is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, the Institution of Electrical Engineers of Great Britain, and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. With such a record of professional service and engineering experience to his credit, his friends have every confidence that he will give a good account of himself in his new field of activity.

Isaac Heming who claims the proud title of the greatest goose bone prophet in America has completed his observations for the winter and settled what sort of a season we are going to have. It is to be a hard winter, say the prophet and his goose-bone December, January and February will be very severe and the thermometer will do extra stunts to see how low it can get. There is one comfort however. The hardest winter for years will be followed by a mild and early spring. Thus saith Heming.

Your stomach churns and digests the food you eat and if foul, or torpid, or out of order, your whole system suffers from blood poison. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea keeps you well. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. A. B. Grover.

ONE DAY OF DAYS.

BY LILLIAS LORRAINE HOLLIS.

One day a woman, waiting, stood
Alone in the depths of a silent wood;
Awaiting the lover who tarried so long;
Her true heart held no thought of wrong,
In another place, by false woman deceived,
Stayed the lover, forgetting the heart that grieved,
Forgetting the love in one woman's eyes,
While tied in the mesh of another's lies.

REFRAIN

One day of days—one day of days—
Awaiting night's purple haze;
This woman stood, this woman prayed,
Looking with eyes—eyes not afraid—
Onto the day—Onto the day—
When the story—the story came true.

One day a man in a haunted wood,
By a woman's grave in silence stood,
And prayed:—Forgive me, sweet dead eyes,
Ere the madd'ned soul within me dies
Then from the grave where the pansies grew
Came the answer,—I died—died, waiting for you.
Go, wait as I did—and wait alone,
Pale dawn found him dead by her grey headstone.

REFRAIN.

One day of days—one day of days—
Awaiting night's sombre haze,
This man stood, this man prayed,
Looking with eyes—sad eyes afraid—
Onto the day—onto the day—
When the story—the story came true!

AN AD.--DITION.

A man who owns a great big store,
With stacks of goods on every floor,
May, to his patient sorrow, find
The public to his wares is blind.
And, though he add all he may guess
Would likely to add to his success,
His bank account may never rise
Till he concludes to add-vertise.

Now Is The Time.

The STAR would like to see another attempt made at flooding Manchester Field this winter. The need for this undertaking is just as great this year as last, and because the warm weather interfered at that time the scheme should not be cast aside. The usual winter drowning accidents are already being chronicled. Let Winchester not be on the list this year. This can be done if the field is flooded, and in our opinion nothing would make the playground more popular.

The Caucus Act.

At the last Republican Caucus a vote was passed, as a sense of the meeting, that the Luce Caucus act be adopted by the town. It was the understanding at the time that the matter be presented at some town meeting previous to the annual election so that the act would become effective at the March election. This could have been done at the meeting of last Tuesday evening. However, there may be another meeting before the first of March, which would give time to consider the question and yet make the law effective.

Biennial Elections.

The strongest supporters of biennial elections appear to be the politicians. The plain people are not in favor of the change, preferring to keep in touch with the doings of the legislators and other office holders and reward or punish as occasion requires, without being obliged to wait two years.

When the spirit of unrest is so marked as it is at the present time, it would be a mistake to draw away from the great masses of the people. Annual elections have worked well in Massachusetts and therefore there is no need for a change.

Not Ready to Report.

The special committee on grade crossing will not be able to report at the town meeting Monday evening. The amount of labor required has proven to be much greater than was at first supposed and as the committee propose to be as thorough as possible in their investigation it was deemed best to take plenty of time This action of the committee will meet with the approval of the citizens. There is no occasion for haste; the matter is too important to be hastily passed upon.

There will, in all probability, be nothing doing at the town meeting Monday evening, other than to adjourn to a later date, or dissolve the meeting, and call another when the committee are ready to report.

The committee will ask for an adjournment of the town meeting to Dec. 31, at 7 45 p m.

Rev. Michael J. Owens, pastor of St. Bridget's Church, Lexington, will give the sermon at the reception of the Young Ladies Sodality at St. Mary's Church next Sunday evening.

WHIST AT CALUMET CLUB.

Notwithstanding the extreme cold of Saturday evening, there was the largest turnout of the club members thus far this winter at the Calumet whist tournament. When play commenced shortly after eight there were about a dozen and a half tables.

The honors of the evening were carried off by Mr. E. W. Abbott. For the second prize Messrs. Albert D. Rogers and Alfred W. Otis were tied, and Mr. D. B. Badger, who donated the prizes, declared that each might choose a partner and play one hand. Mr. Rogers selected Mr. Fred C. Burnham and Mr. Otis, Mr. A A. Sargent. The hand proved very interesting to the large crowd of on-lookers, being won in a close finish by Mr. Rogers. Dr. Wm. H. Gilpatric captured the consolation prize very handily with 53 in the hole.

The prizes were both beautiful and artistic, consisting of two large polished copper jardineres and a little copper casserole, all presented to the club for the tournament by Mr. D. B. Badger. During the play punch was served, and at its close the usual lunch.

CHRISTMAS BOWLING TOURNAMENT.

The bowling committee of the Calumet Club has announced a Christmas bowling tournament on Dec. 22nd, 24th and 25th at the club. The entrance fee is to be 15 cents for each three strings and the prizes will consist of cigars or bowling tickets. The entry money will be divided up into prizes as follows: 1st, 35 per cent; 2nd. 25 per cent; 3rd, 20 per cent; 4th, 15 per cent; 5th, 5 per cent. The winner will be the roller of the highest three string total, the others following. The tournament will be held as follows: Saturday evening, Dec. 22, from 7 to 12 o'clock; Monday, Dec. 24, from 7 to 12 o'clock; Tuesday, Dec. 25, from 9 to 12 a. m., and 2 to 6 p. m.

A special prize of one dollar has been donated by Geo. S. Littlefield, chairman of the Bowling Committee, for the highest single string rolled in the tournament.

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

There will be a service of Infant Baptism on Sunday at 4.15 p. m. Parents intending to bring children at that time are asked to inform the Rector.

The Epiphany Circle will meet Monday at 3 p m. in the Choir Room.

The Woman's Guild will meet on Tuesday at 2.30 p. m. in the Choir Room.

Wednesday Ember Day, there will be the usual 5 o'clock service.

The Choir Guild will hold its monthly meeting on Wednesday evening.

Thursday evening, at 8 p.m., the Epiphany Club will meet in Lyceum Hall, at which time it is expected that Mr. Edwin D. Mead will address the Club. All men of the parish are cordially invited to attend this meeting.

WINCHESTER MAN ORDAINED.

The Church of the Epiphany was the scene on Wednesday morning of the ordination of Francis Leavitt Beal of this town to the Episcopal ministry The service was attended by many of the surrounding clergy and numerous friends of Mr. Beal. The service opened at 9 30 with morning prayer, read by the candidate, followed at 10.45 by the ordination, conducted by the Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, Bishop of the Mass., Diocese, who preached the sermon. The littany was read by Rev. F. S. Webster, secretary of the Archdeaconry; the Epistle by Rev. John W. Suter, rector of the church, and the Bishop was celebrant.

A lunch was served to the visiting clergy after the service by Rev. J. W. Suter at his home on Church street.

Mr. Beal was born in Cohassett, Dec. 31, 1864, and after graduating from the high school of that place in 1880, entered the employ of Batchelder & Lincoln, where he remained for 23 year. He was two years with Garfield & Holt of Boston, and for the past three has made his home in Winchester being connected with the firm of Blanchard, Kendall & Co.

Mr. Beal was brought up in the Methodist church, but as a result of study and research on Oct. 14, 1897, he was received into communion of the Protestant Episcopal Church at St Paul's Church, Boston, by the late Dr. John S. Lindsay. The next Palm Sunday he was confirmed in the same church.

July 1899 he was licensed as archdeacon's lay reader and given substitute work. At the beginning of Advent he was sent to St. John's Church, Arlington as assistant to Rev. James Yeames. In the summer of 1900 he was assigned to take charge of Trinity mission, Needham, which had been set apart from Christ Church of Highlandville.

For five years he has been missionary in charge of St John's parish, Saugus, during which time he organized a mission in Chelsea.

ENJOYED BY CHILDREN.

The Doll and Bear sale, held Tuesday afternoon in Waterfield hall under the auspices of the Woman's Guild of the Episcopal Church, was one of the most enjoyable affairs for the children yet held this season. Santa Claus was present with all his beaming joviality, and a life size elephant proved an eighth wonder to the little people. The hall was prettily decorated with evergreen and red and green crepe by the committee. The tables were in charge of the following ladies:

Doll's millinery—Mrs. Louis Barta, Mrs. Fanny Burton, Mrs. Minka.

Paper dolls—Mrs. Wm. I. Kendall and Miss Edith Kendall.

Japanese dolls—Mrs. S. H. Taylor, Mrs. Ely, Mrs. F. W. Coburn.

Bear table—Mrs. Anthony Kelley, Mrs. Joshua Kelley, Mrs. N. T. Apollonio, Mrs. Geo. Hawley.

Candy table—Mrs G. W. Fitch and Mrs. A. Miles Holbrook.

American dolls—Mrs. T. E. Thompson, Mrs. A. P. Weeks, Mrs. Maurice Saunders, Mrs. Ralph Putnam, Miss Carrie Billing, Mrs. N. J. Moody.

Grabs—Mrs. J. W. Suter and Mrs. Walter Cummings.

Santa Claus was in charge of Miss Jealous and Miss Myra Dickson, while the elephant was attended by Mrs. F. H. Bowles.

A large attendance enjoyed the sale, which netted a good profit.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The surplus in the national treasury is nothing but surplus taxation and they are already urging ship subsidies to take care of it so that the sacred trust protection taxes may not be reduced, and so long as the dear people desire to make the rich richer, why should these taxes be reduced?

It might be worth trying to elect state officers biennially and legislators annually so that possibly on the odd years more attention might be given to selecting good representatives. As it is now the governorship is given most all of the attention.

Why not have a municipal ice business as well as in the uncongealed article which we now deal in? An ice house could be built from the north reservoir overflow towards corner of Highland avenue and Forest street and the ice slid in and out by gravity at very small cost. Here is a good chance for sane socialism.

If the local shops want Christmas business why not get together and try decorating them with electric lights, evergreen etc., and do something more to draw people there than has been done in the past. It can be done.

We need a free public bath house in this town very much and it should be considered the coming year. It would be a good law that compelled their establishment in every city and town of any size. How many people will go without a bath-room who can possibly afford it? The school teachers in some of our schools would hold up both hands for it.

There is just one method of the abolition of the grade crossing that we can agree upon with any unaminity and that is the Selectmen's. Any other is bound to be opposed by not only a large number but by a large majority of the voters. Details of this plan may be changed perhaps considerably.

While it would cost more of course, the committee should consider extending the bridge of the Selectmen's plan across the square. The plan at present shows the bridge extending one hundred feet, about half way, while it would be desirable to utilize the entire square. Widening of streets in the entire centre should also have attention, although the town would have to pay the entire expense of that.

Of what consequence is it who, or how few, or how many, own public service corporations, the States and the Nation control them and the people will get just what they deserve, as in fact they do in everything everywhere.

The business of street signs, street lights and pole setting that there has been considerable doing in of late years, seems to have come to a stand still this year for some reason or other, but then there has been special things to attend to such as changing over town offices, rebuilding vaults and the Lebanan street gushing fountain.

If the people there want Russell Brook nuisance abated they must act under section 84 of Chapter 75, Revised Laws. It will not cost them much.

After the town has voted on the question of plan of abolition of the grade crossing, it would seem to be desirable to appoint a committee or instruct the present one to consider changes about the centre which might be done to advantage by the town in connection with this abolition. Let us also remember that the northerly end of Manchester Field has not been completed yet and that the Metropolitan Park Board is in duty bound to do that work. This is an asset of value.

The people of Medford, Winchester and Woburn should petition and work to get the L to build a line over Mystic avenue from Main street, Medford, to Sullivan square, as that would give a running time of less than half of the present schedule between those points, and there is no good reason why it should not be done now. This line has everything in favor of it and the public has a moral right to force it if force is needed.

Last year I sat as a juror in the United States Court in the postoffice building in Boston and for dirt, delapidation and unsanitary conditions generally "took the cake," and yet I was informed that conditions had been improved very much of late years. The Court had to take a recess every little while to air out the room; half the jurors chairs on one side of the room had their bottoms broken out, the electric light bulbs in the jury room were so covered with months' old dirt that little light could get out and the sanitaries were flooded with disinfectants. The case before us was the accepting of a tribe as a fixture on furniture by the acting custodian of the building, although the postmaster is responsible for the condition of the building and furnishings.

INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE.

Preston Pond, the well-known Winchester resident, treasurer of the Dennison Manufacturing Company, has been elected one of the vice-presidents of the Massachusetts Savings Insurance League, which has been organized to promote the idea of permitting savings banks in Massachusetts to engage in industrial insurance. The necessity for the formation of such a league was shown in recent investigations made and published by Louis D. Brandeis, and a great number of prominent citizens of the Commonwealth have become members, amongst others the Rt. Rev. Bishop Lawrence; Joseph Lee; Thomas B. Fitzpatrick, President the Union Instution for Savings; Laurence Minot; Judge Francis C. Lowell; Hon. C. N. Barney, Mayor of Lynn; Judge Warren A. Reed of Brockton; Jerome Jones, of Jones, McDuffee and Stratton; Hon. Joseph Walker; Robert Treat Paine; Arthur Amory; James J. Storrow; Rev. C. F. Dole; Daniel G. Wing, President First National Bank; Franklin Hobbs, Treasurer Arlington Mills of Lawrence; Hon. Robert Luce, of Somerville; Judge Geo. L. Wentworth; C. P. Hall, Vice-President American Hide and Leather Company; F. G. Mead, Brookline; Herbert H. White, Treasurer University Press, Cambridge; Charles W. Birtwell, Boston Children's Aid Society; Arthur D. Hill; Wellington Smith, Lee, Mass.; William Winslow, Trustee of Five Cent Savings Bank, Fall River; Edwin D. Mead; Professor F. W. Taussig; Judge Frederick Dodge, U. S. Courts, Boston; and Francis Bartlett.

It is expected that a bill will be introduced during the forthcoming session of the legislature by Representative Norman H. White of Brookline, empowering the authorities of savings banks to engage in industrial insurance under certain restrictions. The bill will not, however, if passed, change the existing law as to insurance companies, which will continue to conduct their buainess as heretofore. Neither will it be obligatory for any savings bank to enter the field of industrial insurance. Any one desiring to become a member of the League may do so without expense by notifying the Secretary, Norman H. White, 2A Park street, Boston.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

A small but exceedingly enthusiast audience gathered in the Calumet Hall on Monday last at the usual meeting of The Fortnightly. Sam Walter Foss appeared with original dialect poems of a varied nature. The speaker of the afternoon had nothing to complain of in the quality of the attention with which his selections were greeted. From "The House beside the Road," which he called his creed, to his final "He worried about It," the unceasing hilarity of his audience showed their appreciation, and it seemed as if the inclemency of the weather outside only added to the mirth and laughter within. "Irresistibly funny" was the universal opinion concerning this well known librarian of a neighboring city.

Miss Ruth Sleeper added to the interest of the occasion by her rendering of songs with Mrs. Edlefson at the piano.

Winchester Council, K. of C., have elected the following officers: Dr. C. F. McCarthy, G. K.; Frank E. Rogers, D. G. K.; Dennis F. Foley, Chancellor; Thomas J. Boyle, Recording Secretary; John J. Sullivan, Financial Secretary; William J. Daly, Treasurer; Daniel J. Daly, Lecturer; Leon E. Day, Advocate; Henry J Lyons, Warden; James E. Sullivan, I. G.; Harry E. Coty, O. G.; Rev. Daniel J. CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The coming week at the Castle Square will be made notable by the revival of The Rivals, Sheridan's famous old comedy. It will form the second of the five classic productions to be made at the Castle Square this season, and in scenery, costumes and acting it will be as complete as modern stage art can make it. The scenery will be prepared from designs by Frank Vhouteau Brown, and it will reproduce accurately the quaintness of the Eighteenth century life. Few comedies excel The Rivals in merriment, its humor is rich in gayety and fantastic speech, and with She Stoops to Conquer and a few other old plays, it has kept the stage for nearly a century and a half.

All the leading members of the Castle Square Stock Company will take part in the play including Mr. Miller as Capt. Absolute, Mr. Johnson as Sir Anthony, Mr. Albion as Bob Acres, Miss Bradley as Mrs. Malaprop, and Miss Lawton as Lydia.

BASKET BALL.

Last Friday night the High school team played its second game of the season and won its second victory, defeating Boston English High school in a "walk-over" game, 42 to 8. Between the halves the second team defeated Boston English High Second in a very closely contested game, 19 to 13.

The first team started the game with a rush and kept the fast playing up throughout. Larivee started the scoring by throwing a basket before the first minute of play had passed, which was closely followed by a basket by Thompson. After that the High school team fairly played English High school "off its feet," having splendid team play and throwing baskets easily, with the exception of Collins, who, did not put up his usual game. During the half every man with the exception of Capt. Webber scored two baskets or over. In all, eleven baskets were thrown and a goal from a foul, making a score of 23 points to 0, for English High owing to the good work of the High school was not able to score.

The second half however, was only a little better for the English High school, for although they scored 8 points to our 19, the final score was extremely large in the High school teams favor. When the score was 27 to to 0 against them. Lally of English High threw a goal from a foul, which he duplicated about five minutes later, and then threw a basket. Cronin and McCathern scored English High's other four points a minute or two later. Sharon and Atherton were put in the game for the last ten minutes and they showed that the High school had two good substitutes.

In team play the High school was vastly superior to English High, and it was also superior in the basket shooting line. Thompson and Grant put up the best game for the High school, though the play of all was remarkably good. Thompson, was everywhere on the floor and so was Grant, who in the second half threw three goals from fouls from four chances.

The summary:

W. H. S.	B. E. H. S.
Grant rf	lb McCathen
Collins lf	rb Kelleher
Atherton
Larivee c	c McKinner
	Hearne
Thompson lb	lf Lally
Sharon
Webber (Capt.) lb	lf Hearne
	Cronin

Score, W. H. S. 42, B. E. H. S. 8. Goals from floor made by Grant 5, Larivee 4, Thompson 3, Webber 2, Collins 2, Atherton 2, Sharon, Lally, McCathern, Cronin. Goals from fouls, made by Grant 4, Lally 2. Referee and Umpire, Crawford. Timer, Petts. Time, 15 and 20 minute halves.

The second team played its third game and won its second victory, 19 to 13. The English High second started the scoring, and scored 5 points before the High school second were able to pull together and score. However, the English High team did not keep the lead long and at the end of the first half, the local second led 11 to 6.

In the second half the English High second brought the score 11 to 10 but from that time on the game was in no danger for the High school second.

The team play on both sides was good but the High school team won on better basket shooting.

Capt. Welch, Little and Dover played well for the local second, while Cottam and Bennett put up the best game for English High.

The summary:

W. H. S. 2nd	B. E. H. S. 2nd
Goffe rf	lb Bennett
Dover lf	rb Shanley
Howe c	c Covell
Little lb	rf Cottam
Welch lb (Capt.)	rf Everett

Score, W. H. S. 2nd 19, B. E. H. S. 2nd 13. Goals from floor made by Dover 4, Goffe 3, Welch, Little, Everett 2, Cottam, 2, Covell. Goals from fouls made by Goff, Shanley 3. Referee and Umpire, Crawford. Timer, Petts. Time, 15 minute halves.

The next High school game takes place with Stoneham High, in the local High school gymnasium, tonight.

Christmas Hints.

Nothing makes the Christmas gift seem any more acceptable or cause it to carry with it that air of the holidays, than its wrapping. How much more pleasure do you, yourself, get on Christmas morning when you unwrap a gift neatly done up and tied, than you do from a package loosely wrapped in coarse paper. With the numerous devices of the present day, a neatly wrapped package at Christmas time is within the reach of everyone. The first wrapping should be of fine English tissue, white preferred, but if the gift is such that holly red or green can be used, it should be done. The best tissue can be purchased at a minimum figure, and should always be used. For fastening this wrapping do not use twine, but the little holiday seals, of which there are several varieties For the outside wrapping use clean white paper and the holly red or green twine. If the package is for someone in one's own house, the silver or gold cord is very pretty. For packages which are sent through the mail use a clean manilla paper and a strong cord of white.

All of these necessities for your bundles can be purchased at a small sum of Wilson the Stationer.

SHERLOCK HOLMES.

The demand for seats for the production of the only authorized "Sherlock Holmes" at the Castle Square Christmas week is enormous. Application should be made at once by those desirous of witnessing the fine performance of this stirring drama to be given by the Castle Square stock company. It will be played exactly as given by William Gillette for three seasons in this country and England, with all the scenic effects that made it famous among modern dramas, and it is the only "Sherlock Holmes" play ever made with the consent of the author of the famous detective stories, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Its production at the Castle Square is made by special arrangement with Charles Frohman and William Gillette, without whose consent it cannot be played in America.

DIED.

GOODRICH — Dec. 6th, Mrs. Susan Dolby Goodrich, aged 85y. 9m. 15d. Funeral services held Dec. 10th, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Chas. E. Lee, No. 10 Glengarry. Interment at Hudson, Mass.

LOCKE—In Lexington, Dec. 6, Marjorie, infant daughter of Lewis O. and Dorothy I. Locke.

ELECTRICITY.

It will be well nigh impossible for you to select a Christmas present which will be more gratefully received or will give greater or more lasting pleasure than the electric heating pad. Ability to use this and other electrical devices is one of the advantages which results from introduction of the electric light -- the cleanest, safest, and most convenient illuminant known.

Have you learned to be light-wise?

If you would know more of the advantages of electricity, let our Sales Agent tell you. Will you write him, or call, or telephone "Oxford 1150, Collect?"

The Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston, 3 Head Place, Boston.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

It has been very pleasing to the unions of Mass. to know that delegates to the World's convention of W. C. T. U. were so well satisfied with the way in which they were entertained while in Boston. As the Winchester W. C. T. U. contributed its full share towards defraying the expenses and the people of the town helped to do it by patronizing the Sale held for the purpose of raising funds for the same, we will give a few of the many expressions sent back to the committee of entertainment.

"Among the many pleasant memories I have brought back to my Canadian home is that of the numerous kindnesses extended to me by my white-ribbon sisters across the line. Boston is a beautiful city and Boston women have a right to be justly proud of it."

Delegate from Canada.

"I cannot leave this country without sending warm, hearty thanks for the delightful hospitality I received during that magnificent convention"

Scottish delegate.

"How can I thank you enough for all the kindness extended during the wonderful, inspiring meeting in Boston."

German delegate.

"I like your American manner of doing business, and am charmed by the genuine hospitality of your homes."

English delegate.

W. H. S. NOTES.

Last Friday the captain of the second basket ball team was elected by the Athletic Association. John Welsh '08 was elected over Leslie Goffe '08 by one vote, the result being 15 to 14. The following players have been retained by Capt. Webber for the first team: Grant, '07, right forward; Collins '09, left forward; Larivee '07, centre; Thompson '08, right back, Webber; '07, left back; Atherton '09, substitue forward, and Sharon '09, substitute back; and for the second team: Goffe '08 right forward; Dover 09, left forward, Howe '08, centre; Little '07, right back; Welch '08 left back.

The cheering at the basket ball games is being led by Redfern '07, who is "making a successful thing of it."

Last Saturday in a long game, the alumni defeated the school hockey team 4 to 2. For the school team the players were: forwards, Whitten '10, left end, Wingate '09, left centre, Foster '09, right centre, Capt. Hunt '07, right end; cover point, Kingsley '09; point, Barr, '08; goal, Richardson '07.

The prizes for the best posters for the plays done by pupils of the school have been awarded as follows: First prize a dollar ticket, to Dana Wingate '09; second prize, a seventy-five cent ticket, to Wales de Bussy '09, third prize, a fifty cent ticket to Beatrice de Bussy.

The High school hockey team defeated Rindge Manuel Training school of Cambridge in the first hockey game of the season, last Wednesday afternoon on Spy Pond, Arlington by the score of 1 to 0. The single score was made by Wingate on a spendid shot, toward the end of the first half.

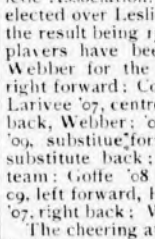

The hockey team has at best got back at Rindge Manual Training school for the defeats of 4 to 0 last year, and 10 to 2 the year before.

Tomorrow afternoon the hockey team plays its second game of the season with Arlington High school in Winchester at at 3.30. Tuesday afternoon the next game is played with Stone's school of Boston in this town at the same time.

The hockey schedule secured by Managers Symmes and Foster is one of the best schedules the school ever had; seven of the games are at home, three of the four away games are on Spy Pond Arlington and the fourth at Milton.

Hon. S. W. McCall and son, Hal, plan to join Mrs. McCall and daughters Katherine and Ruth in Rome next spring.

Mr. Mousoud

By HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright, 1906, by Charles W. Hooke

It had been a bad Saturday for Billy Allenwood. Somebody hadn't come downtown that day. Somebody else, a bookkeeping creature for the other, had no authority to advance money on uncompleted serial stories. Billy made the rounds, but there was no money anywhere, and when he went to take Dorothy Vincent to dinner he had only $3 in his pocket.

Dorothy was an orphan and an heiress. She received a check on the first of every month, but, though there are few characters so strong as not to be affected by security and regularity of income, Dorothy remained a good bohemian and as reckless with money as you could wish your dearest friend to be. She reveled in rich and dainty fabrics, which she transformed by her own art and labor into the most bewitching garments. On this particular evening she wore a tenderly exquisite creation in a gray tone, and carried a little gray purse which contained her all, the sum of 35 cents. This purse was intrusted to Billy's care.

A strange subject of discussion occupied them at dinner and on the way to Dorothy's house. Billy had an opportunity to join with two other men in starting a magazine, of which he was to be editor, but they stipulated that he should contribute $1,500 to the capital. Impossibility is not defined in any dictionary so adequately as by that statement. Billy could not have raised 1,500 cranberries at a dollar a bushel, but Dorothy could raise dollars, and she insisted that she should be permitted to disturb her meager patrimony to the extent required and become a partner in the enterprise. She would lend the money to Billy and go shares with him. To him, however, her little fortune was the only redeeming feature of a world otherwise ill ordered beyond the power of language to describe. He knew what miseries she thus escaped—few men knew better than Billy—and he would sooner have disturbed the law of gravitation which holds us to the world than have dislodged the anchor of Dorothy's safety.

He was telling her so in very eloquent language as they strolled along, when they were suddenly aware of a flurry in the throng and the quick gathering of a crowd. A man had fallen from the platform of a crowded car and now sat on the curbstone, dazed and bleeding. It seemed that there had been an attempt to pick his pocket and that the thief, detected, had pushed his intended victim to the street. As usual, the car had gone on, leaving only the most contradictory rumors in its wake.

The man was under middle age and of a very prosperous appearance, a gentleman evidently, for he showed himself superior to his mishap, even though it had bereft him of a good share of his consciousness. Before any one had raised a hand to help him he got upon his feet with a certain dignity, though the dullness of his eyes showed that his wits were whirling. He found a cardcase in his pocket, after somnambulous fumbling; gave a card to a cabman, and when the door of the vehicle had been opened got in unassisted. Cabby mounted to the box and drove away.

It was only a few blocks from that spot to Dorothy's house. At the door she said, "You have my purse, Billy."

But, alas, he hadn't it.

"Never mind," said she cheerily. "There was next to nothing in it. Good night."

Billy said "Good night" and walked down the street.

"I must have dropped it where that fellow was hurt," said he to himself, and the recollection that the purse was gray, the tint of asphalt paving, gave him absurd encouragement. So he returned to the scene of the accident, praying for a miracle, but he did not find the purse. Instead, he found a sealed envelope, set up against the curb as if by design and most excellently placed to avoid observation. There was nothing either printed or written upon the envelope except this:

Mr Mousoud

Billy held it as almost a certainty that this was a note which had been dropped by the man who had been hurt. Probably it had been dislodged from his pocket when he fell and had remained caught in his clothing while he dragged himself to the curb. So far as Billy could judge, it was precisely in the right spot to fit this hypothesis. He put the note into his pocket and the next moment had forgotten it.

Sunday's papers contained no mention of the accident to Mr. Mousoud. The city directory did not contain his name. In Monday morning's papers Billy placed a small advertisement among the "Lost and Found," but there was no response. All inquiries failed, and in the course of the week Billy put the note away in a drawer of his writing table and forgot it. Far more pressing matters claimed his attention. Dorothy was called to her home in the west, and a harrowing fear tormented Billy that, despite the positive commands that he had laid upon her, she had gone to get money for the magazine. Meanwhile the scheme boiled.

One afternoon, following a conference upon the all important topic, Billy returned to his home so crazed with enthusiasm that, happening to find the lean, old serving maid dusting his room, he began to deliver an oration to her on the subject of magazine publication. His eloquence produced an unexpected effect, for the woman became wildly excited and finally fell to the floor in a sort of fit. Then Billy ran for the landlady, with whose assistance he carried the hysterical servant to her room.

Returning to his own place after this unusual exercise he sat down to reflect upon the strange happenings that had recently varied the monotony of his existence and was presently confronted by one that overtopped the others—topped everything he could remember to have seen outside of dreamland. There was upon the desk a paperweight of painted porcelain, a Christmas present from Dorothy and very dear to his heart. Protruding from beneath it he now beheld something green, and this green substance proved to be four bank notes, each of the denomination of $500.

"Dear, dear little girl," he said aloud, and the tears rushed into his eyes. This was not money any more. It was her love, and he laid down his head on these poor counters in the pretty game of trade and kissed them.

Presently he arose, put the money into his safest pocket and strode away to Dorothy's house, where he was informed that Miss Vincent had not yet returned to town. Billy knew better. He perceived a trick and instantly formulated one of his own. He telegraphed to Dorothy in the west (though he knew she wasn't there) as follows:

I can't take it, Dorothy, but you're the greatest girl in the world.

In the early evening came this reply:

You must. But how did you find out about it? DOROTHY.

To which he responded:

I have the money and will hold it for you. I cannot use it as you wish.

At 1 o'clock in the morning the doorbell clanged, and Billy received this telegram:

Impossible. Did not mail check till today. Can't understand what you mean. DOROTHY.

Billy had not money enough to continue this correspondence by wire without breaking one of the $500 bills, so he wrote a long letter which he mailed about daybreak, and by the last delivery that afternoon he received Dorothy's letter, full of subtle persuasion and inclosing her check for $1,500. Three days later came Dorothy herself, and in the thrilling conversation which ensued she denied in the most explicit manner all knowledge of the larger sum.

It will be remembered that Louis XI. of France had many solemn forms of adjuration, only one of which he held to be binding, and he would never tell which of them it was. Few men have been so clever as Louis, but nearly all women are. Protestation with mental reservation is the natural weapon of the sex. As a student of human nature Billy Allenwood knew this, and, though he held Dorothy to be the flawless pearl of womanhood, he still could not free his mind of the notion that the four big bank notes had once been hers. It was therefore with an indefinable disfavor, a sense of something gone from his own soul, that he at last paid down the $2,000 into the capital of the great scheme.

The $1,500 which was confessedly Dorothy's was placed in bank, but in the early days, when the scheme seemed surely winning, Billy lost his balance wheel, veered to the delusion that he had foolishly shut Dorothy out from the greatest opportunity of her life and at last permitted her to invest her money. Then came the later days, the days of disappointment, of expenses marvelously swollen and receipts miraculously shrunk.

On the blackest of black days, when Billy had left the office merely to get away from it and not because his work was done, he was aware of a reminiscent face in the crowd, and a name leaped into his mind.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said he, "Are you Mr. Mousoud?"

"No," replied the stranger, with a touch of excellent courtesy even in so small a matter.

"I happened to be present when you met with an accident two or three months ago," said Billy, "and afterward I found a letter on the spot," and he described the occurrence.

"It was mine," said the other, who seemed surprised and even more amused. "May I ask what has become of it?"

"I have it at my rooms," answered Billy. "Would you care to come with me and get it?"

"If you were on your way there, yes," said he.

There followed an introduction whereby it appeared that this man was Julian Winser, president of the old Livingstone bank, in which position he had recently succeeded his father, as Billy knew from newspaper reports. Bankers were not popular with Billy just then, for the officials of the bank where the magazine kept its dwindling account had turned a deaf ear to all pleas for accommodation. Yet Mr. Winser seemed a very decent fellow, despite his occupation.

When they came to Billy's room he could not at first remember where he had put the Mousoud envelope, and it was by accident that he found it in a drawer which he had not opened since it was put away.

"WE KNOW THAT YOU OPENED THIS ENVELOPE."

The envelope had been torn and was empty.

Dazed and ashamed, Billy laid it upon the desk without a word, and the two men looked into each other's eyes a moment.

"You have no idea who did this?" said Winser.

Billy shook his head.

"What was in it?" he asked with the dull manner of a discouraged man, and he made a vain search of the drawer.

Winser had not replied. He was bending over the envelope and smiling.

"There is a strange thing about my penmanship," said he at last. "It is always legible, but usually not in the right way. Yes; that's Mr. Mousoud sure enough, but when I wrote it I supposed that it was 'two thousand.'"

The breath went out of Billy in a gasp. He took the envelope out of Winser's hand and stared at the writing.

"Two thousand? Not two thousand dollars?"

"Yes," responded Winser. "I put the money into an envelope and wrote the amount on the outside because I had another—two others, in fact, with different sums."

"I found $2,000 on this desk," said Billy, "and I've lost it."

"Lost it?"

"In a weekly magazine—Truth. Probably you haven't seen a copy. It's a failure."

"You surprise me. It certainly looks prosperous. Did you invest my money there?"

Upon this, Billy told the whole story, and it sounded to him like a lie, but Winser gave no sign of disbelief.

"Of course I should not have used the money without knowing where it came from," said he in conclusion, "but I persuaded myself that somebody had been my good angel. There are two or three men in this city who were close friends of mine in college and are now very rich. Miss Vincent had often heard me speak of them, and though she knew that the acquaintance had been entirely broken off because of the difference of our circumstances she might have found means to communicate my need to one of them. The theory was wild, but so extraordinary an event seemed to excuse a little dreaming. Of course I never connected this money with the Mousoud letter, which I had practically forgotten."

"The money," said Winser, "must have been left on your desk that afternoon when you found it. Had any one been here?"

"I questioned the servant as soon as she was well. She said that a man had called for me twice, but she described a poor devil of an artist—a friend of mine who had been here before. He wasn't the man, however."

Winser took some seconds for reflection and then said:

"I am a good questioner. May I see this servant?"

"Certainly," said Billy, and he rang the bell.

The meager servitor answered the summons promptly.

"Madam," said Winser, "we know that you opened this envelope and took out the money and put a part of it under that paperweight. What did you do with the rest of it?"

She stood rigid for an instant, facing Winser, and then turned to Billy in a blaze of wrath.

"You lie!" she screamed. "You got it—all of it. I never got nothin', and you know it. You came in here that day, and I never was out of the room till you came. That's the truth, and I don't care what you say. The money was in my hand, and I put it on the desk, and you took it, and'—

"That is all that we require," said Winser, and with Billy's help he succeeded in persuading the woman that she was charged with no crime.

"And now, Mr. Allenwood," he resumed when they were alone, "we have cleared up this simple mystery, and the matter stands between us two alone. It seems that I am in a sense a partner in Truth, a very excellent magazine to read, but not to own, as I judge from what you have said. May I venture to intrude a little further into its affairs?"

Billy gave a clear statement of the condition of the magazine, and this was the first of several conferences between them. The final result was that Winser agreed to loan a certain sum of money, with the proviso that he should name a new business manager. What share of the ultimate success of Truth should be credited to Winser's appointee and what share to his financial backing I would not wish to decide, but the magazine is a great property today, as everybody knows. The shares held by Allenwood and Miss Vincent are worth a good deal of money, and there are salaries as well as profits. These interests were recently consolidated by the marriage of the parties, and one of the most prized and most valuable of the wedding presents was from Julian Winser, who assumed for that occasion the name of "Mr. Mousoud."

Millers' Best Customers.

The forty odd million sacks of flour consumed yearly in the United Kingdom are mainly eaten in the form of bread. In the houses of the rich and in the best hotels bread is sparingly eaten, but among the middle classes and in workmen's homes it forms a considerable portion of the diet. As the latter class predominate and as their families are the most numerous, it is not improbable that the children under sixteen consume about three-fifths of the total flour sold in the United Kingdom. In a commercial sense, therefore, the children are the millers' best friends.—London Milling.

Calling the Chickens.

In England the calls cluck, cluck, or coop, coop, prevail; in Virginia, coo-che, coo-chee; in Pennsylvania, pee pee. This latter call is widely employed, being reported from Germany, Spain (as pi, pi), Bulgaria, Hungary, Bavaria and the Tyrol. In the Austrian province the term is used in combination—thus: Pulla, pi, pi. The call pullele, put, put, also occurs there. In some parts of Germany the poultry are called with tick, tick; in Prussia, put, put, and young chickens with tuk, tuk (Grimm), and schip, schip, the latter being an imitation of their own cry. In eastern Prussia hens are called with kluckschen, kluck, kluck; also tippchen, tipp, tipp. Grimm records also pi, pi, and tiet, tiet. Weinhold reports from Bavaria bibi, bibeli, bidli; pi, pi, and put, put. In Denmark the call is pootle; in Holland, kip, kip; in Bohemia, tyoo; in Bulgaria, tiri, tiri.

An Old Medicine.

"Ground oyster shells," said the physician, "were used as a medicine by the mediæval doctors—a medicine for the rickets and scrofula."

"How absurd!"

"Absurd? Not at all. Oyster shells contain lime, nitrogen, iron, sulphur, magnesia, bromide, phosphoric acid and iodine. Those are all excellent tonics. You know how hens eat ground oyster shells and thus produce eggs with good, thick, strong shells? Well, as the oyster shell powder acts on eggshells so I have no doubt it acted in the middle ages on the bending, crumbling bones of the rickety, putting strength and firmness into them. Ground oyster shells, I am convinced, would be good things for frail children today. They would strengthen the frame, increase the appetite and have a splendid effect on the teeth."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

A Curious and Rare Book.

The most curious as well as one of the rarest books known to collectors is the edition of the Vulgate issued by Pope Sixtus V. some time between 1585 and 1590. The book, as Disraeli described it, "fairly swarmed with errata." So numerous were they that a number of printed paper slips containing the proper words were pasted over the errors, and this device proving inefficient on account of the immense number of mistakes, as many of the copies as could be found were called in and destroyed. Only a few remain, and the book with its paper patches commands an extremely high price.

Scott's Narrow Escape.

The world had a narrow escape of never having known a Sir Walter Scott. When a tiny babe he was left in charge of a maid, but the girl's heart was in Edinburgh, whither she wanted to go to rejoin her lover. She was, however, compelled to stay and look after the infant at Sandy Knowe. The girl regarded her charge as an obstacle to be removed and afterward confessed that she carried young Scott up to the Craigs (under a strong temptation of the devil, as she expressed it), fully intending to cut his throat with her scissors and bury him under the moss.

Historic Grapevines.

The celebrated "king's vines" at Fontainebleau, planted under the reign of Henry IV., grow against a wall in the park not far from the castle, and the grapes are highly esteemed by gourmets. Since the republic was established the grapes have always been sold by auction, the proceeds going into the coffers of the minister of finance.

Her Intense Sorrow.

He—I called to see you last evening and the servant told me you were not in. She—Yes; I was sorry to have missed you. He—I thought you must be; I heard you laughing upstairs in such grief stricken tones that I almost wept myself out of sympathy.

The Obstinate Cook.

Father—Cooking schools are of some use after all. This cake is delicious, Daughter—Is it? I thought it would be a terrible failure. Father—Why? Daughter—I told the cook exactly how to make it, and she went and made it some other way.

Counterfeits.

"They bill and coo a good deal."

"That's all a bluff."

"Then you think they are only mock turtledoves?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Tonics.

Willie—Pa, what's a tonic? Pa—It's something you take to brace you up. Willie—Well, what's teutonic—something to brace you too much?

Look beneath the surface. Let not the quality of a thing nor its worth escape thee.—Marcus Aurelius.

WORK OF CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY.

Last Sunday morning, in the Congregational Church, Secretary George A Hood, of the Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society delivered an address in its behalf. He said:

When a Home Missionary Superintendent in North Wisconsin I sent a successful minister to a new town of 3500 population, without any other church because Christians of different denominations had united to make a Congregational Church. He worked three weeks, then came to me and said, "Goodby, I have a call to southern Minnesota."

"But you have just begun work."

"Well, I know, but I can't do anything there without a church building." "Of course not, but that's what you went there for, to build one."

"Why, those people can't build a church, its impossible."

So we figured over the resources of the people, till we both were satisfied that several hundred dollars more would be necessary for a suitable church than could be raised in the town; so I said, "Well, you'll have to ask the Church Building Society for $500."

"Five hundred dollars! Can I get $500? Well, I guess we can work it then." He went back to work, proved to be a leader in baseball and other athletics, built the church with $400 loan instead of the $500 grant as we thought probable, had a revival after the dedication, many of the leading men of the town were converted, the church assumed self-support, and the C. E. Society was doing magnificent missionary work on the out-skirts of that large town. The offer of $500 from the Building Society saved the work. Perhaps this church or even some individual here would have enjoyed giving that $500; well, the Church Building Society has plenty more like it waiting for aid. Most of the Church Building work is about like this, except that it is often done in poorer regions, with more sacrifice and harder labor.

1. This incident illustrates our union style of church work. Federation of Christians for Christian work in a new town is the pride and joy of Congregationalists. When our Year-Book shows that 48 per cent. of the churches organized are dropped from the list every year, mostly for lack of shelter and help when young, we repudiate our obligations to equip the town with Gospel privileges, we disappoint the Christians who are ambitious to have a moral, church-going town, we lose the money and the workers of the future, and this is the reason why we are one of the smaller denominations.

2. This story shows that we may expect a revival after the dedication of the church.

3. The incident illustrates that the church may assume self-support in a few years. All my North Wisconsin new churches would have had to wait nine months for aid in building if I had not come East and raised the money for them. All of them were self-supporting in less than four years. Churches with a new building will by raising more for their home expenses and taking less Home Missionary aid every $100 from the Church Building Society saves $100 for the Home Missionary Society in three or four years, and so your Church Building money works with a double power.

4. This also illustrates how it saves the home missionary's strength if he can have prompt and sufficient church building aid. I asked a Montana missionary recently to tell me the toughest experience of all his home missionary work; he replied, "O, building that church nearly killed me." There is no other one line of missionary difficulties that will so quickly break down the missionary and discourage the people of the church as this inability of the Church Building Society to help them for nine months, while the men whom the church owes are calling it a dead-beat church and forbidding their families to attend, and the minister is begging from store to store and from door to door for money to prevent losing the new building because the creditors cannot wait any longer. One of our missionaries said recently, "If I cannot have aid from the Home Missionary Society and the Church Building Society both, send me that building money and send it quick." Another one said, "The church building is not everything, but it is that without which everything in which we wish to succeed comes to nothing."

5. This incident shows two impossibilities and a half. It is impossible for a church to succeed without a building; impossible for settlers in the new town who have homes and business and everything to provide at once to build without aid and the Church Building Society for fifty years has been able to aid only half of the churches organized, instead of building a church for everyone organized as do the other leading denominations.

The Rev. Charles Gordon Ames, D. D., who is to preach at the Unitarian Church next Sunday is regarded as one of the ablest men in the denomination. When in 1889, he succeeded James Freeman Clarke, as pastor of the Church of the Disciples, the Boston Herald said editorially, "It is being asked if Dr. Ames is able to fill Dr. Clarke's place. We think not. But we also think that Dr. Clarke could not fill Dr. Ames' place. Each man has his own work to do, and has his own personality with which to do it." A wise remark.

It is hard to think what to give a man for Christmas, the problem is solved if you go to Athertons', 11 Pleasant street.

Winchester had three alarms of fire during the past week, the first for some time. During the firemen's ball on Friday night box 44 was rung in at about half-past ten for a chimney fire in a house on Kirk street occupieed by Michael Shaugnessy—no damage. Shortly after midnight on the same evening the extreme cold broke a wire on Main street near Whitney's mill, and on the following Saturday night police officer Harrold discovered a fire in a green house owned by Marshall Symmes at Symmes corner. This was extinguished with chemicals and was caused by an over heated boiler.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

We understand that there is a rule on the Boston & Maine Railroad forbidding two trains to pass at stations, and if avoidable, on street crossings. If there is such a rule, it has been broken many times during the past week in this town. We witnessed during the week no less than three narrow escapes from trains passing at the station and at the centre. Two young school girls almost stepped directly in front of an express train at the station on Thursday morning, and had they been killed the engineer would have been responsible for while he stopped his train before reaching the station, he started up rapidly and pulled in before the other train had departed.

The holly boxes come all sizes this year and many are using them to put their gifts into. Wilson the Stationer carries a full supply.

Committee on Grade Crossing Not Ready to Report.

Ask for an Adjournment in Order to Fully Study Question.

The adjourned special town meeting was held last Monday evening at which time it was expected the special committee on abolition of the grade crossing would be ready to report. The committee, however, on taking up this question found it of so far reaching importance and so many vital points to be considered, that they came to the conclusion last week that it would be impossible to report at the adjourned meeting of Monday evening. This fact was printed in last week's STAR with the result that there was an attendance of only about a dozen citizens.

Arthur H. Russell, Esq., the Moderator, called the meeting to order, whereupon Geo. Adams Woods, Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, moved that the meeting adjourn to Feb. 11. At that time, he said, the committee would be prepared to report.

Mr. Henry F. Johnson favored dissolving the meeting and calling a special meeting when the committee was ready to report. His object in offering the suggestion was to prevent carrying the meeting over into the new year, a proceeding he had never before known.

Mr. Woods stated that the vote of the first meeting required the committee to report at an adjournment of that meeting; to dissolve now, and call another special meeting later would, he believed, complicate matters and he though cause the discharge of the committee. Under these circumstances he believed it better to adjourn to the date recommended by the committee.

Upon the motion being put it was voted to adjourn to Feb. 11, at 7.45 o'clock.

The meeting was the shortest, and perhaps the smallest in point of attendance, on record – the session lasting less than ten minutes. This was due to the announcement in last week's STAR that the committee would ask for an adjournment, and shows the extent to which this paper is read by the citizens of Winchester.

STRUCK BY RUNAWAY.

Last Friday afternoon a horse owned by C. H. Symmes became frightened while standing in front of a house on Washington street and ran away. The animal ran to the centre without mishap, and turning the corner started up Main street. Mr. Philip Crawford was crossing the tracks in the centre, and seeing the approaching animal attempted to get out of the way. He dodged behind one of the gates, and as he did so the wagon slewed and struck it, jamming Mr. Crawford's arm and bruising him badly. He was thought to be badly hurt, but examination proved that there were no serious injuries. He is expected to be able to leave his bed in a few days. The horse was caught after striking the gate, the iron support of which was smashed. The animal was not hurt. It was a miracle that Mr. Crawford was not killed in the accident.

W. H. S. NOTES.

The hockey game scheduled with Arlington for last Saturday, was postponed until Wednesday on account of the poor condition of the ice.

The December or Christmas number of the "High School Recorder" came out today. The prizes for the best stories written by members of the school were won by Beatrice de Bussy '07 Ernest M. Symmes '07, and Thomas Hemenway '08, a close third.

Wednesday the High school team easily defeated the Boston College High school 35 to 9. The High school team did not "strike their gait" until the second half, the first being very close, but after that there was no question as to which would be the winner. The team play of both teams was good but that of the High School better. Capt. Webber and Grant excelled for Winchester, while Capt. Guthrie of the visitors played well.

At a meeting of the Athletic Association a week ago Wednesday, Welch '08, resigned from the captaincy of the second basket ball team and Goffe '08, was elected in his place.

The next basket ball game will take place to night with the strong Lowell High team at 8 o'clock. Between the halves the second team will play the Lowell H. S.

At a meeting of the Athletic Association last Tuesday, it was voted to abolish complementary tickets to the basket ball games given to the friends of the players. The reason for this is, that the tickets are given to persons who would come to the games anyway, and therefore the A. A. loses over $30 during the season.

The next hockey game will take place with Cambridge Latin school tomorrow afternoon on Spy pond Arlington.

ARLINGTON H. S. 2. WINCHESTER H. S. 0.

Arlington High school defeated the local High school in hockey in a very close game on Mystic pond, last Wednesday afternoon. The Arlington team, which was the inter-scholastic champion last year, was only able to secure their two goals in scrimmages before the High school goal, where both teams were hitting at the puck.

Clifford and Grey played well for the winners, while Whitten put up the best game for the High school.

CHRISTMAS VACATION.

The fall term of the schools closes today, Friday. The winter term begins Wednesday, January 2, 1907.

CHIEF McINTOSH'S OPINION OF PRESENT LAW.

The following is a reply to a letter from Mr. J. Albert Brackett who is preparing a new automobile bill to be presented to the incoming legislature:

Winchester, Mass., Nov. 22, 1906.

To the Board of Selectmen:

Gentlemen,—In answer to a communication referred to me, my report is as follows:

First, I think the reasonable and proper limitation, as made by the law of 1906, a good one, for several reasons, viz., it was evidently the intention of the old law, which regulated the speed to ten miles an hour, to stop the reckless running of motor vehicles, and when as a matter of fact was not really reckless running, it has given the officer a chance to use his own judgment and discretion as to what is reckless driving, and what is safe running of a motor vehicle.

Second, It gives an officer a better chance to get at reckless drivers when going around sharp curves or at intersections of streets, or any other place where in his opinion the driver is not using due care for the safety of others. In these cases, he is not under the necessity of actually timing them, and his testimony given in a court that a person is going at a reckless or unsafe speed is usually sufficient to satisfy the court on that point, so on the whole, I think that part of the law is satisfactory.

In regard to the provision of section 7, providing that no evidence procured by the officer from the person controlling the vehicle shall be used against the person giving it, it strikes me as being hardly fair for the reason, i. e., it discriminates in favor of the owner who, by a recent decision of the Supreme Court, is liable if the acts of his chaffeur are committed in his presence, in most cases an owner is liable for his agent's acts, and in every criminal act a person is liable for any statement he makes, except in a murder case, when the person should be warned that any statement he may make may be used against him, therefore, I say it is unfair to discriminate in favor of a person who may have the charge of a motor vehicle, as against anyone else who is guilty of a misdemeanor.

I might say in closing that there is of course a way to get evidence from the driver or person having control. I do not seriously object to even that clause in the section referred to.

Yours very truly,

WILLIAM R. McINTOSH,
Chief of Police.

N. B.—I have no suggestion to make in regard to the law as it now stands.

ALUMNI NIGHT AT THE HIGH SCHOOL.

Thursday evening, Dec. 27th, will be observed as Alumni Night at the High school.

The exercises will consist of class meetings in the various rooms of the building followed by a general meeting of the Alumni in the Assembly Hall when will be discussed the question of continuing the meetings of the association which have been interrupted for several years.

Classes which wish to hold meetings will apply to the Principal of the High school for room assignments.

Mr. Edwin A. Wallace, brother of the late Mrs. C. E. Conant formerly of this town, died at Salem on Sunday.

FILTH IN THE RIVER.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The STAR lately called attention to a dirty lot of rubbish which some patriotic citizen had deposited on the ice near the Pleasant street bridge All of the stuff which would float has now reached Main street at its junction with the State Parkway and it is now on exhibition in the water together with additions made by other patriotic citizens. A great deal of it seems to be small branches of trees which some one has cut and to save the trouble of burning the rubbish has cast it into the pond for some one else to care for. The writer called upon the owner of the neighboring mill privilege to see what could be done about the matter but he claimed that as he had several times notified the selectmen and the police that they ought to stop such nuisences, and had given them full power in writing to stop them, he did not feel at all responsible for what his neighbors did to polute the water of the town ponds. As he expressed it, it was not his place "to clean out the town spittoons," if the town people use the ponds for spittoon purposes with no thought of whose place it is to clean them. I understand that a committee has been appointed by the town to care for the ponds and it is to be hoped that they can bring about some plan to stop such unauthorized polution of Winchester ponds. It is something the public has a great interest in and it should be attended to very soon or an enlarged Russell's brook will be on our hands flowing right through the town center.

HEALTHFULNESS.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

December 17th, 1906.

Board met at 7.45 p. m.

All present.

Records read and approved.

Dennis Foley appeared in regard to changing name of Sand Hill street; was told that as the said street was a private way the Board had no jurisdiction in the matter.

Voted that Mr. Richards be a committee of one to investigate and report on the condition of the road roller, necessity for repairs on same, and the probable cost of same.

Voted that the Town Engineer make an inspection of all private ways in the town, and erect "private way" signs where there are none at present.

Voted that the Board meeting of Monday, December 24th, next, be held at 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Voted that the Boston & Northern St. Ry Company be requested to send a representative to talk over with the Board matters pertaining to the improvement of the service on the Arlington-Reading line.

Voted that Mr. Rowe be a committee of one to talk with the Collector of Taxes on the question of unpaid taxes.

Voted that a copy of the report of the Chief of Police in regard to speed of automobiles be sent to J. Albert Bracket, Esq., in answer to his communication in regard to same.

Warrants drawn for $1399.32 and $5342.83.

Adjourned at 10.30 p. m.

G. H. LOCHMAN, Clerk.

A TIMELY WARNING.

The thaw of the past day or two reminds us that it is an opportune time to repeat that necessary warning, which cannot be dinned too often into the ears of parents, to keep their children off the ponds until the ice becomes perfectly safe for skating. During the cold snap early last week the ice on several small ponds was solid enough for skating and many enjoyed it, but it may save a great sorrow if the advice we give above is followed for awhile.

Every year it is the same old tale. Bright, manly young fellows, who wish to appear a little more daring than the others, or whose parents have failed in their duty of compelling them to remain off the ice until thicker, meet a sad death by getting through the ice and being drowned before assistance arrives.

Try and make the youngsters realize the danger of such an occurence. There will undoubtedly be plenty of skating before the winter departs. You know, parents, that you would never forgive yourselves should a catastrophe be brought home to you and you had failed in your duty.—[Woburn Times.

DR. DENNETT MARRIED.

Dr. Daniel Clement Dennett and Miss Elizabeth Redfern, daughter of Mr and Charles E. Redfern, were quietly united in marriage on Saturday evening at the bride's parents on Hillside avenue. The ceremony was private and of a very simple nature, being performed by Rev. D. A. Newton of the First Congregational Church, assisted by Rev. Wm. I. Lawrance of the Unitarian Church.

Congressman Roberts and Supt. Kirkland are in conference in Washington and an appropriation of considerable size to fight the moths in this state may result.

CHRISTMAS AT THE CHURCHES.

How this Important Religious Event will be Observed.

The Programs of Music and Other Interesting Features.

UNITARIAN CHURCH.

At the morning service, next Sunday, Mr. Lawrance will preach on "The Christmas Message." The musical numbers will be as follows: Organ, Pastorale, Foote; Anthem, "Arise, Shine," Elvey; Bass Solo, Mr. T. N. Shufelt. Anthem, "It came upon the mid-night clear," Goodrich. Organ, selection from Handel.

The usual Sunday School hour, at noon, will be spent in final preparation for the Christmas Festival, which will be held in Metcalf Hall at 4 o'clock. At this service there will be a processional and a recessional, carols and recitations. Mrs. Ruth Capen Farmer will read a poem, with refrain by the school. Mrs. F. W. Cole will sing Niedlinger's "O quiet night, O holy night" The session will close with a Candle Service, such as has been observed at the Christmas tide for centuries by the Moravians. Candles for the purpose have been procured from Bethlehem, Pa., made by the Moravians. The Cradle Roll, numbering about forty, will be represented by smaller tapers.

On Monday, at 3 p. m., the Children's Christmas Party will be held in Metcalf Hall. Twenty girls from the poorer parts of Boston will be the guests of the parish children. There will be songs, a recitation by Mrs. F. B. Rynolds, and an exhibition of magic by Mrs. E. M. Young.

A play entitled "The Merry Christmas of the old Woman who Lived in a Shoe" will be given, followed by a Christmas Tree and the distribution of gifts. Parents are requested to come with their children.

All who can do so are requested to bring toys, dolls, books and playthings in good condition, to Metcalf Hall tomorrow, Saturday, between 2 and 4 p. m. These will be given to the little girls from Boston, on Monday.

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

The Christmas services and observance at the Episcopal Church open Sunday morning with the morning prayer and sermon at 10.30, followed by the usual Sunday School at 12.15. At 4.30 in the afternoon Mr. Joshua Phippen will give an Organ Recital at the church which promises to be one one of the events of the day's services. The following is the programme:

Fugue on the name of "Bach," Schumann
Finale, Mendelssohn
Benediction, Saint-Saens
Cantilene, Dubois
Allegro, Phippen
Bercouse, Chopin

At 5 o'clock will be the evening prayer and address.

On Monday the children's carol service and Christmas tree will be at 4 p. m. The children will bring presents to this service, which will be sent to poor children in Boston.

At 8 a. m. on Christmas Day the Holy Communion will be observed, and at 10.30 TeDeum, Holy Communion and sermon.

Offertory,	"Adeste Fideles"	Novello
Sanctus	Mass in F	Rosewig
Agnus Dei	Mass in F	Rosewig

Organist, Miss Mary E. Holland.

SECOND CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

The Christmas services will be held on Sunday evening at the Highlands, at 7 o'clock. The sermon will be preached by the pastor, Rev. C. A. S. Dwight, upon "Christmas Cheer."

The usual morning service will be held at 11, with a sermon by the pastor.

The Sunday School will hold its Christmas entertainment on Christmas day afternoon, with a tree for the children.

STILL REMEMBERS WINCHESTER.

In accordance with his usual custom each Christmas-time, Mr. Thomas W. Lawson has made arrangements for the distribution of his now famous Christmas boxes to many families in Winchester. One hundred and ten boxes are to be distributed among a list which has been made up and filed. The boxes will contain all the usual goodies and necessities for a first class Christmas dinner and as in years past more than one family in town will be indebted for its only observance of Christmas to the generosity of Mr. Lawson.

An effort is being made by Winchester people to have the 10.15 train from Boston Sunday evening held until 10.30 on account of the Oratorio Messiah that night.

Miss Phylis Swazey of Norwood street is home for her Christmas vacation. She attends a normal school in Framingham.

Christmas week promises to be a very gay one for the young people of Winchester. The Sigma Beta dance on the 26th, the N. K. on the 27th, the High School plays on the 28th, and ending with the Phi Delta dance on New Years eve.

"PRACTICAL IDEALS IN EVANGELISM."

Such is the title of the latest book of the Rev. C. H. Rust, formerly a Winchester boy, author of "A Church on Wheels," etc., who for ten years conducted evangelistic services in one of the six handsome chapel cars under Baptist auspices along the railroads of the great Northwest, who for the past year has been State Evangelist in New York, and who this month begins the pastorate of a large church in Rochester, N. Y. During all the these years Mr. Rust has been eminently successful in evangelistic work, and has given the subject of evangelism most careful thought and study, so that he is peculiarly qualified to write upon this live theme. And he treats it in a very live, sane, and practical sort of way, and wins the reader at the start by his sensible view of things. In this bright, helpful and inspiring volume the whole subject of evangelism is so illuminated that the Christian worker feels that he can begin to work just where he is, and do something for the Lord. The reader has the benefit of Mr. Rust's years of great success in this work, and no Christian worker of any kind can afford to be without this book, for it brings evangelism down out of cloud-land into the realm of practical daily life for the practical Christian. Price 70 cents. Copies may be secured from the Baptist pastor.

CALUMET LADIES' NIGHT.

Ladies' Night was observed at the Calumet Club on Tuesday evening with a concert at the club house. The program included singing by the Park Male Quartette and Miss Alice C. Pillsbury, mezzo soprano, and violin selections by Miss Mary G. Kellogg of this town. Notwithstanding the cold of the evening a good number of members and friends were in attendance, and greatly enjoyed the fine music.

Following was the program:

Hark the Trumpet — Buck
Park Quartet
a Aria — Rehfeld
b Madrigal—opus 26 — A. L'Ambrosia
Miss Kellogg
Orpheus with his lute — Sullivan
Mr. Hall
a Out in the open meadow — Stewart
b I drink the fragrance of the Rose — Clough-Leighter

Miss Pillsbury
Good Night — Macy
Park Quartet.

The housewives of Winchester have tough times in finding and retaining kitchen maids. The female help demand the highest of wages; limit their duties to a minimum; must have about every afternoon and evening to themselves and their beaux; detest children; and will "take no sass" from the mistress. She is "It," with a nub to it.—[Woburn Journal.

URGES TAX ON BILL BOARDS.

A tax on billboards is to be one feature of the bill which Representative William E. Weeks of Everett purposes to introduce in the House at the opening of the next Legislature. Mr. Weeks' idea is to make the signboards smaller and prettier rather than to permit them to grow elephantine and more ugly. His idea is that the signboard is a nuisance which ought to be made remunerative to the community which is obliged to endure it. Mr. Weeks remarked that he would frame his bill to provide that all signboards should be taxed so much per foot of surface, and that the tax thus assessed should go to the city or town in which the boards are located.

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

There will be an Organ Recital on Sunday afternoon at half past four o'clock by Mr. Joshua Phippen.

There will be a rehearsal of carols on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock at the church by the children of the Kindergarten and Primary classes.

The Christmas services will be as in former years. The Children's Carol Service and Christmas Tree on Christmas Eve at 4 p. m. The children of the Sunday School and parish are asked to bring presents to this service and these will be collected and sent to some of the City Mission Christmas Trees.

Christmas Day the services will be 8 a. m., Holy Communion, and at 10 30 a. m., TeDeum, Holy Communion and Sermon.

BOSTON PIN LEAGUE.

Calumet took a tumble Tuesday evening when it visited the Medford Club and lost three points out of the four. Apparently the big score which the team put up in the house tournament on the previous night was too much for it, as the bowling was only ordinary. Purrington's 281 was high for the home team.

The score:

MEDFORD.	1	2	3	Totals
Teel	106	107	82	295
Lalley	93	88	84	275
Wylie	97	76	82	256

MASSACHUSETTS AGITATORS.

The Massachusetts Republican congressional brethren are once more in a peck of trouble about tariff revision. They do not like the looks of the returns in the old Bay State at the last election. They think they see breakers ahead and imagine they can hear the roar; hence they are agitating once more for a caucus—a Republican caucus, mark you—to consider tariff revision. They have about as much chance to secure tariff revision from Uncle Joe and his coterie of ruling elders as they have to fly without wings and without a flying machine. It will be remembered that at the last session the Massachusetts Republican representatives undertook to secure the fifty necessary signatures to a petition to call a Republican caucus to consider tariff revision. After they had been working at it for a week or two I met Jim Watson—or more properly speaking, Hon. James E. Watson—of Indiana, the Republican whip, and asked him how Hon. Samuel W. McCall and others of Massachusetts were getting on securing the fifty signatures, whereupon James remarked: "Oh, hell! They couldn't get half of them to save their lives." And James E. was correct. Whether they will succeed any better this time remains to be seen. If Massachusetts Republicans really want tariff revision, the sensible thing to do is to vote the Democratic ticket. They will wake up to that fact some day.—[Congressman Clark.

A SILVER MEDAL.

Lysander S. Richards, Marshfield's historian, presents annually a silver medal to the best scholar in the High School and another to the best scholar in the grammar schools in Marshfield, at the high school graduation. The last graduation in June was the third year presented.

The medals are given for excellence in character, scholarship and attendance. They are judged and awarded by the School Superintendent and School Committee. Printed stipulations, framed, are hung up in every school room in town and headed "Richard's Medal Conditions." It has proven a great stimulant to the pupils in their studies, character and attendance.

Shall We Tan Your Hide?

The average Stock Raiser hardly realizes the value of cow, steer and horse hides when converted into fur coats, robes and rugs. Get the new illustrated catalogue of the Crosby Frisian Fur Co., Rochester, N. Y. It will be a revelation to you. And "Crosby pays the freight."

A celebrated New York physician has estimated that the average man eats 54,000 meals in his lifetime, and says that at that rate he wastes a great deal of provender. If each meal weighs a pound he has put into his alimentary canal twenty-seven tons of food. But some men are not lucky enough to be able to get their pound a day estimated, and is lucky if he secures half that amount.

If your steam or hot water heating is not giving satisfaction, you should call up by telephone or write Edward C. Parker, 8 Middlesex Street, Woburn. This work is his specialty, and some of the best systems in town were installed by him.

BASKET BALL.

The High school team defeated a scrub team from Melrose school in the local High school gymnasium, last Friday evening to the tune of 63 to 1. From the start of the game it was apparent that the High school would undoubtedly win, but at the end of the first half when the score stood 27 to 1, it was the universal thought how much the final score would be.

The High school five shot almost at will, the guarding of the Melrose team being wretched, but if one half the throws had resulted in baskets the score would have been nearly twice as much, for time after time the ball hit the rim of the basket. Each man of the High school team with the exception of Capt. Webber threw three baskets from the floor during the first half. The lone score of Melrose came toward the end of the first half on a try for a goal from a foul, by Wentworth.

In the second half everything went the High school's way, and seventeen baskets from the floor were thrown in the fifteen minutes of play. The basket shooting in this half came down to a contest between Larivee and Grant, Grant winning in the last three minutes of play getting seven to Larivee's six. At the middle of the half, Atherton and Sharon substituted for Collins and Thompson, both of them showing up well.

The High school team-play during the game was almost perfect, and finely executed. The guarding put up was the best that was ever seen in the High school gymnasium, Melrose scarcely being able to shoot for the basket a dozen times. Each man of the High school team put up a great game, but in the matter of points, Grant lead, making 23, and Larivee 18, Bean and Stafford played the best for Melrose.

The summary:

W. H. S.		MELROSE B. B. T.
Grant	rf	lb Clark
Collins	lf	rb Stafford
Atherton	lf
Larivee	c	c Wentworth
Thompson	rb	lf Kirk
Sharon	rb
Webber (Capt.)	lb	rb Bean

Score, W. H. S. 63, Melrose B. B. T. 1. Goals from the floor made by, Grant 10, Larivee 9, Collins 4, Webber 3, Thompson 3, Atherton. Goals from fouls made by Grant 3, Wentworth. Referee, Mobbs. Umpire, Mitchell. Timer, Petts. Time, 15 minute halves.

Between the halves of the High school game, the Second defeated the Boy's Chapter Club of Arlington in an extremely rough game, 24 to 7.

The Boy's Chapter team scored five points in the first half before the High school second "found its gait," but after that they were only able to score a basket in the second half, the score at the end of the first half standing 11 to 5 for the second team through some splendid team playing scored 13 points to their opponents 2.

The game was one of the roughest ever played in the High school gymnasium, many fouls being called for holding.

Capt. Goffe of the second team was the star of the game, throwing eight baskets from the floor and two from fouls, in fact, making 18 of his team's 24 points.

The summary:

W. H. S. 2nd		B. C. C. Arlington
Goffe	rf (Capt.)	lb Tole
		Smith
Dover	lf	rb Gee
Howe	c	c Turner (Capt.)
		Tole
Little	rb	lf Smith
Cummings		Turner
Welch	lb	Stingel
		Turner

Goals from floor made by Goffe 8, Welch 2, Howe, Smith, Turner, Tole. Goals from fouls made by, Goffe 2, Tole. Referee, Mobbs. Umpires, Mansell, Lutes. Timer, Petts. Time, 15 minute halves.

The many Malden friends of Miss Lucy W. Bishop, the well known piano teacher of Winchester and Malden, are besieging her with requests to repeat the performance in this city of the operetta, "Little Boy Blue; or The Tale of the Ridiculous Cow," which she so sucessfully gave in Winchester, last Friday evening, with forty of that town's most talented children to the largest audience that ever crowded into Metcalf hall, in fact that could crowd in.—[Malden Mirror.

Albert F. Hunt, who was elected Mayor of Newburyport, had no organization behind himself. He plead his cause (the cause of the people) solely in his newspaper, the Newburyport Item. Not only did the city elect a reform mayor but it voted no-license. Many years' acquaintance with Editor Hunt convinces us that he will do all he said he would for Newburyport.

ON THE NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS

¶ They say St. Nick keeps a Reginaphone going on his sleigh. He likes it — and he knows. Nothing — dolls, toys, playthings, nothing will please the little ones as a Reginaphone will. It plays all kinds of music for them, then talks a while, sings a song, recites a monologue — changes from one to the other in a jiffy. And a child can "run it." The Reginaphone is several instruments in one. The price is just a bit more than the price of either alone. It's a mighty good Christmas present for young or old.

¶ Worthy of your attention also is the Regina piano; an excellent piano and the latest and most approved player combined. We also make the Regina Chime Clocks, which strike the hours on sweet-toned chimes. A complete line of Victor Talking Machines and Records always in stock. We will be glad to explain our easy payment plan to those who so desire. Write for catalogues.

A VISIT TO "CENTRAL."

How the N. E. Tel. & Tel. Co. Handles Its Business.

Monday the members of the Massachusetts Press Association and their ladies were the guests of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. at a luncheon served at the new American House, Boston. The party numbered about 100 and were well looked after by officers of the company. After the very excellent luncheon, previous to which a business meeting of the Association was held, carriages were taken for the new Telephone Exchange building on Milk street, where the party was divided into groups and under escort of well informed guides, initiated into the mysteries of telephony. It proved to be a revelation in witnessing the methodical manner in which the vast business of this company is handled. No noise, no excitement and no confusion were noticeable among the hundred of girls assembled in front of the mammoth switchboards connecting subscribers. To see these girls hard at work is sure to bespeak courteous treatment to them when at such times we become impatient by thinking that our requests are not being promptly attended to. It is said that the people in the Boston district use more telephones, population considered, than in any other part of the country.

The exchange plant begins with the cable tunnel through which the bundles of lead sheathing wires from the conduits under the streets are brought into the building. It is a long brick lined passage leading from the cellar out under the street, the cables being laid on racks or hung in supports on either side. From the tunnels the cables are carried up a big shaft to the terminal room. Here the wires are separated, passed through the protective devices which prevent stray currents from getting into the delicate apparatus of the exchange, and paired together in circuits, carried to their proper places in the switchboard.

The wires from the cables are attached to one side of the rack called the distributing frame, while to the other side are connected wires from the switchboard. Between the two sides are what are known as "jumpers"—short pieces of wire one end of which is attached to the cable side of the frame, the other end being fastened to the switchboard side. The "jumpers" are movable and by means of them any outside circuit, with a few moments work, can be connected to any set of "multiples" in the switchboard. Every operator must have a switch socket for each subscriber's line within her reach, so as to be able to connect with anybody asked for, and these circuits, repeated over and over again, the length of the board, are called the multiples.

In the terminal room is also the big storage battery from which current for talking, ringing and signalling is supplied and the dynamos which generate the electricity on the circuits to its various purposes an ingenious little device called a relay is employed, and at the intermediate frame each subscriber's line is "branched" so as to take in the relays on its way. The relay coils are wound with wire so fine that, insulation and all, it is no larger than ordinarily heavy cotton thread, while it takes four miles of it to make a pound.

The operating room is an object lesson to every telephone user. That of "Main" is one of the largest in the country. The great switchboard, with 9,000 lines connecting more than 14,000 subscribers, requires nearly 200 operators at the busy hour, besides the 20 girls at the secondary switchboard, where calls for "Main" subscribers made from other exchanges are connected up.

The number of subscribers whose calls a single operator can attend to varies according to the amount of use to which each subscriber puts the telephone, but obviously it must be limited, never exceeding 100 and frequently being as small as ten. Every operator must, however, have within her reach a means of connecting the ten or a hundred subscribers who call up at her position with any of the rest of the 14,000 they may ask for.

At the bottom of the board, where it comes directly under the operator's hand as she sits before the apparatus on a rather high chair, projects a shelf in which are the cords used to connect one line with another, the signal lamps which show when a subscriber answers and when either of the persons using a circuit hangs his telephone up, and the keys and buttons for cutting the operator into and out of the circuits and for ringing. This mechanical equipment is as perfect as the experience of 30 years applied by the highest ingenuity of today can make it, but its full efficiency can be obtained only by carefully trained operators, for the exchange is not the restful place telephone users are sometimes inclined to think it. Some months ago the New England Company opened a school for operators, that its service might have the benefit of being in the hands of skillful people trained to a degree of perfection that was impossible in the days when new operators received instruction by observation and practice in a working exchange.

Though many telephone users do not realize it—for a few seconds seems like an hour when one is anxious or in a hurry—the regular monthly tests made by the company show that on the average Central answers calls in five seconds; it takes five or six seconds more for her to repeat the number she is given, connect with the proper circuit, and ring; and, as a rule, the subscriber "at the other end of the line" responds within another 15 or 20 seconds. When she is given a number to call Central touches the tip of the plug on a connecting cord to the rim of the proper "jack." If the line wanted is in use the mere touching of the plug to it automatically gives her a signal, and she reports accordingly to the calling subscriber. If she does not get this signal she "plugs in" and rings. If there is no response within 30 seconds she rings again, and at the end of 50 seconds more she rings a third time. Then if no one responds she reports "They don't answer"; but if the subscriber wishes she will continue ringing until he is satisfied it is impossible to get a reply. The work of the operators is constantly under close observation, there being to each nine operators one supervisor whose duty it is to see that the work of the exchange goes smoothly and that the operators live up to the rules of the office in all respects.

Besides the local operating room there is at "Main" a toll operating room where calls for parts of New England beyond the 49 offices of the Boston suburban district are handled. Through this part of the plant 15,000 messages a day pass, all the toll business from all the exchanges in the metropolitan and suburban district being conducted here. The New England Company has 400 exchanges connecting 250,000 subscribers in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts, and the volume of traffic increases every month. The long distant lines, extending all over the country wherever the bell system reaches, are operated by themselves in a third room.

An interesting feature of the exchange is the provision made for the health and comfort of its employees. Every girl has her own individual telephone set which is kept carefully separated from anyone's else. Lockers of expanded steel are provided for the operators to hang their clothing in. The tour of duty of eight hours is broken in the middle by a luncheon hour and the operator gets a recess of 15 or 20 minutes half way through the period before luncheon and another similar recess after luncheon. That they may spend their time off duty in the exchange pleasantly, a rest room is provided for the girls—a room cosily furnished and supplied with good reading.

A luncheon room with gas stoves, a constant supply of hot water, and so on, is at the disposal of operators who prefer not to leave the building until they are through for the day. The company furnishes hot coffee and chocolate free during the cold weather and there is always on duty a matron to lend assistance and counsel. A very popular feature of this side of the company's work during the warmer months is a roof garden on the high building in Milk street, opened last summer.

PUTS HEATING OF CARS UP TO COMMISSIONERS.

Mr. John H. Carter has filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives a petition for legislation to strike out the last sentence of sec. 91 of art. 3 of chap. 463 acts of 1906, relative to the heating of cars upon the street railways, the last sentence being, "The district police shall cause the provisions of this section to be enforced."

The striking out of this sentence would leave the enforcement of the law in regard to the heating of the cars in the hands of the railroad commissioners.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

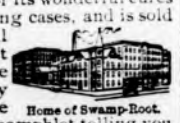

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

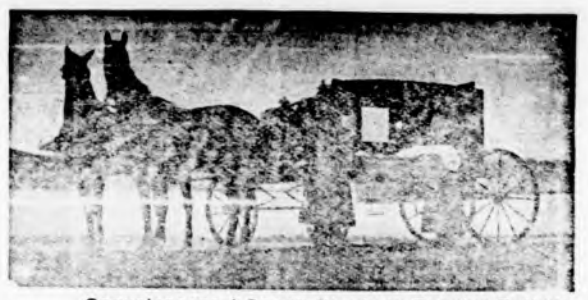

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

The Tendency is Upward.

The postoffice department has now increased its prices for lock boxes, the raise being from 75 cents to $1 a quarter. The tendency is to increase prices on every thing. One of the large paper houses in Boston sends out a notice this month for the first time in its history that "Prices are subject to change without notice."

Collector Bell to Retire.

Tax Collector Aaron C. Bell, who has faithfully served the town for many years, announces that he will not be a candidate for re-election at the March meeting. The constantly multiplying duties of the office and the close confinement make it necessary for the prolongation of his health that he should seek a change and rest—two things he has not enjoyed for many years. Mr. Bell during his entire time as Collector has been a faithful and painstaking official, and has kept in touch with methods prevailing in adjacent cities and towns and what he considered best was adopted by him.

Mr. Bell has had a valuable assistant in his son, Mr. Clyde W. Bell, who has been his father's right hand man for many years, and who has long been thoroughly familiar with all the details of the office. He will aspire to be his father's successor at the annual election in March.

The very large response to the beautiful line of goods which we called attention to in the last week's issue of the STAR proves that our townspeople appreciate the great advantages of trading at home and avoiding the extra time and annoyance of the crowds in Boston. Our much larger store and very complete assortment of choice goods in men's and boys' furnishings are at the very lowest Boston prices, and in many instances lower than Boston prices. Save your time and strength, and look us over before you go out of town to buy. Athertons', 11 Pleasant street.

Mr. Harold Randlett of Worcester Academy is at home with his parents on Norwood street for his Christmas vacation.

Knocking a King.

Henry IV., the idol of the French people, was once a victim of theatre makers. During one of his tours through France he arrived at a small village and ordered that the most intelligent villager be sent to converse with him while he dined. When the rustic appeared the king ordered him to take a seat opposite to him at the table. "What is your name?" asked the monarch. "Sire, I am called Gaillard," replied the peasant. "What is the difference," said the king, "between gaillard" (i. e., a jolly fellow) "and paillard" (i. e., a rake)? "Sire," was the reply, "there is but a table between me and you."

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Mrs. C. H. Sleeper entertained twelve ladies at luncheon on Tuesday. Whist was enjoyed in the afternoon.

Mr. Robert F. Whitney has returned from a trip to Virginia.

Two new houses will soon be built on Copley street.

Mr. C. M. Partelow of East Boston has leased the house at 20 Dix street.

Timothy Donovan and Charles Donahue will be home from Maryland over Christmas.

Miss Elsie Belcher poured at the tea given last Saturday at the Vendome by the Boston Mt. Holyoke Alumnae Association.

Ralph C. Herrick of Dartmouth '07, was a delegate to the initiation banquet of the Chi Phi Fraternity at M. I. T. in Boston last week.

Mr. H. D. Murphy has a picture entitled "The Strand," on exhibition at the Boston City Club. It is a charming bit of London which any traveller will appreciate.

Miss F. J. Bowser has the largest stock of goods for Christmas she has ever shown. Here you can find the latest styles in ladies neckwear in dainty boxes, full line of up-to-date pocket books, embroidered and linen handkerchief and handkerchief boxes; beautiful linen table doileys and center pieces; damask tablecloths, with napkins to match; extra fine linen towels; all kinds of toys, games, balls, banks, cards and calendars.

Miss Leslie Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Taylor, leaves town after Christmas for California, where she will remain with friends until May. Her brother, Henry, now home on a holiday visit from the West, will return for a part of the distance with her.

Mr. Wilder Gutterson is at home for the Christmas holidays.

Miss Alice C. Newman returned this week after several months of travel in the West.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Kramer returned Wednesday from a trip abroad, which occupied several months.

Rev. Vincent Ravi has been in New York for a few days.

Mrs. Henry Richburg of Winchester Park is suffering from the effects of a severe fall.

Mrs. Chas. E. Swett has been visiting her son in Connecticut this week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. P. Wingate spent last Sunday at Hampton Beach.

Mrs. W. F. Berry is entertaining her cousin, Miss Bray from Chicago.

Mrs. Wallace Flanders has been confined to the house this week with a severe cold.

Miss Katherine Jones has gone to Portsmouth, N. H., for the winter.

Miss Mary Nickerson is at home for her Chrisimas vacation with her parents on Bacon street.

Miss Rebecca Fernald of Dana Hall is at home for the Christmas vacation.

It was a most interesting program that was carried out at the meeting of the Epiphany Club in Lyceum Hall last night. Edwin D. Mead described the work of peace organizations and showed what active results they were effecting for the progress of mankind. William J. Barry told of the wonderful work of St. Josephs (R. C.) parish in the West End of Boston near the North Station. No church in the world has greater activities. Both speakers greatly pleased their hearers.

Miss Alice Sanborn's dancing class will hold a Christmas party on Friday the twenty-first in Lyceum Hall. Each pupil inviting a guest.

Mr. J. Putnam Ware of Norwood street leaves town Saturday for his home in Waterville where he will spend Christmas.

Mr. and Miss Jealous of Copley street will spend Christmas with Mr. and Mrs Frank Jealous of Vassalboro, Maine. Mr. Anthony Jealous will accompany them and spend his vacation with his parents.

Miss Beatrice DeBussy was awarded the first prize of $3 for the best story for the Christmas number of the High School Recorder. The second prize of $1.50, was taken by Ernest Symmes.

Some complaint has been made this season from patrons of the Arlington—Stoneham electric cars of no heat. Yesterday morning, a plumber coming from Arlington, became disgusted at the cold and lit up half-a-dozen plumber's candles placing them in the aisle of the car much to the conductor's discomfort.

One of the most attractive window displays in town this year is at Athertons Their windows have been much commented upon.

ELECTRICITY.

Various electrical household appliances will make admirable Christmas presents and bring a deal of comfort and pleasure to the recipient. These appliances are entirely practical in use and may be employed wherever the electric light--the modern, safe, convenient illuminant--has been introduced.

Christmas Hints.

Nothing makes the Christmas gift seem any more acceptable or cause it to carry with it that air of the holidays, than its wrapping. How much more pleasure do you, yourself, get on Christmas morning when you unwrap a gift neatly done up and tied, than you do from a package loosely wrapped in coarse paper. With the numerous devices of the present day, a neatly wrapped package at Christmas time is within the reach of everyone. The first wrapping should be of fine English tissue, white preferred, but if the gift is such that holly red or green can be used, it should be done. The best tissue can be purchased at a minimum figure, and should always be used. For fastening this wrapping do not use twine, but the little holiday seals, of which there are several varieties For the outside wrapping use clean white paper and the holly red or green twine. If the package is for someone in one's own house, the silver or gold cord is very pretty. For packages which are sent through the mail use a clean manilla paper and a strong cord of white.

All of these necessities for your bundles can be purchased at a small sum of Wilson the Stationer.

Ages in the Animal Kingdom.

A great variance as to length of life appears among different animals. Some insects live for only a few hours, while fish, elephants and turtles are frequently centenarians. The average life of the mosquito is three days. Toads usually live to the age of about fifteen years, while carp have been known to reach 150. Chickens live from twelve to fifteen years, dogs to the age of ten and occasionally fifteen and parrots to extreme age. These birds have been known to pass the age of 200 years. Turtles are also frequently centenarians, as are storks, and elephants are said to reach the age of 300 years. Whales have been known to live for 400 years.

Postage Stamps.

The largest postage stamp ever issued was a five cent stamp of the United States intended for newspaper postage. It was 4 by 2 inches in size. The smallest postage stamp, on the other hand, was a twenty-five pfennig stamp of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, issued in 1856. It was one-fourth the size of an ordinary postage stamp. Incidentally it has been calculated that about 13,000 different kinds of postage stamps have been issued by the various countries of the earth.

Fate.

A strange comedy and tragedy was woven into the lives of Ibsen and Bjornson. As young men they were great friends; then politics flung them apart; they quarreled and never met for years and years. Strange fate brought the children of these two great writers together, and Bjornson's daughter married Ibsen's only child. The fathers met after a quarter of a century of separation at the wedding of their children.

Age and Years.

The man of forty must not think himself old. He is only beginning really to live. A man's usefulness is gone only when he ceases to grow. Age is not a matter of increasing years so much as of waning enthusiasm.—Milwaukee Journal.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Why not consider a board of survey, so that in the future all those laying out lands and streets and purchasers of the lots may know what must first be done upon the property before any public work of any kind can be done,—acceptance of the streets laying of sewers, water pipes, street lights, etc.

Building laws is another thing we ought to tackle. An excellent and extensive report was made by a special committee a number of years ago and the laws proposed by it would have been accepted then if the committee had properly defended them. Copies of that report are still on hand so the matter is ready for action.

That proposed Village Improvement Society will certainly die aborning if its sponsors do not wake up. First it was a meeting of fiteen citizens on the first set date that it was postponed for, then the holiday season was thought to bein the way and it was postponed again. What next?

The Great Objector says we are too poor to afford to have the grade crossing abolished. Well if we canaot afford an improvement like that when we have to pay only ten per cent. of the cost we must be bankrupt entirely, and he had better apply for the receivership.

The acceptance by the Governor and Council of the elaborate memorial to Ex-Governor Walcott contributed by his family which is being set up in the State House is bound to be severely criticized, and it is entirely out of keeping with his services and such as the Commonwealth would never think of setting up.

The notion that Mayor Fitzgerald wants an investigation of the way Boston is run is a huge joke. That is exactly what "the machine" has been fearful of for several years, and the propositon now up is in effect a shrewd attempt to side track it. Call the bluff and he will back down

The Railroad Commission decided in a case before it last week against allowing through electric cars to run express between certain points, and while the decision may be all right in that particular instance there are others where it it should be not only allowed but ordered in the interest of the general public. Between Sullivan Square and the top of Winter Hill for instance.

A Cause of Divorce.

"What is the most frequent cause of divorce?" the lawyer was asked.

"It is nearly incredible," he said, "but a thing that causes divorce oftener than you'd imagine is married people's quarreling over their right to open one another's letters. The husband will claim that he is entitled to open the wife's mail. The wife will claim that she is entitled to open the husband's. In the letters of neither will there be anything of a private or compromising nature, but nevertheless they both want to get their mail inviolate—it enrages them to have it opened and read. Quarrels over this letter opening question vex, I suppose, 90 per cent of married couples. Of this 90 per cent a distressingly large proportion go on from bad to worse till they wind up in the divorce court. So, young man, when you come to marry, leave your wife's mail alone, no matter how she may pry into yours."—New York Press.

Quick Wit Saved His Life.

"The strangest and most thrilling piece of swordsmanship I ever saw," said the fencing master, "was in Vermont. I was spending the autumn in a mountainous part of the state, and there was a military encampment near my hotel. One morning an officer's horse started to bolt with the man during parade and made at breakneck speed toward a precipice. The officer tried to stop the horse, tried to turn his head—no use. On dashed the frantic animal straight for the abyss. We all held our breaths. In another instant we expected to see horse and rider go over the cliff. But the officer when within fifty feet of the edge drew his sword and plunged it twice deep into the horse. The horse staggered, slowed, keeled over, dying. The man had sacrificed the animal's life to save his own."

Knie the "Roost" or "Roast!"

Steuen Gardener, an under cooke in the Cardinal Wolfe Wolsey hys house, and afterwardes allowed of kynge Henry the eyght to be a master cooke, and hys principall cooke for a longe tyme, ruled the roste in ye kynge's house as boldly and as saucely as hys maister dyd before him, as ye blowe upon his cheke that my Lorde of Warwyke gave him may bare wytnes.—Spirituall Physic, 1555.

Big Differences.

"What!" said the judge. "You expect me to send your husband to prison when you acknowledge that you threw five flatirons at him and he only threw one at you?"

"Yes, that's all right, Judge," said the irate woman, "but, then, the one he threw hit me."

Good Reason.

"Why did Mrs. Fickler sue her husband for divorce?"

"I suppose he was the only man she could sue if she really wished to get one."—Milwaukee Journal.

W. H. S. O, STONE SCHOOL O.

Last Tuesday afternoon, the High school hockey team played the strong Stone school team to a standstill on Mystic Pond. Although the High school team was smaller and lighter, it completely made up for this in speed and the knowledge of the game.

The High school had a slight advantage throughout the game, but was unable to score on account of the desperate defence of the Stone school team. The team play of the High school was good but was often broken up by the heavy forwards of the opposing team. In one respect the High school was vastly superior and that in the ability to shoot. The High school defense was very strong and kept their opponents from any chance to score.

Capt. Hunt and Foster played the best game as forwards for the High school, while Kingsley played a great game at cover-point, repeatedly smashing up the plays of the Stone's team. Bullivant played the best for Stone school.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The only authorized version of the "Sherlock Holmes" detective stories ever prepared for the stage will be played at the Castle Square Theatre next week, as a special Christmas offering, by arrangement with Conan Doyle, William Gillette, and Charles Frohman. This will be the first opportunity ever given the Boston Public to see this remarkable play at popular prices, and the advanced sale of seats is going so strong that crowded houses are assured for every afternoon and evening performances. It should be remembered that matinees are given daily at the Castle Square.

It is now a dozen years or so since Sherlock Holmes was first created by Conan Doyle, and ever since then he has been the literary wonder of the age. His adventures are familiar throughout the English speaking world, and for three years William Gillette's play was performed with astonishing success in both England and in this country. At the Castle Square it will be produced exactly as written and staged by Mr. Gillette, and the cast will include Mr. Hansel and the entire stock company. For the use of Sherlock Holmes during only one week, the Management of the Castle Square is paying the enormous royalty of $1000.

Give us the number of your diary and let us get you a new one for 1907. Wilson the Stationer.

Christmas place cards can be had at Wilson the Stationer's.

AN OCEAN IN THE AIR.

The Queer Superstition That Once Prevailed In England.

The curious superstition that there is an ocean above the clouds is illustrated by the following strange story by an old English writer: "One Sunday the people of a certain village were coming out of church on a thick, cloudy day when they saw the anchor of a ship hooked to one of the tombstones, the cable, which was tightly stretched, hanging down from the air. The people were astonished, and while they were consulting about it suddenly they saw the rope move as though some one labored to pull up the anchor. The anchor, however, still held fast by the stone, and a great noise was heard in the air like the shouting of sailors. Presently a sailor was seen sliding down the cable for the purpose of unfixing the anchor. When he had just loosened it the villagers seized hold of him, and while in their hands he quickly died, just as though he had been drowned.

"About an hour later the sailors above, hearing no more of their comrade, cut the cable and sailed away. In memory of this extraordinary event the people of the village made the hinges of the church doors out of the iron of the anchor." It is further stated that these hinges "are still to be seen there," a bit of evidence much like Munchausen's rope wherewith he once climbed to the moon. If you doubted the story you were confronted with the rope.

There is another queer tale about this aerial ocean. "A merchant of Bristol," it is said, "set sail with his cargo for Ireland. Some time after, while his family were at supper, a knife suddenly fell in through a window on the table. When the merchant returned and saw the knife he declared it to be his own and said that on such a day, at such an hour, while sailing in an unknown part of the sea, he dropped the knife overboard, and the day and the hour were found to be exactly the time when it fell through the window." All of which was once implicitly believed by many and regarded as incontrovertible proof of the existence of a sea above the sky. One is at a loss to conjecture how that "unknown part of the sea" connected with the rest of it. A physical geography showing this would be no small curiosity.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

The doctor can't always cure you; sometimes it's your mean disposition.

The trouble about a good time is that people seldom agree on what it is.

If a shiftless man in a country town doesn't keep greyhounds he usually plays a fiddle.

So many men fool away so much valuable time doing things in which there is neither point nor profit.

It is not recorded that any financial genius ever got his start by purchasing diamonds on the installment plan.

When a man is telling of a quarrel he has had and says, "I said to the other fellow," he nearly always makes what he says a good deal worse than it was.

A German Duel.

A young officer quarreled with a friend who was a solicitor. Hot words were exchanged, and the officer struck his friend. Here the matter might have ended—there was something to forgive and regret on both sides. But the officer's regiment heard of the affair, and a court of honor decided that he must challenge the civilian. So a duel by command took place, and the young lawyer fell mortally wounded by his friend. When the officer returned home he was arrested on the information of the president of the court of honor which had forced him to fight. He was tried by an ordinary tribunal and sentenced to three months' imprisonment. The president of the court of honor knew he was urging the officer to an illegal deed when he insisted on the duel, but honor, as he understood it, must be satisfied at all cost.—Berlin Letter.

The Cigar Mouthpiece.

A rich Russian banker had been discovered murdered in his house in St. Petersburg, says a writer in the Green Bag. There was no clew, but in the room there was found a cigar mouthpiece containing part of a cigar of such an expensive kind that it was supposed the banker himself had been smoking it just before the crime had been committed. On close examination the mouthpiece was found to be worn away by the teeth of its owner, but the dead man's teeth did not fit the indentation. The servants were one by one examined, and it was then found that the hollows of the mouthpiece compared exactly to the formation of the front teeth of the cook, to whom no suspicion had been attached. He afterward confessed to the murder.

England's "Fiery Dragons."

In the year 1532 various parts of Great Britain were visited by a remarkable meteorological phenomenon, which the old authors refer to as "the visitation of the fire drakes or dragons." The author of "Contemplation of Mysteries" says: "In ye letter parte of ye yeare (1532) ye fieri dragons appeared flying by flocks or companies in ye ayre, having swines' snowtes, and sometimes were they seene foure hundred flying togither." In speaking of the fire dragons in another portion of his work he says, "Common people thinke fire drakes to be spirits which watch over hidden treasure, but the philosophers affirm them to be ye result of poisonous vapors which are spontaneously lighted in ye ayre."

Ireland's Coast Cliffs.

The finest cliff scenery in the United Kingdom is on the coast of the county of Donegal, at the northwest of Ireland, facing the Atlantic, where the variety and grandeur of the cliffs are most thrilling and impressive. Slieve League, south of Glen Columbkille, is a superb introduction to Donegal's coast splendors. In less than half a mile from the sea the mountain rears its height of nearly 2,000 feet. In the island of Achill, off the west coast of Ireland, the cliffs of Croghan, at Achill Head, rise sheer from the water's edge to the dizzy height of 3,000 feet.—London Standard.

Smoked Glass.

Murphy—Well, this bates the mischief. Dooley tole me that if I shmoked a piece of glass I'd be able to see the sphots on the sun. Sure, ain't I fairly kilt wid thrying to make me pipe draw? 'Tis the way, I'm thinking, that either I haven't the right kind of glass or else Dooley's been fooling me.—London Tit-Bits.

Took Wind Out of Their Sails.

Addressing one of his southern audiences, Sam Jones once requested all the husbands present who had not spoken a harsh word to their wives for a month to stand up. He shook hands with those who arose and then introduced them to the rest of the audience as the "twenty-seven biggest liars in Tennessee."

An Abrupt Finale.

Joaquin Miller had just won recognition as the poet of the Sierras and was working on a paper in Oregon. He had been contributing verses and short stories and had just begun a tale about the soldiers on the frontier who suffered with scurvy. The editor wanted the scurvy story for the morning publication, but Joaquin Miller could not concentrate upon his work. His mind leaped to the anticipated joy of a great social function occurring that evening, for at this time he was a social lion. However, he had proceeded in his story up to the point of the conditional cure for the disease where all the soldiers suffering with scurvy had been buried, with only their heads exposed to view. The editor was yelling "Copy!" The poet's mind refused to work. He could not finish the tale, leaving his soldiers in such a plight. Suddenly an inspiration came to him. He grabbed his pencil and wrote rapidly the following words:

"And a she wolf came along and ate off all their heads." Then he made a bee line for the door and was not seen again until the next day. His story was not published.

JUST A FARMER

By FRANK H. SWEET

Copyright, 1906, by Frank H. Sweet

"WHAT'S your notion 'bout goin' to town, Sairy?" And Farmer Lish Hopkins paused at the door, his shoulders still humping for a position inside the coat that was beginning to strain across the back. "Suit ye to a T, hey; wouldn't it, Sairy?"

"Well, no. I don't guess so today, Lish," was the placid answer. "It's ben my bakin' day, an' now I've got to black up the stove an' wash the floor. Ye'd have to wait too long for me to git ready."

"Oh, I don't mean today!" with a grin. "I mean move up for good an' all. Sell the farm an' be town folks like the best o' 'em. I'd go into business, an' ye'd be so ye could have comp'ny an' see somebody most every day. I guess we could stand up straight with 'em, hey?"

His wife gazed at him blankly for a moment, then dropped upon a chair, her favorite mode of expressing astonishment.

"Ye don't mean"—

"Yes, I do mean jest that! I've been thinkin' on 't for consider'ble of a spell, an' that letter from Hiram Potter out west sayin' he'd made $40,000 merchandisin' clinched the rivets close up. I've been a fool, Sairy."

"I dunno, Lish. Folks round here say ye've done well."

"Well," he snorted, with profound self disgust, "for farmin' round here, mebbe. I've cleared off the mortgage an' put $1,000 in the bank an' got together a pretty good head o' stock, but I've been twenty years a-doin' it, Sairy, twenty years, an' I've worked like a dog sixteen hours a day an' more. I wan't goin' to miss anything for lack o' hard work. No, siree. An' now there's Hiram, who wan't thought nigh so smart as me at school, an' Reuben Smith, who keeps the hotel over to the Corners, an' Nathan Taylor, who sells us groc'ries, an' others. All of 'em have been wearin' good clothes right along an' takin' money over their counters in handfuls, an' when there was offices an' honors to be given it was them as was went to."

He drew his cap a little lower down and his collar a little higher up and peered at her through the narrow slit as though expecting some comment. "Suit ye to a T, hey?" he repeated.

She nodded reflectively.

"I dunno but 'twill," she conceded. "I'll miss the chickens an' buttermakin', but they be work, an', then, as ye say, I can see somebody most every day. N-no. I guess I won't mind."

"Course ye won't," he declared. "We'll be town folks an' will have to put on our best bibs an' tuckers every day. Ye'll set on a stuffed cheer talkin' to comp'ny an' takin' in money, an' in the evenin's there'll be a lot gathered round my store talkin' politics an' things, an' they won't cost me a cent for entertainment, like visitors gener'ly do, but will be bringin' me in more money."

"Ye don't suppose there'd be no hitch 'bout—'bout ye doin' it, Lish?" she inquired.

"Hitch?"—indignantly—"when Hiram an' Reuben an' Nathan have all done it an' made money! Well, I guess not. But I'll go an' look round some. Folks in town are gener'ly pretty keen scented on money, an' if they git wind o' my needin' a house to live in an' a store to merchandise in they might think rents ought to be a little higher. I'll look round sort o' casual. But ye're sure ye favor the idee, Sairy? I don't want to go into nothin' that ye couldn't smooth down to."

"Oh, I'll like it all right," she said placidly. "I'm sure to. Ye needn't bother 'bout that, Lish. I've always hankered to shop without climbin' in an' out a waggin. I'm too hefty. An' say, Lish," raising her voice as he opened the door and let in a rush of air and whirling snow, "be sure an' beat 'em down some."

It was late in the evening when he returned, but from the way the wagon rattled by the house and the unnecessarily loud "Whoa!" which came to her when it reached the barn she felt that something momentous had happened, and this feeling was made a certainty when Lish flung open the door and she saw him trying to straighten his face into an expression of indifference.

"Supper ready, Sairy?" he demanded airily. "I swan, I'm most starved!"

"Ye know it's ready, Lish," she said quietly. "It always is at 7 to a minute. You know it's been gettin' cold jest an hour an' a half. So ye've hired a place?"

"Ye ain't wuth a cent for news, Sairy," he grumbled. "Ye either scent it out mile ahead or take it all for granted. I'd as soon have a stick to tell somethin' to. How'd ye know I've hired a place?"

"Goodness land," scornfully, "it's stickin' out all over ye, Lish! I knowed it by the way the wheels went round when ye went by."

"Don't suppose the wheels told ye what place I hired an' how much I'm to pay an' when we're goin' to move?" he asked.

"No," she confessed, "exceptin' they said ye was consider'bly set up, an' I figgered from that ye'd got the old drug store stand. That's the biggest store in the best part o' the town, an' it is the only one I know on as bein' empty just now."

Lish chuckled.

"Wheels are mighty onreliable things to go by," he declared, "though I did hint sort o' casual 'bout that very identical store. But, law, they wanted $30 a month for it, much as I'd think the place could be wuth for a whole year. I jest laffed. Then I found Wood & Co.'s dry goods store would be empty the 1st of April, an' I went an' looked that over. The drug store folks said their place bein' on the corner made it valuable, an' as Wood & Co. was right in the middle of a block I figgered it might be cheap enough to wait for till April. But I didn't look round much. When they said $50 I jest turned an' walked off."

He stretched himself more comfortably across the chairs and chuckled again.

"Good thing, though," he went on reflectively. "It set me to lookin' round. Now I've got the nicest, quietest an' best place in the whole town, 'cordin' to my notion. There's big shade trees right in front, an' there ain't no rush an' rumblin o' people an' waggins. Customers can come in an' go out easy an' comfortable like without no danger o' bein' run over nor nothin'. We can almost make believe we're livin' in the country, Sairy, an' the best of it is I only pay $10 a month. Deacon Rounds wanted $15, but I beat him down to $10. Ye see, he built the place two years ago an' has never been able to rent it."

"Deacon Rounds' store. Ain't that consider'able way out?"

"Only three streets. Buyers 'll be glad to come that fur jest for the quiet an' comfort'bleness o' the place. Why, we have to go eight miles for our groc'ries an' things. No; it's a bargain, Sairy. Squire Brown's goin' to take the farm an' stock jest as they stand for $3,500. He'll be out tomorrow with the papers. Then we'll move right off. I want to open the store next week."

Her eyes widened a little at this.

"But ye ain't got no stock nor nothin' yet, Lish," she said.

He rubbed his hands gleefully.

"That's all fixed, too, Sairy," he beamed. "I done a gist o' bizness up there. Some folks 'd 'a' took two days for it an' then thought themselves smart. I had figgered on havin' to go to the city an' mebbe payin' as much as $25 for car fares an' expenses that wouldn't turn me in a cent, but a feller that was showin' samples to Mr. Wood follered me out, an'—an'—well, he got the whole thing from me an' is comin' down next week to show us samples."

"I s'pose ye talked it over with Nathan Taylor fust?" she asked. "He's done bizness there the heft o' his life an' could tell ye consider'ble. An' he's your own fourth cousin an' a schoolmate."

Lish snorted.

"Nathan Taylor! Huh! Don't s'pose he's goin' to encourage opposition, do ye? I did speak to him a little, an' he advised me to take the drug store stand; said it was at the best part o' the bizness street an' on a corner an' that the extra trade would pay the big rent a dozen times over. The idee! I seen in a minute what he was arter. Long's I was bound to go in, he felt the faster I rushed through the money the quicker I'd git out. Why, jest one year's rent would take half a quarter of all we've got! An', more'n that, he said I'd better be pretty careful how I left things to them drummers an' that I ought to go up to the city an' hunt round through the stores fer jest the things I needed an' the best prices. But he didn't say a word 'bout the $25 or more expenses that wouldn't turn me in a cent. Oh, no! He even hinted I'd better hire a bright young man with experience to help in the store."

The next week the drummer was as prompt as his word and came down with an extensive assortment of samples. An entire day was spent with him in the big, empty store, which Sairy had swept and scrubbed with her own hands. At first they were deliberate and circumspect in their buyings, Sairy losing for ordering a dress pattern from this and that, a few yards of one ribbon and another, a piece of braid or a cake of fancy soap, and Lish for breaking dozens and dividing the boxes and packages. But after the drummer had repeatedly assured them that they were purchasing to fill a store and not for their own immediate necessities for a few months ahead they grew bolder and yet bolder and finally, when a passion for buying had begun to possess them, they ordered from everything shown and toward the end recklessly. After it was all over and the drummer had left they drew long breaths and looked at each other curiously.

"We've bought a sight, Lish," Sairy faltered.

"I should say so," rubbing his chin thoughtfully. "More'n was ever put into a store at one time before, I guess. But it's bizness," brightening up some. "As the feller said, we can't open a store with a yard o' 'lastic."

"No, I s'pose not. But how much do ye think we got, Lish?" her face still anxious.

"I dunno," he confessed slowly, "an' ain't even an idee. I tried to go slow at first an' keep count, but I got off the track. Mebbe a thousand, two thousand, three thousand, though 'tain't likely so much as the last. We've never bought more'n $20 or $30 worth at a time before, an' it's hard to guess. But $2,000 or $3,000 is good for a mighty big pile o' stuff."

The second day the goods came down in boxes and barrels and kegs and bundles and in great square cases that required two men to roll from the freight platform into the wagon. Lish hired a team and a man to help and did all the hauling himself. The next morning the bill came.

Lish opened and looked at it eagerly, then drew a long breath and rubbed his eyes and looked at it again.

He seized his cap and jammed it viciously upon his head and left the store. The village bank was upon the principal street, and the cashier was an old friend. It was upon this bank that Squire Brown had given Lish a check for $3,500. The cashier happened to be alone.

By this time Lish had regained control of himself. Slipping the invoice into his pocket, he drew out the check and placed it in the cashier's window.

"I'd like that cashed, Mr. White," he said, "an' I want to borry $600 more. Ye know I'm good for it, an' anyhow there's stock enough in the store."

"Oh, that's all right, Mr. Hopkins," laughed the cashier. "I never knew the time when your word wasn't good for $600. But how happens it you need more just now? You were telling me the other day that you only intended to put half the money into goods now and hold the rest as a reserve."

Lish grinned ruefully.

"I guess I wan't much used to buyin'," he confessed. "Look here."

He produced the invoice and spread it out in the window. The cashier looked it over curiously.

"I don't know much about this line of goods, Mr. Hopkins," he said at length, "but it seems to me there's a good many things here that won't find much sale. Now, this six dozen doorbells, for instance."

"The drummer said they were good sellers," ventured Lish.

"Well, perhaps they are," acquiesced the cashier. "Of course I don't know. But about the $600. If I were you I wouldn't hire the money just yet. Drummers have prices that are supposed to cover a generous system. Didn't your man say anything about it?"

"He said I could have thirty or sixty days' time jest as well's not, but I told him I'd rather pay cash."

"Very good, provided you have the money to pay and also provided he allows you a fair discount for paying it. You'd better wait and find that out. Send the firm what money you have and let the six hundred go until the drummer comes round again. You may take in enough by that time to pay him. At any rate, find out his discount for cash, and, if it's more than our interest, come to me and I will let you have the money. Only don't hire unless you're obliged to."

One morning a few weeks later Nathan Taylor entered the store. Lish was looking over his account book, kept with a lead pencil in much the same manner as he had jotted down items while on the farm. Sairy was at another counter, engaged in rubbing her hand back and forth across a new piece of velveteen which had just been taken from the case. Nathan said, "Good morning," and then paused and glanced critically about the store, with evident disapproval in his eyes.

"You've done just what I was afraid of, Lish," he said, at length. "A third of the goods won't sell in all the world. That fellow was too slippery and has loaded you with a lot of unsalable stuff."

Several times during the spring and summer Lish was sorely pressed for money, and more than once he started to the bank, but each time he turned back before reaching there.

But the end did not come until another winter, just one year from the time he had left the farm. Then one day a tall, strongly built man in a heavy coat strode into the room.

"Elisha Hopkins, I suppose?" he interrogated.

"Yes. What can I do for ye?"

The man did not answer. Taking a paper from his pocket, he unfolded it deliberately and read in a slow, ponderous voice for several minutes. Then he looked at the startled figure behind the counter.

"Going to pay it?" he asked.

"Can't jest now," Lish answered weakly.

"I suppose so." He walked to the counter and held out his hand. "I may as well take the key," he said.

Lish nodded toward the door, from the lock of which the key had not been removed. The sheriff went and took it out and then held the door open significantly. Lish realized that it was for him to go out.

How he stumbled across the room and out into the snow and across the yard to his own house he scarcely knew, only that it was a feeling of thankfulness that Sairy had not happened to be in the store.

She was bending over the stove when he entered and sank heavily into a chair.

"Goodness land!" she exclaimed, suddenly straightening up. "What is the matter, Lish?"

"Nothin'"—drearily—"only the sheriff's took the store an' shet me on the outside'"

"What?" She came quickly to his side and placed a hand upon his shoulder. "For money?"

"Yes; twelve hundred."

"An' can't ye pay?"

"No. An' if I could there's most another twelve hundred that'll be asked for soon 's this is known. Mebbe I could raise it all to the bank"—slowly—"but I dunno 's I want to. I'm gettin' tired o' the whole thing."

"But the goods are wuth more'n what we owe, ain't they?"

"Twice as much, 'cordin' to what we paid, but there ain't no knowin' what they'll fetch to auction. Not more'n enough to pay the debts mebbe."

She was silent for some minutes, looking down at him.

"The man Squire Brown rented our farm to has moved away," she said at last hesitatingly, "an' I hear the squire wants to rent ag'in."

Lish looked up quickly.

"An'—an' wouldn't ye mind goin' back, Sairy?" he asked.

"Mind?" she asked. "Oh, Lish, I never did really want to leave the farm!"

He rose sturdily to his feet.

"Then we'll go back," he declared. And there was something that was almost gladness in his face. "I know how to run a farm, an' tryin' to keep a store 's a dog's life anyway."

Soap as a Medicine.

"When I was a boy," said the old man, "they often made me take a little soap as a medicine. It did me good.

"Soap was prescribed in the village for cramps, for sick headache, for a half dozen complaints. The people admitted that it was a nauseous dose, but on the other hand they pointed to its efficacy.

"When I was taken down my mother would cut from the cake of yellow soap in the kitchen a chunk about as big as a chestnut.

"'Now, sonny,' she would say, 'swaller this,' and she'd hold the yellow morsel in thumb and forefinger close to my lips.

"I'd begin to whimper. The smell of it and the idea of the lather that would form in my mouth—the lather I'd have to swallow—would fill me with despair. But my mother was inexorable. With stiff lips I'd take the soap into my mouth. I'd chew the soft and slippery stuff a little and then, with a groan and a dreadful gulp, I'd swallow it. Horrors!

"Horrors!" said the old man, smiling. "I can still taste those doses of soap that were so common in the village in my boyhood."

Jewish Thrift.

The Allgemeine Rundschau, Vienna, in an article on the Jewish question and anti-Semitism, has this to say as to Jewish thrift: "If we could only induce our own lower class to acquire the Jew's thrift, his industry, his sense of order, his scrupulous exactitude, his religious loyalty and love for his family the Jew on his darker side would appear far less dangerous to them than is at present the case. If one Sunday, by way of interesting experiment, one were to conduct an inquiry into the station, wealth and religion of visitors to the various public houses, the following result would transpire: A large number of the guests would be Christians who would do far better to save than spend their money in alcoholic refreshments, gaming and tobacco. There might be a few Jews, but at the most they would content themselves with a cup of coffee."

An Ancient Hebrew Bible.

The highest amount ever offered for a single volume was tendered by a number of wealthy Jewish merchants of Venice to Pope Julius II. for a very ancient Hebrew Bible. It was then believed to be an original copy of the Septuagint version made from the Hebrew into Greek in 277 B. C., careful copies of the Hebrew text having been prepared at that date for the use of the seventy translators. The offer to Julius was £20,000, which, considering the difference between the value of money then and now, would in our day represent the princely sum of $600,000. Julius was at that time greatly pressed for money to maintain the holy league which the pope had organized against France, but in spite of his lack of funds he declined the offer.

Weight of a Lion.

"What does a lion weigh?" Ask that question of any acquaintance and see what he will say. Those who best know the look of the king of beasts and how small his lithe body really is will probably come furthest from the truth. About 300 to 350 pounds is a usual estimate. But this is below the mark. A full grown lion will tip the scales at no less than 500 pounds. Five hundred and forty pounds is the record for an African lion. His bone is solid and heavy as ivory. The tiger runs the lion very close. A Bengal tiger killed by an English officer scaled 520 pounds. A tiger of this size has, however, considerably greater muscular strength than the biggest lion.

Measures.

Teacher—Now, you have all studied about liquid measure, and I think you know it. Johnny, you may now tell me what measure treats of inches, feet and yards. Johnny—Tape measure, teacher.

The Lobsters.

"Well," said the first lobster in a bored tone, "what are you going to do now?"

"Get dressed for dinner," the second lobster answered, yawning.

A present joy is worth a thousand past sorrows or future tips.—State Journal.

Shakeoff the grip of your old enemy Nasal Catarrh by using Ely's Cream Balm. Then will all the swelling and soreness be driven out of the tender, inflamed membranes. The fits of sneezing will cease and the discharge, as offensive to others as to yourself, will be cured when the causes that produce it are removed. Cleanliness, comfort and health renewed by the use of Cream Balm. Sold by all druggists for 50 cents, or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren street, New York.

Dandy's Wardrobe, 1714.

The burglary of a dandy's wardrobe meant a serious loss when it comprised, as in John Osheal's case in 1714, "a scarlet cloth suit laced with broad gold lace, lined and faced with blue; a fine cinnamon cloth suit, with plate buttons, the waistcoat fringed with a silk fringe of the same color, and a rich yellow flowered satin morning gown lined with a cherry colored satin, with a pocket on the right side." There is something a little more manly perhaps in the dress of the gallant of 1660, pictured in one of Rowland's epigrams:

Behold a most accomplished cavalier,
That the world's ape of fashions doth appear.
Walking the streets his humors to disclose
In the French doublet and the German hose,
The muffes, cloake, Spanish hat, Toledo blade,
Italian ruffe, a shoe right Flemish made.

There seems to have been no foolish prejudice against foreign made goods in 1660.—London Chronicle.

The Betel Nut.

Chewing the betel nut in Siam, being a common habit, at every little distance as you go through the bazaar of Bangkok may be seen petty merchants busy making and selling the preparation so universally masticated. The leaves in which the prepared mixture is wrapped are from a vine known as the chavica betel. The nut is from the areca betel palm, which reaches a height of about sixty feet, whose branches bear several large bunches of nuts which harden and redden as they ripen and which resemble somewhat the bunches of fruit on the date bearing palm. The dealers cut up their green leaves into the proper triangular form, crack the nuts and with wooden spatulas work the tumeric stained juice into a paste. It is amusing to see how skillfully they form the pieces of green leaf into pointed, cone shaped cups, into each one of which they place a portion of the ingredients.

Turks and Meerschaum.

According to the best authorities upon the subject, the idea of using white talc in the manufacture of pipes is of comparatively recent date compared with the age of the habit of smoking, and what is still more curious is the fact that in the oriental countries which produce white talc, or meerschaum, as it is called, and where the use of tobacco forms part of the education of the faithful the people never dream of making this substance into pipes. They make bowls and goblets of it, but no pipes. It may be that the long pipestems which allow the smoke to cool and lose its acridity before reaching the mouth leave the oriental smoker quite indifferent in regard to the quality of the bowl. At all events, one never sees a Turk with a meerschaum pipe.

Enormous Lifting Power.

The shellless limpet pulls 1,984 times its own weight when in the air and about double when measured in the water. Fleas pull 1,120 times their own dead weight. The Mediterranean cockle, Venus verrucosa, can exert a pulling power equal to 2,071 times the weight of its own body. So great is the power possessed by the oyster that to open it a force equal to 1,319.5 times the weight of its shelless body is required. If the human being possessed strength as great in proportion as that of these shellfish the average man would be able to lift the enormous weight of 2,976,000 pounds, pulling in the same degree as the limpet. And if the man pulled in the same proportionate degree as the cockle he would sustain a weight of no less than 3,106,500 pounds.

Two Poor Ones.

During one of Edwin Forrest's engagements in Boston a poor artist called several times to see the great actor at the old Winthrop House. Each time he brought a picture which he had painted. He finally left it with a note stating that he was in needy circumstances. Forrest read the note and took the wrapping from the picture. It proved to be a painting of himself as Spartacus. Forrest gazed upon it a moment and then ejaculated to the clerk: "Give him $10. If he is as poor as his picture, he must be on the point of starvation."

One Way of Saying No.

Beerbohm Tree was once endeavoring to get a well known actor back into his company. Tree received the man in his dressing room as he was making up. "How much would you want to come back to me?" inquired Mr. Tree, busy with his paint pots. The other named an exorbitant salary, to which Tree merely retorted as he went on making up, "Don't slam the door when you go out, will you?"

Two Thoughts.

"I want a business suit now," said Slopay. "I was thinking of something in the way of a small plaid."

"And I," replied the tailor, "can't help thinking of something in the way of a small check." — Philadelphia Ledger.

Wasted Advice.

A beauty adviser says, "For tender eyes make an infusion of"— Oh, bosh! Every girl knows how to make tender eyes without advice from any specialists.—Minneapolis Tribune.

The Signal.

Tommy—Does your ma hit your foot under the table when you've had enough? Tommy—No; that's when I haven't had enough. When I have she sends for the doctor.—Harper's Bazar.

We know accurately when we know little. With knowledge doubt increases. —Goethe.

The rent of the boxes at the postoffice has advanced twenty-five cents each per quarter.

The supposed thieves who have been stripping wires from poles for some months past, were arrested in Stoneham last Friday. The police departments of Malden, Medford, Woburn and Winchester also want the men. In Winchester 150 feet of wire was stripped from poles on Bacon street, a week ago Friday, on which day day it is claimed the alleged thieves hired John Kane's wagon. A police official said one of the prisoners has been identified by a street car conductor as one of the party of men who stole 2000 feet of wire in Medford a few days ago.

The last in the series of whist parties by the Ladies' Friendly Society of the Unitarian Church was held Monday afternoon. On account of the illness of Miss Helen Sanborn, daughter of Mr. and Oren C. Sanborn, the whist was held in Calumet Hall. Mrs. Roy L. Palmer won first prize, Mrs. Anthony Kelley second and Mrs. William H. Herrick the consolation.

The Shakspeare Club met Monday afternoon with Mrs. Robert P. Smith on Fletcher street.

Mrs. Henry K Clarke entertained her whist club Monday afternoon at her residence on Main street. Mrs. Charles E. Redfern won first prize.

Mr. A. G. Learned, of New York brother to Mr. F. H. Learned of 22 Lebanon street, has just brought out what is considered a very clever book "Adam's Sons." It has many illustrations by Mr. Learned who was for quite a few years a leading artist on the Boston Herald, producing many full page sketches. The book and sketches are very highly spoken of by those best able to judge.

After 33 years' service Woburn is beginning to consider replacing its cement-lined pipe with cast iron. Like Winchester's cement pipe it has done full and generous service—indeed longer than iron would have lasted.

Sleighing came to a quick and sudden end last Saturday night. Last year Dec. 10th, there was a snow fall of about eight inches making good sleighing for a week. This winter thus far there has been eight snow storms.

The police were after the storekeepers in the centre last Saturday requesting them to remove the ice from their sidewalks. One of the most dangerous walks in the centre is that in front of the Town House. The town fathers should set a good example to all others in town by keeping this sidewalk in good condition.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

A few days ago a Winchester gentleman put a pair of rimless glasses into his pocket, which contained some scraps of leather. Later the entire contents of his pocket were thrown into the stove. After five minutes the glasses were missed, a diligent search made, and at last they were found in the stove on the red hot coals. Removing them with the poker, the lenses after cooling, proved to be all right, although the frame was damaged. The glasses, by the way, were made by Barron of 3 Winter street, Boston, a resident of this town.

Smoking Contests.

"Smoking contests are as old as the hills," said an antiquary. "Go to Brittany, take in a Breton 'pardon,' and you'll see a smoking contest sandwiched in between the dancing matches and the wrestling bouts."

The old man took out his notebook.

"The first smoking contest of which we have any authentic record," he said, "came off at Oxford, the English seat of learning, in 1723. The conditions were that you should smoke three ounces of tobacco without drinking or leaving the stage, the person first finished to get a prize of 12 shillings.

"Hearne says—I copied it down here: "'Many tryed, and 'twas thought that a journeyman taylor of St. Peter's-in-the-East would have been the victor, he smoking faster than and being many pipes before the rest, but at last he was so sick that 'twas thought he would have dyed, and an old man that had been a builder and smoked gently came off the conqueror, smoking the three ounces quite out, and he told me that after it he smoked four or five pipes the same evening.'"

Life Marks Are Indelible.

We are not writing in the sand. The tide does not wash it out. We are not painting our pictures on the canvas and with a brush so that we can erase the error of yesterday or overlap it with another color today. We are writing our lives with a chisel on the marble, and every time we strike a blow we leave a mark that is indelible.—Lyman Abbott, D. D.

Honesty and Ability.

Uncle—You see honesty is absolutely necessary, but ability is equally indispensable. Nephew—That may be, but what end does honesty serve? Uncle—To maintain your obligations. Nephew—And ability? Uncle—To avoid having them.—Il Mondo Umoristico.

Is Man a Harder Proposition?

Mrs. Benham—The snake tempted Eve first. Benham—Yes, I suppose he wanted to begin on something easy.—New York Press.

LIEUT. EDWIN A. WALLACE.

A Gallant Soldier who Enlisted in Winchester When a Mere Boy.

Was an Inmate of Six Rebel Prisons and Suffered Great Hardship.

There was buried in this town on Dec. 18 a veteran of the Civil War concerning whom a few words of appreciation may well be said: for while he was not a resident of Winchester he enlisted in this town. The veteran we refer to is Lieutenant Edwin A. Wallace who died in Salem, Mass., Dec. 16 He was the only surviving brother of Mrs. Charles E Conant and at the outbreak of the war was living with Mr. and Mrs. Conant and working in Boston in Mr. Conant's firm.

His case is typical of the many thousand patriotic boys who enlisted at the earliest date that was permissable under the law long before he had attained his majority, going out in Aug, 1862 from Winchester as a private in Co. E. 44th Mass. Infantry. His first enlistment was for nine months, but in common with the great majority who went out under this call, he re-enlisted in 1863 in Co. C. 56 h Mass., and was promoted to the Lieutenancy, Oct. 22, 1864

His discharge papers dated July 22, 1865, have the simple but most honorable reason assigned in laconic words: "Close of the war."

Mr. Wallace fought throughout the campaigns of the Army of the Potomac and his record is the record of the army's engagements except for a period of about six months when he was a prisoner. He endured very great hardships, having been confined in six Rebel prisons, including Libby and Andersonville.

He was captured at North Anna while hunting over the field of battle for a comrade whom he thought was lying wounded.

He nearly died from exposure and starvation while in prison but,fortunately, was among the first thousand to be paroled and exchanged in Nov. 1864.

Mr. Wallace never regained sound health after his experiences at Libby and Andersonville and during the more than forty years since has been enfeebled by chronic illness, with occasional periods of severe suffering. He was a sign painter and letterer by trade and had lived in Salem for the last 14 years.

His funeral occurred Tuesday, Dec. 18. and was attended by relatives and friends from Salem and Waltham and by comrades of the G. A. R. He was a member of the Geo. B. McClellan Post, G. A. R., of East Jaffrey, N. H.

His flag-wrapped casket was brought to Winchester for burial, and interment took place in the family lot in Wildwood Cemetery. The committal service was delivered by Rev. Fred'k. H. Page of Waltham, Mass.

Mr. Wallace leaves a widow.

He was a representative of that class of veterans, now dropping out of the ranks so fast, who gave his country the most unselfish service and who has borne the long years of semi-invalidism without murmur or complaint.

ALVIN D. PUFFER DEAD.

Alvin D. Puffer, father to Leon H. Puffer of this town, veteran manufacturer of soda water machinery, died last Saturday evening at his home in Medford from neuralgia of the heart. Mr. Puffer was born in Stowe in 1819. He leaves a widow and 11 children and 23 grandchildren.

Mr. Puffer was the pioneer of the soda water machinery industry, starting in Boston as a young man and founding his first company in 1842. From that time until 1891 he was actively interested in the business, retiring then to take care of his large real estate interests. His start in Boston was in the plumbing business, which he abandoned, however, after a comparatively short time. He was always a man of great business ability, and was active up to the last few weeks of his life.

The Puffer Manufacturing Co. now have their plant in the McKay Buildings on Swanton street, this town.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

At the annual meeting of the association of Massachusetts assessors a strong argument was made by John J. Leonard of Boston in favor of a longer term of office for city and town assessors. He would favor a term of six years in large cities and towns for every assessor and three years in smaller places, the elections to be so arranged as to keep a majority of experienced men always on the board The office of assessor is certainly one where "Experience counts" and the change proposed would seem to have its advantages.

The grand jury has now disposed of the Gethro legislative bribery charges by reporting "no bill." "No bill" seems to be the story in about all the cases that so much fuss was made over previons to the last State election.

MORAVIAN CANDLE SERVICE.

The "Moravian Candle Service," held by the Unitarian Sunday School, last Sunday, was greatly enjoyed by the large number of people who witnessed it, some esteeming it the most impressive ceremonial they have ever attended. The candles, made by the Moravians of Bethlehem, Pa., for this service, were given out by Messrs. Lewis Parkhurst, Clarence C. Witten, George Everett Pratt and D. W. Pratt, the school being in procession, singing, "Onward Christian Soldiers." A special feature introduced by the pastor of this church, was the recognition of the children of the "Cradle Roll," thirty-nine in number. With the entire school ranged on three sides of Metcalf Hall, holding lighted candles. Miss G. A. Stevens, Field secretary of the school, read the names of the children, and Mrs. W. E. Cummings, principal of the Primary Department, lighted the candles, (one for each child,) which had been arranged in the form of a Maltese cross, on a table. The procession was resumed, once more marching and singing around the hall. The school then passed out, the candles being extinguished at the door.

The carols sung at this celebration were selected by Mrs. L. A. Bradbury of Rangeley, and were once sung by English children centuries ago. Mr. F. W. Colis singing and Mrs. Ruth Capen Farmer's reading added greatly to the success of the occasion.

CANDIDATES FOR SELECTMEN.

It is pretty early to be considering the composition of the next Board of Selectmen, nevertheless we hear the friends of Mr. Frank W. Winn talking him up. This energetic business manager of the firm of J. H. Winn & Son, his friends claim, would prove a valuable addition to the Board, as he has the business ability and the inclination for the duties. He has not yet openly said that he will be a candidate, but if he should decide to do so, as his many friends hope, the public will be acquainted with that fact.

It is reported that Mr. Frank F. Carpenter, a former member of the School Board, will also be a candidate. Of Mr. Carpenter's fitness for the office there can be no doubt, the only hitch coming on the question as to whether he will stand or not.

There will be some vacancies among the members of the present Board who have been reported as saying that they will retire at the close of the year.

BURGLARS AGAIN VISIT WINCHESTER.

Burglars again visited Winchester last week, and this time succeeded in making the best haul yet, taking some $600 worth of jewelry from the home of Mr. Forest G. Brackett at the corner of Highland avenue and Mt. Vernon street. The robbery was accomplished on Friday evening between six and nine o'clock during the absence of the family. Entrance was gained by a window, which was pried open with a chisel. The house was thoroughly ransacked, and although the silver was not taken, the thieves made a clean sweep of everything in the way of jewelry; taking watches, diamonds, brooches, etc. Upon the discovery of the burglary by the family, the police were notified, but the thieves had finished their work and departed some time previously. This is the last of a number of breaks which have been made in town lately. It is thought that they may be the work of some of the large number of crooks attracted to Boston during the holiday season. Including these breaks, Winchester has had but five burglaries during the year of 1906.

CAME NEAR WORKING CHRISTMAS.

The men employed in the highway department came near losing a part of their Christmas holiday because of the snow storm that set in early in the forenoon of that day. The morning opened with every indication of a most pleasant Christmas, but shortly after eight o'clock the wind suddenly changed when a driving snow storm set in. This continued until nearly noon when it partially cleared off and it stopped snowing. Previous to this the foreman asked Supt. Hinds if he would order the men and the ploughs out, but as he was reluctant to break into the holiday of the men, Mr. Hinds decided to wait, and it clearing away later the men were not needed, much to their satisfaction.

I. O. O. F.

Grand Master Joseph Belcher and his board of Grand Officers of the State of Massachusetts, will publicly install the officers of Waterfield Lodge on Jan. 14th. All the members should attend and bring the ladies, as we understand it is something unusual for the Grand Officers to do this work in public, and will on that account be interesting.

CONFINED IN LOCKUP.

Delinquent Poll Tax Payers are Being Arrested

And Will Be Committed to Jail If They Do Not Pay.

As a result of a meeting of a special committee of the Selectmen, the Collector of Taxes and the Chief of Police, the latter started on a crusade Wednesday against those parsons who have not paid their poll taxes, and of whom there is said to be a goodly number. It is now pay or go to jail, is the decision of the town officials, and that they mean what they say, two arrests were made on the day the chief started out, and the delinquents placed in the lockup. Later the taxes and costs were paid and the men released.

This is a strenuous enforcement of the law, but the number of delinquents had become so large and so much indifference was manifested to the frequent demands of the Collector, that something had to be done to make these persons live up to the requirements of the law. More arrests are expected to follow.

CHARLES A. RAMSDELL.

Old Resident and Well Known Citizen Dead.

Charles A. Ramsdell, well known as the "Colonel," passed away suddenly yesterday afternoon. The direct cause of his death was hemorrhage of the brain (which occurred Tuesday), although he had not been in good health for some time. Three weeks ago he had a bad spell that confined him to the house, but he had almost entirely recovered from this sickness and expected to go out in a few days when the walking became good, when he was suddenly stricken as above.

Mr. Ramsdell was born in Milford, N. H., seventy years ago and had been a resident of Winchester for the past thirty years. Nearly 25 years ago he carried on a large dry goods store in the old Lyceum Building, and later, after the building had been remodelled, he located in the store now occupied by Mr. Winn. Years ago, Mr Ramsdell was an outside salesman for Shepard, Norwell & Co., and Jordan, Marsh & Co., and his business ability enabled him to draw a large salary. He was one of the most widely known men in Winchester and his store was the scene of constant discussion, political, social and otherwise, and all who would know the latest repaired to his store. The "Colonel" was a great talker and it proved no embarassment for him to introduce himself to the most exalted personages, no matter what the conditions or place, and yet he was not looked upon as an intruder.

Mr. Ramsdell had been a director in the Wilton, N. H., Railroad for the past seven years. His brother was the former well known Governor of New Hampshire who passed away a few years ago.

Last March, Mr. Ramsdell suffered the death of his wife, and since that time he has been seldom seen about town, he having in the meantime disposed of his business. He leaves one son, Clifford C. Ramsdell of this town, and one daughter, Mme. Ida Belichon of Paris, France.

Funeral services will be held from the late home Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and the interment will be in the family lot in Wildwood.

"THE COMING OF THE KING."

By unanimous vote the congregation of the Methodist Church requested the choir to repeat next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock the Christmas music rendered last Sunday morning.

No words of eulogy need be spoken in connection with Dudley Buck's Cantata, "The Coming Of the King." Lovers of music know the merits of this great composer, and the charm of his religious compositions. But it is not out of place to state that the choir of the Methodist Church, after weeks of hard practice, has succeeded in mastering this Christmas Cantata thoroughly. All are invited to this special musical service. Seats free.

The program is as follows:

Organ Prelude — Noel

Soprano Solo, "O Jerusalem, look about thee."

Chorus, "Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion."

Solos, (a) Alto, "The Angel Gabriel was sent from God." (b) Tenor "Hail, thou that art highly favored."

Male Chorus, "We march through the cool of the night."

Chorus, "The Plains of Bethlehem."

Recitative and Hymn, "The Shepherds."

Alto Solo, "Sleep, my Jesus Sleep."

Chorus, "Adeste Fideles."

The choir has been augmented for this occasion and the leading parts are held by the following singers: Mrs. G. E Lenfest, Miss Anna Maud Redding, Miss Daisie McLellan, Mr. William Whittaker.

DR. LILLEY EATON

Who is being treated at a Boston hospital. It will a number of weeks before he will be able to come home. The genial doctor has had more than his share of sickness during the past two years, but his courage remains good.

CALUMET CLUB BOWLING TOURNAMENT.

Team 7 had two games last week, and by taking three points in each jumped into third position. Its opponents were teams 3 and 9, whose standing at the foot of the list was not effected. The leader, team 8, maintained its position by a straight win over team 4, without doing any particularly brilliant work. Kelley's 102 was the high string in this match. Team 6, by a win of four points over team 10, took second position for this week.

CHRISTMAS BOWLING AT CALUMET CLUB.

The Christmas bowling tournament at the Calumet Club proved to be very successful, some eleven dollars in entry money being received and divided among the five winners in cigars and bowling tickets.

Mr. Chas. E. Kendall captured first honors, and besides this took one of the special individual prizes.

The winners, prizes and scores were:

First prize for highest three string total with handicap, won by Chas. E. Kendall. Score 329. Prize $3 85 worth of cigars or bowling tickets.

Second prized won by E. R. Rooney with 319. Value of prize $2 75.

Third, fourth and fifth prizes won by E. P. Randlett, J. E. Gendron and G. S. Littlefield, with 317 each. Value received $1 47 each.

The special prize of cigars for the high single without handicap was won by E. R. Rooney with 127.

The special prize of cigars for the best percentage over rating for single string was won by C. E. Kendall, 42 per cent. These two prizes were presented by Geo. S. Littlefield.

A special prize was presented by Dr. W. H. Gilpatric for the single string which was rolled the lowest per cent. under rating, which was won by C. H Hall.

Other high scores were:

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENT AT BAPTIST CHURCH.

On Thursday evening of last week an elaborate Christmas social was held. The vestry was exceptionally beautiful in its decorations of electric lighted green festoons, together with the fireplace and the tent, which formed impressive settings for appropriate songs. Some of the "Sweet Old Songs" were rendered by a chorus costumed in handsome old time costumes. The chorus consisted of Mrs. Downer, Mrs. Sanderson, Miss Macdonald, Miss Dunklee, Miss Downer, Messrs. Downer, Richardson and Palmer. Special features were the song of Mrs. Ollis Weld before the fireplace, and the male quartet as it rendered "Tenting Tonight," before the camp-fire in front of the tent. Mrs. H. E. Richardson who planned this delightful entertainment, quaintly announced the program.

On Christmas eve a Christmas entertainment was given for the children. "Santa Claus' Nap," an exercise, was beautifully rendered. The committee in charge were, Mrs. Tufts, Mrs. Blank, jr., Mrs. Caldwell and Messrs. Richardson and Shultis.

AFTERNOON WHIST.

Mrs. George W. Fitch will open her house for an afternoon whist on Friday, Jan. 11th, at 2.30. Proceeds to go to the Parish House Fund. Tickets at 50 cents may be obtained from Mrs. George H Davis, Mrs. A. Miles Holbrook, Mrs. G F. Edgett and Mrs. Geo. W. Fitch.

THE TOWN'S GROWTH.

General Tax has Doubled in Sixteen Years.

Duties of Collector Have also Increased Three Fold.

When Aaron C. Bell was made collector of taxes sixteen years ago last July the collections amounted in round numbers to about $87,000. At the present time it amounts to about $225,000 including all taxes. When he first took office his duties consisted in looking after the general taxes only, by this is meant the real and personal and poll taxes. In 1890 the late Albert Ayer held the office of water registrar and he sent out his own bills and made the collections for the same. In the years since then these duties have been transferred to the collector, also the sewer, gypsy moths, sidewalks and in fact all other assessments, the total entailing a large amount of work. All the bills and notices are now made out by Mr. Bell and he is held responsible for their collection. The hardest collections he is required to make are those for poll taxes, as many people look upon this tax as an imposition while others neglect to pay because of indifference or forgetfulness. There is a large number of these unpaid taxes in the collector's office now and to force their collection, these persons are being served with warrants this week by the Chief of Police and if they are not paid the delinquents are more than likely to be sent to jail.

This is a phase of the Collector's duties that he does not like, Mr. Bell being of a kind-hearted and sympathetic nature, yet his oath of office require him to do this and he has got to make his collections regardless of personal feelings. If he neglects this important part of his duties, and if the town should fail to take action, then there is the insurance company that bonds the collector. In past years the company has only agreed to reimburse the town in case of dishonesty on the part of the collector, but last year there was a clause in the bond that the collector shall rigidly collect all taxes and assessments. Should the company find out that this is not being done then there is a strong probability that there will be trouble for the town, as insurance companies of this class assume no risks other than those agreed upon. From this it will be seen that the collector has no option in the matter, hard as many of the individual cases may be.

When Mr. Bell first took the office he was able to do the work single handed, but the large increase in the general taxes and the other assessments passed over to him have forced him to have an assistant in the person of his son who also acts as Town Clerk during the absence of this official. The son has grown up in the office, having been with his father for nearly a dozen years.

As was stated in the STAR last week Mr. Bell will retire because of ill health and a desire for rest.

MRS. STEPHEN THOMPSON.

The sudden death on Wednesday afternoon of Mrs. Sarah Snow Thompson, wife of Stephen Thompson, at her home on Pine street came as a shock to the entire community. Mrs. Thompson had been ill with the grip for a few days, and her death, which was due to neuralgia of the heart, was sudden and unexpected.

Sarah Snow Thompson was born in Woburn, being the daughter of William and Caroline F. Snow. She was 68 years of age, and had resided in this town since her marriage to Mr. Thompson, 40 years ago. Her husband, and two sons, Benjamin F., of this town and William S. of St. Louis, survive her. She also leaves a sister, Mrs. William M. Miller of this town and a brother, William F. Snow, of Los Angeles.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence on Pine street

FISHERMEN.

There Are Two Classes, the Genuine and the Pretenders.

It has sometimes been said that fishermen cannot be manufactured. This is true to the extent that nothing can supply the lack of certain inherent, constitutional and inborn qualities or traits which are absolutely necessary to a fisherman's makeup. Of course there are many who call themselves fishermen and who insist upon their membership in the fraternity who have not in their veins a drop of legitimate fisherman blood. Their self asserted relationship is nevertheless sometimes seized upon by malicious or ignorant critics as permitting the assumption that the weaknesses and sins of these pretenders are the weaknesses and sins of genuine fishermen. But in truth these pretenders are only interlopers who have learned a little fish language, who love to fish only "when they bite," who whine at bad luck, who betray incredulity when they hear a rousing fish story and who do or leave undone many other things fatal to good and regular standing. They are like certain whites called squaw men who hang about Indian reservations and gain certain advantages in the tribes by marrying full blooded Indian women. Surely no just person would for a moment suppose that genuine Indians could be treated fairly by measuring them according to a squaw man standard. Neither can genuine fishermen be fairly treated by judging them according to the standards presented by squaw fishermen.—From "Fishing and Shooting Sketches," by Grover Cleveland.

FORCE OF WATER.

The Great Power That Is Exerted by a Six Inch Stream.

The effect of the hydraulic motor, which is now used for the purpose of removing masses of earth, well nigh passes belief. A stream of water issuing from a pipe six inches in diameter, with a fall behind it of 375 feet, will carry away a solid rock weighing a ton or more to a distance of fifty or a hundred feet. The velocity of the stream is terrific, and the column of water projected is so solid that if a crowbar or other heavy object be thrust against it the impinging object will be hurled a considerable distance. By this stream of water a man would be instantly killed if he came in contact with it even at a distance of a couple of hundred feet. At 200 feet from the nozzle a six inch stream, with a 375 foot fall, projected momentarily against the trunk of a tree will in a second denude it of the heaviest bark as cleanly as if it had been cut with an ax. Whenever such a stream is turned against a bank it cuts and burrows it in every direction, hollowing out great caves and causing tons of earth to melt and fall and be washed away in the sluices.

The Eye of a Child.

Who can explain or fathom the wondrous instinct of the child? Lying in the arms of its nurse, in its carriage or elsewhere, its large, round, wondering eyes roam over a sea of faces till suddenly its features break into a sweet smile, a baby laugh dances in its eyes, perhaps the tiny hands are extended, and the little body gives a bound as though it would throw itself through space. What has happened? It has recognized a friend, nothing more and no less. It makes no mistake. Wiser, perchance, in that moment of inexperienced helplessness than it will be years afterward, when the world and its inmates have been studied in the light of instruction and experience, its love offering is seldom if ever mistakenly presented. By what power is this child love directed? By what subtle influence does it see and know what in after years it may strive in vain to discern?

Carlyle and the Ax.

Carlyle as a schoolmaster was a terror to evildoers. Even the biggest and boldest boys wilted when he growled out "dunce" or "blockhead." He did not thrash often, as his scowl was enough to hush a whole school, but when he did thrash he meant business. One day a joiner passing along the road heard the most piteous howls and cries for mercy and help coming from the schoolhouse. Rushing in and handing his ax to Carlyle, he exclaimed:

"Jist doo't ootricht, mon, and no mince maiters."

Ingratitude.

"Were you ever really glad to hang a man?"

"Only once," answered the sheriff. "I had prepared him a hearty breakfast of steak, eggs, potatoes, waffles and coffee."

"Yes?"

"And the infernal ingrate demanded stewed oats instead."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Bad Society.

What you learn from bad habits in bad society you will never forget, and it will be a lasting pang to you. I tell you in all sincerity, not as in the excitement of speech, but as I would confess and have confessed before God, I would give my right hand if I could forget that which I have learned in bad society.—John B. Gough.

FORGAVE MRS. SIDDONS.

She Did Not, According to Her Father, Marry an Actor.

Mrs. Siddons, the actress, was born in 1755 at the Shoulder of Mutton inn, Brecon, south Wales, of parents connected with the theater, her father, Roger Kemble, being a strolling manager. The child Sarah was reared in a theatrical atmosphere, and at ten she was playing Ariel.

As she grew up she became very beautiful and had many admirers, among whom was Henry Siddons, a young actor in her father's company, who had little difficulty in winning the girl's heart. Mr. and Mrs. Kemble had made up their minds that Sarah should not marry in the profession, in consequence of which they strenuously opposed the marriage, and young Siddons in a fit of retaliatory humor composed a song detailing their opposition and his trials, which brought about his speedy dismissal from the company. Sarah left the company, too, and hired out as lady's maid in Warwickshire for two years.

During this time the lovers carried on a lively correspondence and finally, gaining the reluctant consent of the Kembles, were married at Trinity church, Coventry, in 1773, when Sarah was eighteen.

It is said that Mr. Kemble told her if she ever married an actor it would make him discard her forever. After her marriage he said, "I may forgive you without breaking my word, for you have certainly not married 'an actor,' whatever the gentleman himself may think is his vocation." This is on authority of Lady Eleanor Butler, who knew the persons.

JAPANESE SAINTS.

The One Most Beloved by the People Is Binzura.

Among the many Buddhist-Shinto saints, whose quaint effigies set up in every conceivable nook and corner of Japan make it a "country of graven images," one of the most impressive and interesting is the pathetic person called Binzuru. He was once upon a time a member of that strange company of Buddhist disciples known as the "sixteen Rakkan." But one day he fell from grace by remarking upon the attractions of a woman, and he was expelled from the society of chaste brethren. The great Buddha gave him, in return for all that his worldliness had cost him, power to heal human ills and to grant the prayers of childless women who longed for motherhood. But he was put outside the temples. He must henceforth sit without, in the midst of the passing throng, and submit himself to personal contact with all that was unclean and healthless. The simple hearted people love him. I think, above all saints. His wooden images in the temple porches are the strangest objects in all Japan. They give him soft cushions to sit upon, and he is always clothed in quaint little cotton stuff collars and mufflers in all sorts of soiled looking colors, and on his head his devotees usually keep a curious little cotton cap.—Eleanor Franklin in Leslie's Weekly.

The Young Member.

Grantley Berkeley tells in his "Life and Recollections" how a member for Ludlow in the last parliament of William IV. "tried to make a maiden speech, and, rising in his place, with a very bald head, known, too, as he was to everybody as one of the oldest stagers in all the ways of the world, he began, with great affectation of inexperience and with an exceedingly mild voice, 'Mr. Speaker, I am but a young member.' On hearing this assertion from so well known and crafty a man, possessing so venerable a pate, the entire house roared with laughter. Twice he stopped, and three times he commenced with these words, but it was useless. The house would not listen, and he never to my knowledge essayed to speak again, or if he did the sight of his bald head set his audience in a roar."

A Stupid Lady Bountiful.

I once showed an old lady much given to good works of the Lady Bountiful order how some proteges of hers who were constantly on the verge of starvation might be placed in possession of a small but regular and sufficient income. "My dear," she said, "I don't think it is a good plan. They would get too independent. I like them to come to me when they are in difficulties and ask for what they want." — "Rich and Poor," by Mrs. Bosanquet.

Tennyson Embarrassed.

Great crises affect people differently. With some the hair turns white; with others emotion expresses itself in inconsequent speech. Tennyson, when he first met Frederick Robertson, whom he much admired and who, he knew, admired his poems, was so nervous that he could talk to the "much beloved priest" of nothing but—beer!

MALE DRESS REFORM

IT IS HOPELESSLY HAMPERED BY THE STIFF WHITE SHIRT.

The Way This Garment Interferes With Both Health and Comfort. Some of the Absurdities of the Present Masculine Style of Attire.

The necessity by which men feel coerced of proving to the world that they wear white shirts lies at the basis of all the difficulties of the dress problem.

Until the garment becomes extinct it is hopeless to attempt the reform of men's dress on the lines of health and comfort.

It will of course ultimately disappear, for it is but the mark of a stage in the evolution of dress, just as the vermiform appendix is a useless evolutionary remnant in the body. But the question is whether we ought to await the slow course of evolution or to use our common sense and abandon the ancient garment at once.

Why do we wear white shirts? Ages ago it was only the wealthy who could afford to clothe themselves in linen. The possession of linen underwear was then a mark of social position, and there was an obvious advantage in making public display of it.

We may put down three-fourths of the discomfort of the hot summer to the account of the starched shirt. It prevents the very process devised by nature to keep the body cool—the evaporation of sweat. In so far as it hinders this natural process in summer, the white shirt favors disease. But in winter it is a fruitful cause of illness.

In winter the mere wearing of a white shirt would no doubt leave a man no better and no worse if he were content to wear it for his own satisfaction. But the curious law of evolution comes in and compels him to wear it in such a way as to do himself physical injury.

Wherever evolution is at work it leaves vestiges—literally, footprints. Probably it is millions of years since the vermiform appendix became a useless organ, but it still survives. All evolutionary survivals appear to be harmful. The appendix is the seat of appendicitis. In the inner corner of the eye there is the remnant of a once useful third lid, which now only lodges dust and causes irritation.

The lord chancellor's wig was once a comfort in ancient drafty legislative chambers and now merely serves to make a sensible man look ridiculous and give him headaches.

People who drew up laws were long ago paid according to the number of words, but the multiplicity of words now only causes confusion. So the white shirt that was once a badge of wealth and culture, being no longer of value for that purpose, is only a cause of discomfort and disease.

It is necessary to cut a piece out of the vest and the coat, just over the most important organs of the body, in order to prove to our neighbors that we wear white shirts. Consequently in the winter time we expose the lungs and the air passages to the cold wind and the cold rain.

From the point of view of health nothing could be more stupid. Bronchitis is one of the most deadly of all diseases in this country. Bronchitis is simply inflammation of the bronchial tubes. This inflammation is excited by a chill, a cooling of that part of the body left exposed in order to show that we wear white shirts.

The white shirt, in fact, might appear in the tables of the registrar general as the cause of so many deaths, perhaps 100,000 a year.

And does it really improve a man's appearance? By virtue of the association of ideas it certainly does. Usually men who do not wear white shirts are not given to cleanliness. The man who wears a white shirt washes his face and hands and brushes his clothes; hence when we see a white front and white cuffs we experience that pleasant sensation produced by general neatness of the person and clothing. But that a few square inches of white clothing over the chest makes a man look better is an absurd conclusion.

The case for the white shirt has not a leg to stand upon. The garment is uncomfortable, unhealthy and unbecoming. And as it has lost the only useful function it ever possessed—that is, its symbolism of exceptional wealth—we ought to discard it altogether. The difficulties of this course are very great no doubt. What we want is an "antiwhite shirt society," which would agree to wear, from some prearranged date, a dress designed wholly with regard for comfort, health and beauty.—T. F. Manning in London Gossip.

Making Love Up a Tree.

Billing and cooing among the Fijians is a curious feature in their social customs. It is decidedly against the rule to do any courting within doors. The gardens or plantations are the spots held sacred to Cupid, and the generally approved trysting place of lovers is high up among the branches of a breadfruit tree. You may often walk around a plantation on a moonlight night and see couples perched forty feet from the ground in the breadfruit trees, one on each side of the trunk, a position which comes fairly within the limits of a Fijian maiden's ideas of modesty.

Lord Rosebery's Definition.

THE HEADLESS BANDIT.

Queer Story From the Archives of the Vienna Courts.

Dr. Loye, a French physician, who greatly interested himself in the question, "What passes in the head of a decapitated human being?" related the following remarkable story, which he stated was taken from the archives of the Vienna courts: It was in the year — that Schoenenburg, a well known bandit, and four of his associates were caught and condemned to death. They were already on their knees ready to pay the penalty of their bloody deeds by submitting to the awful fate of decapitation when Schoenenburg addressed the judge, asking that his four companions might be pardoned on certain conditions. "If," asked the bandit, "after I am beheaded I get up and walk to the first of my comrades, will you pardon him?" The judge thought that he was pretty safe in complying with the request. "Then," continued Schoenenburg, "if I walk to the second, the third and the fourth, will you pardon them also?" The judge replied that if such a miraculous feat could be performed he would obtain pardons for the other three also. The bandit was now satisfied, and, bending his head, he received the fatal blow. Instantly the head rolled down in the sand, but to the surprise and horror of all present the headless trunk arose and walked alone. Aimlessly, it appeared, the body walked around until it passed the first, the second, the third and the fourth condemned bandit, when it fell down and became motionless. Query, "How could a headless body think?"

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Department Store.

The organization of a great department store is almost military in its discipline and is one of the best examples of what organization can accomplish. The proprietor is commander in chief, and under him are a number of assistants who are what might be considered district supervisors. Below them are the heads of departments, who are responsible to their district officer or to some other head. The floorwalker, the man who is so much in evidence because he spends his time in the aisles, is, in fact, a superintendent or foreman in charge of a department or series of departments. Each counter is under the general supervision of what is known as a head salesman, but this head salesman is subject to the direction of the floorwalker.—"Starting In Life," by N. C. Fowler, Jr.

The Huns.

The first mention of the Huns in history is in China B. C. 210. They conquered that country and were afterward driven out by the Celestials and marched clear across Asia, penetrating the country now known as Hungary in 376 A. D. CURIOUS INSECT.

A Butterfly That Enjoys Only Five Hours of Life.

It is in August that the naturalists observe the marvelous insect which is born, reproduces and dies in the period of a single night on the banks of the Marne, of the Seine and of the Rhine. It is the ephemere of which Sirammerdam has written and which is spoken of in Aristotle.

The life of this insect does not last beyond four or five hours. It dies toward 11 o'clock in the evening after taking the form of a butterfly about six hours after midday. It is true, however, that before taking this form it has lived three years in that of a worm, which keeps always near the border of water in the holes which it makes in the mud.

The change of this worm in the water to an ephemere which flies is so sudden that one has not the time to see it. If one takes the worm in the water the hand cannot be taken away before the chance is made unless by pressing the worm slightly in the region of the chest. By this means it can be taken from the water before the change takes place.

The ephemere, after leaving the water, seeks a place where it can divest itself of a fine membrane or veil, which entirely covers it. This second change takes place in the air.

The ephemere assists itself with the point of its little nails as firmly as it can. It makes a movement similar to that of a shiver; then the skin on the middle of the back breaks apart, the wings slip out of their sheath, as we sometimes take off our gloves by turning them inside out. After this stripping the ephemere begins to fly. Sometimes it holds itself straight up on the surface of the water on the end of its tail, flapping its wings one against the other. It takes no nourishment in the five or six hours which are the limit of its life. It seems to have been formed but to multiply, for it does not leave its state of a worm until it is ready to deposit its eggs, and it dies as soon as they are deposited.

In three days' time one sees appear and die all species of ephemere. They last sometimes until the fifth day, for the reason that some malady has affected some of them and prevents them from changing at the same time as the others.

A STUDY IN EYES.

Michael Angelo had hazel eyes.

Mohammed had coal black eyes.

Milton had gray blue eyes, clear and round.

Beethoven had small brown eyes, very mobile.

Dante had, according to Boccaccio, large black eyes.

Isaac Newton had blue eyes, small, bright and piercing.

Cowper, physically timid, had weak blue eyes devoid of animation.

Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, had small eyes, full of spirit.

Carlyle's eyes were described as "the very handsomest ever seen in a man's head—dark blue."

Bismarck had eyes of steely gray, deep sunken, almost hidden under bushy eyebrows.

Dr. Johnson's poor health so affected his eyes that they were dull and lifeless, of a watery blue.

Richelieu as an Editor.

The first reporter of France was Louis XIII. The National library possesses the manuscripts of thirty-six articles written by that king. Almost all are accounts of his military operations. These articles were published in the Gazette de France. The "copy," however, did not go directly to the printer. Louis XIII. wrote abominable French, and he had vague notions of orthography. His articles were corrected and often entirely rearranged by a secretary named Lucas, who copied them, sending to Richelieu the new manuscript. Richelieu examined it in his turn and often introduced additional corrections. At the siege of Corbie the king wrote a few lines eulogistic of the cardinal, but afterward crossed them out of his article. Richelieu wrote them in again, and so they appeared in the Gazette de France.—Revue de Paris.

THE WILD BALSAM APPLE.

Its Seed Holders Are Suggestive of Lace Purses.

In the brooks of autumn in certain places many little lacelike bags may be seen drifting along with the current or stranded by the shore. They are the inner coats or bodies of the wild balsam apples (Echinocystis lobata) which have dropped from the vines overhanging the stream and now float lightly away with their large seeds.

The green prickly bag of the balsam apple itself began to form in late summer, and by autumn it has withered and faded to a pale straw color. We may see the trailing vines with their shrunken pods decorating the brookside bushes far into the winter. The outer coat of the pod gradually rots away, and the inner bag or seed carrier is now released and exposed as a delicate, webby network of tough fibers. A thin skin or membrane fills up the space between these meshes, but that also falls away through the action of water and the winter storms until only the ball-like tissue of the "purse" is left. These little purses, being extremely light and buoyant, float far and wide over the submerged swamp lands in late autumn, carrying the seeds with them and so planting the vine in new situations. If, however, we take these seeds home with us and plant them there, Mother Earth will suitably reward us in the following year with vines of our own. They will spring up and spread rapidly until all the stone walls and garden fences are decorated with the tracery of their stems and star shaped leaves.—St. Nicholas.

COLD AND THE SEA.

Why the Metal Is Shipped In Bars Rather Than In Coin.

"When the banks ship gold across the Atlantic," said a banker, "they prefer to ship it in bars rather than in coin. It loses less that way."

"It loses less?"

"Yes, sir. If $1,000,000 in gold coins is shipped across the sea it is only $999,800 on its arrival. It loses from twelve to fifteen ounces, about $200, through abrasion, through knocking about with the motion of the waves. The sea makes gold lose weight, you see, the same as it does human beings. Gold bars lose less. In fine weather they will only lose about $100 to each million. In the ugliest weather they don't lose over $150, whereas in like conditions gold coins have been known to lose $300. As gold shipments of $10,000,000 often occur, to make these shipments in gold bars instead of gold coin is a saving of $1,000 or more. It is odd to think when you cross in one of those gold laden ships that every wave that hits the boat clips off 10 to 15 cents from its golden cargo."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Cruel, but Necessary.

The Eskimos dread the winter and take early precautions to provide against famine. As the season approaches the great herds of reindeer migrate southward, and the walrus or the seal are all that remain for food. When an in wind is blowing the walrus is easily found on the outer edge of the ice packs. When it is blowing off the shore, however, the ice packs sail out to sea with the walruses on them. The natives then class their numbers in a list from the strongest to the weakest. The food that is in store is divided up, the weakest having the smallest quantity, the strongest the largest. Thus the mightiest hunters have strength to provide for the others. It is a cruel system, but nevertheless a necessary one. If all were weak, all would die; if some are strong, they will save many of the weak.

The Largest Pipe.

What is described as the largest pipe in the world is valued at £8,000 and is counted as one of the most remarkable pieces of carving in existence. The pipe is made of one solid piece of meerschaum and represents the landing of Columbus. There are twenty-four figures in the scene, each one four inches high. The carver who executed this masterpiece is dead, and, as the demand for this sort of work has nearly died out, it is practically impossible to find a man to duplicate it.—London Telegraph.

Mouth Ulcers.

Little ulcers that appear in the mouth from time to time are exceedingly annoying and painful. An old fashioned household remedy is alum, the powder or crystals being applied to the yellow center. But this is a bitter, nasty dose. A physician has prescribed the use of a saturated solution of potassium chlorate, applied every two hours. "Saturated solution" means as much potassium chlorate as can be dissolved in a certain amount of water.

Lepers and the Law.

The Norman-English laws enacted that a leper had neither power to sue in any court nor to inherit property. During his lifetime he was permitted to enjoy the usufruct of any property in his possession at the time he was "found guilty," so to speak, of leprosy, but all rights of disposition over it he lost.

Tobacco Smoke and Flowers.

A remarkable effect of tobacco smoke on the color of flowers may be seen in the case of the field scabia named botanically Knautia arvensis, so frequently on the hills and commons from August till October. If its purplish blue blossoms, which form nearly globose heads, are held in the smoke of tobacco, their color will soon turn to a bright green, about the same color as the leaves.—Exchange.

"Well," replied the elevator man, "so it was safe to go up. You see, the dangerous part of it was comin' down."—Philadelphia Press.

MAKING WAMPUM.

A Process That Requires Both Patience and Skill.

With certain tribes wampum is still highly prized and necklaces are worn by men, women and children when they are the fortunate possessors of them. To make wampum various kinds of shells are used, white and those having a lavender hue being most liked.

The thin shells are broken into little pieces and by aid of nippers are made as nearly round as possible. When each piece is drilled in the center, the old time fire kindling style of drill being used, the shells are then strung and rolled with the hand on a flat stone, which grinds them until they are smooth and even.

Comparatively few Indians among those who prize wampum beads most highly have the skill or patience to make them, even though they had the materials. The fact is there are but few wampum bead makers in the country, and it often happens that long pilgrimages must be made to secure the requisites for really fine beads, and, as with the white man's trinkets, that which is "far fetched and dear bought" is most sought after for ornamentation.

Around some of the ancient ruins in the southwest the little disks of wampum are often found in the sand, and it is probable that they were deposited in the graves in very early times and washed out or exposed by the wind's action. These ruins are in the best state of preservation of any in the country. Absolutely nothing is known of their builders, and the origin of these ruins was as much a mystery when Coronado first saw them in 1540, when he made his famous invasion, as it is to the people of the present day.—Indian's Friend.

Oxygen and Mushrooms.

A singular way of removing oxygen from the air by the aid of a plant is as follows: Inside a glass bell jar, suspended over water, is placed a mushroom, and sunlight is allowed to fall upon the plant. The mushroom absorbs the oxygen from the air in the jar, and the carbonic acid formed during the process is absorbed by the water, which gradually rises in the jar to one-fifth of its height. The mushroom now dries up, but its animation is only suspended, as may be proved by introducing beside it a green plant, when it will recommence to vegetate, being nourished by the oxygen exhaled from the fresh plant.

After the joy which springs from right doing the purest and sweetest is that which is born of companionship with spirits akin to our own.

Redfern Plan Being Worked Out.

The special committee of the town on the abolition of the grade crossing are having the Redfern two bridges plan worked out by a prominent engineer. Estimates of cost of the bridges, land damages, etc., will be prepared and submitted to the committee for their consideration. This committee is on the right track in securing all the information possible in regard to this important matter, and while nothing was heard at the recent public hearing regarding the Redfern plan, yet it has more than considerable merit and many strong advocates who have carefully looked the ground over and see in the plan a good solution of the question. The findings of the committee, giving estimated costs of all the plans, will be placed before the citizens previous to the special town meeting in February, thus giving ample time to study them all and decide on the one that will be of the greatest benefit to Winchester.

Singular.

Carriers will deliver mail at any house in town, occasioning large expense to the government, without costing the receiver a cent. But the citizen who goes to the Post Office and gets his mail, saving the government the cost of delivery, has a quarterly assessment levied upon him for the alleged privilege, —that is, if he has his own box.—[Reading Chronicle.

How long do you suppose merchants would continue in business if they taxed customers for the privilege of carrying home their purchases. There is a deficit in postal receipts and this increase in box rentals throughout the country is for the purpose of assisting in wiping it out.

It has been said that if the government made as advantageous rates with the railroads as the American Express, a saving of $6,000,000 would be effected yearly in the transportation of mails.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Young entertained a large family party on Christmas day.

JOHN D. LONG ON SUBURBAN LIFE.

The Honorable John D. Long, in the opening article in the January Suburban Life, says: "What is suburban life to me? It is content, freedom, happiness. Brought up in a rural neighborhood, the instinct and ways of country life have always been my habit. Sometimes from official necessity I have lived in cities but it has always been with the feeling of physical limitation.

"In the country the smallest means can go a great way in obtaining the most delightful and refreshing recreation and happy occupations. There is always much to do in the way of pleasant puttering in and about the house which one would never think of doing in a city residence, and which combines exercise and open air with more or less useful work."

Suburban Life is on sale at Wilson's.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Not having heard anything of the High School secret societies for some months I supposed the young ladies and gentlemen composing them had yielded to the desires of the great majority of the people of the town, and allowed them to die a neglected death. But, Mr. Editor, in reading your paper of last week I see that they all are yet alive, which caused me much sorrow, and the feeling that the large sum of money expended by the town for High school education is in a great measure thrown away.

A MOTHER.

CHRISTMAS TREE EXERCISES

To the Christmas entertainment committee of the New Hope Baptist Church is to be credited a most pleasing event. The committee consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Richardson, Mr. M. McCarter, Mrs. Grant, who is the president of the Children's Busy Bee Club, Miss Georgietta Green and Jessie Harrell, musical director, who spared no pains to make the Christmas tree and entertainment the best ever held by the school.

The increase in scholars during the year has been 35 per cent. with an average attendance of 65 pupils.

The chief features of the evening were the chorus of 35 voices and the appearance of Santa Claus. After the distribution of the presents, Rev. Mr. Johnson introduced Rev. M. L. Harvey of Boston, who made some encouraging remarks of the work being done under the leadership of the pastor looking forward to the future church.

THE SIGMA BETA DANCE.

A very successful little dance was given Wednesday night in the Calumet Club hall by the Sigma Beta girls to their young boy friends. The hall was decorated very prettily with Japanese lanterns and umbrellas, and a number of cosy seats and corners were arranged about the hall. The matrons were seated in a very tastefully arranged corner under an enormous Japanese umbrella. The matrons were Mrs. Frank Carpenter, Mrs. George H. Gutterson and Mrs. E. H. Capen.

The music for the dancing was finely rended by members of Kanrick Orchestra of Boston.

Among those there were: Misses Margaret Hunt, Margaret Briggs, Margurite Power, Viola Sullivan, Marjorie Rolfe, Mary Nickerson, Edith Gutterson, Barbara Johnson, Rebecca Fernald, Bertha Waldmyer, Josephine Wingate, Gertrude Russell, Esther Parker, Marion Lovering, Ruth Smart, Helen Edlefson, Rosamond Capen, Gladys Mendum, Dorothy Power, Lillian Towne, Maud Gutterson, Joan Newell; and Winthrop Barta, Ralph Herrick, Royal Root, Paul Badger, Harold Webber, David Witmer, Lawrence Symmes, Harris Gilman, Lambert Hunt, Richard Hunt, Gordon Parker, Robert Carpenter, Harold Fultz, Robert Barr, Harold Hovey, Charles Richardson, Hebert Kelley, Robert Bean, Harry Smith, Stuart Rand, William Witmer, and Carroll Newell.

PROSPEROUS YEAR FOR B. & N.

The annual report of the Boston & Northern street railway company has been submitted to the state board of railroad commissioners.

The general exhibit shows gross earnings of $1,412,035.56 with operating expenses of $2,802,001.42, making the net earnings from operation $1,610,034.14.

The receipts from amusement parks operated by the company gave an additional revenue of $14,072.16.

The net devisable income after payment of interest on funded debt and loans, taxes, leases and park expenses was $679,401.35 Out of this there was paid the dividend at five per cent. amounting to $537,160, leaving a surplus for the year of $142,241.35.

The volume of traffic was follows: Number of passengers carried, 88,840,752; number of car miles run, 16,467,651; average number of persons, employed 2,582. The company owns 479 box cars and 614 open cars for use of passengers.

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Guild will be held on January 8, not on January 1, as previously announced in the calendar.

Sunday is the appointed day for recitations in the different grades of the Sunday School, of the memory work.

Monday, December 31, is the parish's annual day at the Sailor's Haven, for the concert in the evening. Those going from Winchester expect to take the 7.07 train. The concert is to be followed by a New Year's Eve service to watch in the new year. It is planned to have a special car at Sullivan's Square for those who wish to stay to the service. Further particulars may be obtained from Mrs. Mead who has charge of the entertainment.

The Annual Parish meeting comes Tuesday evening, January 8, and will be held in the church.

A grand Mass meeting of Churchmen will be held in Trinity Church, Boston, on New Year's Eve, Monday, Dec. 31st, at 8 p. m., under the auspices of the Diocesan Thank Offering Committee. Bishop Lawrence, Mr. George W. Pepper of Philadelphia, Secretary of the Central Thank Offering Committee, the Rev. Alexander Mann, D. D., and others will address the meeting. A great choir of men from thirty-two parish choirs in and near Boston will lead the singing, and an organ recital by Mr. Wallace Goodrich will precede the service. The floor of the church will be reserved for men, and the galleries for women, which will allow the men to bring their wives.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

A program suitable to the Christmas season will be given at The Fortnightly next Monday, when various members will describe their experiences as travellers in papers entitled "Christmas in Many Lands." Music appropriate to the occasion will be given.

The Treasurer wishes to call attention of members to the fact that annual fees are now due, and immediate payment will save the club the trouble and expense of formal notification.

Roy Richardson returned from Dartmouth College last week for his Christmas holidays.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

If the present telephone company would alone be affected by allowing a rival in its territory it would serve it right to permit it, as for years it fought and lobbied against being put under and regulating commission, and brought about the defeat of such bills in our legislature year after year and continued to do so even after it promised not to, but as it would be, the people that would be most seriously affected, the new company should not be allowed to come into this territory; but the present company should, as it can be, be compelled to furnish such service and at such price as is reasonable and nobody will seriously argue that any other company can afford to furnish better or cheaper service than it can. The Massachusetts plan of monopoly with regulation of public service corporations is far better than competition and the stronger the public service corporation with state regulation the better, both for the public and the stockholders. The reason that the public service corporations have not been better regulated is simply because the people have not exerted themselves. There is plenty of law to force it.

Apparently a large number of things connected with the buildings on the town lot on Linden street were not suitable when put in and have had to be changed and work done over again. To be sure the building committee has never been discharged, and it may have something more to say or a defence to offer. Why no rent was collected for more than a year for the occupied dwelling house on this lot certainly should be explained to the town.

Only about six weeks to the time for closing the warrant for the annual town meeting and perhaps ten days more to the distribution of the town reports with the warrant and the Appropriations Committee's report, with election coming March 4th, and as we are so slow here in politics it may not be too soon to begin discussing candidates and measures, for while some of our boards and officials are all right others need a shaking up.

We might have known that no committee of fifteen would get around on time, but like many other matters it went through in that shape for lack of backbone in the town meeting.

I understand that the treasurer and collector are to be bunked together into the auditor's old office on the first floor. That room is altogether too small for both these offices and a mistake will be made if it is done that way. What should be done is to move the Selectmen and Water and Sewer boards (who only meet once a week) upstairs and use the three first floor offices for those officials with whom many people have business frequently.

Wednesday of next week the Great and General Court of Massachusetts will come in with much stupid and undemocratic old pomp and ceremony, but with the committees carefully made up to suit the great interests and their friends among the people's supposed representatives, and then the annual farce will begin again its slow grind.

STORM INTERFERED.

The snow storm somewhat interfered with the attendance at the Christmas services in the churches last Sunday forenoon. There was a goodly number at the First Congregational Church who listened to the excellent sermon by the pastor. The musical part of the service consisted of selections from Handel's Messiah which were rendered most pleasingly. Mr. Charles W. Swaine was the musical director assisted by the following quartette and chorus:

Miss Mary C. Ogilvie, soprano; Miss Mae A. Young, contralto; Mr. Charles W. Swaine, tenor; Dr. J. Churchill Hindes, bass.

Sopranos, Miss Florence Chase, Mrs. Frank V. Cole, Miss Marion Cole, Miss Helen Johnson, Miss Marion L. Simonds, Mrs. George C. Squier, Miss Leslie Taylor.

THE DOMESTIC PROBLEM IN THE SUBURBS.

Yet why do we expect so much more in our maids than in our friends? Are not the qualities which go to make up the perfect housemaid rare even in those who employ them? Tireless industry, unruffled temper and unfailing skill are not common in any class of life. "Why do you expect Bridget to be so much better than you are, Aunt Jane?" asked one discriminating child of his impatient aunt, says Mrs. Bradley Gilman in the January number of Suburban Life, in a most suggestive article on "Kitchen Tyranny in the Suburbs." Mrs. Gilman goes into the question thoroughly, and we advise all people who have trouble with their servants, which is practically all people, to read this article and take to themselves Mrs. Gilman's suggestions.

Suburban Life is on sale at Wilson's.

BASKET BALL.

The High school team by defeating the crack Lowell H. S. in the High school gymnasium last Friday night, kept up its unbroken string of victories. The final score of the game was 41 to 29.

Lowell started the game with a rush and scored a number of times before the High school. The local five, however, through excellent playing drew even and led on the first half by 17 to 15. In the second half, the High school team by some clever playing drew ahead and won out.

Larivee, Grant and Thompson excelled for Winchester, while Donohue played the star game for Lowell High.

Between the halves, the High school second defeated the Lowell second by the score of 12 to 2. Dover and Howe played the best for the High school second while Kearney played well for the Lowell second.

The summary:

W. H. S.	LOWELL H. S.
Grant rf	lb Dow
Collins lf	re Reynolds
Larivee c	c Early
Thompson rb	lf Gendron
Webber (Capt.) lb	rf Donohue

Score, W. H. S. 41, Lowell H. S. 29. Goals from the floor made by, Larivee 7, Grant 4, Thompson 3, Webber 3, Collins 2, Donohue 5, Gendron 3, Early 2, Dow 2, Reynolds. Goals from fouls made by Grant 3, Gendron 2, Donohue. Referee, Swift. Umpire, Gutterson. Timer, Petts. Time, 15 minute halves.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The ever popular drama of Revolutionary days, 'Janice Meredeth" will be given at the Castle Square Theatre next week. It is a dramatization of Paul Leicester Ford's novel of the same name and its four acts present a series of scenes that are both interesting and exciting. American patriots and British soldiers give color and life and sensation to its plot, and there is of course, a heroine who performs valorous feats in the interests of her country. The action of the play takes place in New Jersey and at Yorktown, and the famous crossing of the Delaware by Washington, the battle of Trenton and the great American victory at Yorktown form an important part of the play. The cast will include Mr Hansel, Miss Lawton, and the entire Castle Square Stock Company. A week from next Monday there will be a great Shakespearean reproduction of "Twelfth Night" at the Castle Square, and on the 15th of January, Leah Kleshna, Mrs. Fiske's famous play, will be given.

Delay In Divorces.

"The underlying reason why so much time usually elapses between the filing of petition and the hearing or trial in divorce proceedings is not generally understood," remarked a lawyer who makes a specialty of this character of practice. "Perhaps it is within the circle of truth to say that in a majority of cases, if either husband or wife, whichever side be plaintiff, should 'stop, look and listen,' as it were, the trouble would be adjusted out of court entirely. As a rule, judges are inclined to afford ample time for domestic partners to ponder well before pursuing further toward legal redress for matrimonial difficulties. 'Divorce in haste and repent at leisure' is a logical paraphrase. Of course, if after mature reflection a different opinion does not ensue, the average jurist would favor progressing the suit."—New York Press.

ANOTHER GAS POISONING CASE.

Another victim of gas poisoning is registered at the Relief Hospital, Boston, to add to the unusual number of victims of the past few weeks. This case comes from the Central House, corner of Green and Pitts street, and is thought to be purely accidental. Frank Topp, 28, of Montreal, registered Tuesday and about 8 o'clock retired, apparently in the best of spirits.

About 6.45 o'clock Wednesday morning the night clerk in going to his room smelled the odor of gas coming from the room below, which was occupied by Topp. Hastening to the lower floor the clerk burst in the door of Topp's room, to find it filled with gas escaping from an open jet. Topp was lying unconscious in bed. He was hastily removed to the Relief Hospital.

STOPPED THE OVATION.

Richard Wagner's Peculiar Experience in Vienna.

When Wagner was at the height of his popularity he visited Vienna. Baron von Beust, then chancellor of the empire, was informed that the Prussian party intended to give him an immense serenade—a serenade which would have the air of German protest against the tendency of the ministry to make the union of Hungary and Austria more intimate. The demonstration promised to arouse strong feeling.

"Your excellency is warned," said the chancellor's advisers. "It is impossible to stop this manifestation unless Wagner goes away, and he loves ovations too well. Nothing will induce him to depart."

"You think so," said Beust, with a smile.

An hour later Wagner was invited to dine with the chancellor. He was flattered by the invitation and accepted it. After dinner, at which Beust was delightfully affable and entertaining, the chancellor remarked: "Herr Wagner, are you interested in autographs? I have some very curious ones to show you." And he opened a portfolio where were letters of Palmerston, Bismarck, Napoleon III., Heine and others.

Suddenly turning to a paper, dated 1848, he said: "Ah, look at this. It is very curious. What would your friend his highness the king of Bavaria say if this paper, which would be significant in connection with the political serenade which the Germans are going to give you, should be published tomorrow in the Vienna papers?"

The composer examined the paper and recognized, with surprise, an old proclamation of one Richard Wagner, who, an ardent revolutionist in 1848, had proposed to the youth of that time to set fire to the palace of the king of Saxony. He saw his autograph and that it might be the means of getting him into serious trouble.

"Very curious, is it not, Herr Wagner?" said the minister.

"Very curious, your excellency," replied his guest.

The next morning Richard Wagner left Vienna, recalled to Baireuth by urgent business.—Strand Magazine.

The "Man" Who Minds the Cows.

In the Basque country the children begin to work at an early age. They learn to herd and guide the oxen, which are used entirely for agricultural and draft work, and as if by instinct obtain complete control over the animals while barely able to reach their heads. The sturdy urchin of four years is up at daybreak, and barelegged and bareheaded he goes with the cows to the pastures. If one should stray on to a neighboring patch he is after it with his long stick and Basque adjurations and brings it scampering back, generally holding on to its tail meanwhile.—Strand Magazine.

Chills and Hot Baths.

Hot water bathing is beneficial in counteracting the effect of a chill. First, it makes another mischief worked by the chill. The latter has sent too much blood internally, so risking congestion. Heat brings the blood to the surface. Heat is not life, but it is one of the factors of life. Indeed, dissolution always occurs when the internal bodily temperature is greatly lowered. Heat will not keep a body alive and great heat will kill it. In many morbid states of the system, as rheumatism, hot baths are of great service. Warm baths are useless. The heat should be as great as can be borne without pain.

Fakirs.

Fakirs is the name given to a celebrated class of fanatics found in many parts of the east, but more particularly in India. Some of them will make a vow to continue all their lives in one posture and adhere to it strictly. Others never lie down, but remain in a standing position all their lives, upheld only by sticks or ropes under the armpits. They pretend to have subdued every passion of mortality.

Might Be Worse.

When the poet Wordsworth died an old lady at Ambleside lost no time in telling the mournful news to an old and confidential manservant. "Ey, ey!" quoth Thomas. "It's a great loss the doot, but efter a' it may not be sic a parlish loss as ye're coontin' on. Mrs. Wordsworth, they say, is a gey, clever body, and she'll be carryin' on the business, we may be sewer."

Jabez Hunker, J. P.

A Christmas Story

By Rebecca Ottolengui

Copyright, 1904, by Rebecca Ottolengui

JABEZ HUNKER, justice of the peace, signed his name with a painful flourish, tilted his chair, put the pen staff between his teeth in a horizontal position, smiled in an adolescent way and, picking up the letter which he had just completed, read it. This was the result of two hours of work, involving five rewritings:

Miss Amanda Givens, Present:

Dear Miss Givens—I am fifty-two years old. My birthday is the 4th of March. The reason why I tell you that is because up to the 4th of last March at 8 o'clock in the evening I had never seen a woman that I thought I wanted to marry. But while we were celebrating my last birthday with a little party in the evening a lady walked into the room with her brother just as the clock struck 8. Then I knew that I had made a mistake in being without a wife for so many years. She made me want to get married. She has been mighty nice to me the many times I have seen her since then, and at least a dozen times I have gone to her house to ask her to be my wife, but, somehow, every time I got there I thought it wasn't just the right way to approach her, so I concluded to do it by letter. I want you to let me know whether you think that is the best way. Of course there are never any "doings" at our house on Christmas, so if you think I was sensible to do as I have done just make some excuse to get your brother Jim to run over with you to our house tomorrow (Christmas) night, and your coming will be the best present anybody could give me. I'll know what it means, and I'll promise you not to say anything more about it until the next day. Just tell Jim that you promised to run over to see my sister Mary about something or other, so he won't suspect. The lady I love and would have asked to marry me if I had not been so plagued bashful is a schoolteacher. Can you guess who she is? Until Christmas night I will only sign myself, respectfully yours,

JABEZ HUNKER

Jabez read and reread the letter, which he flattered himself was written in a style worthy of the principal of the graded school at Willow Grove. After a last affectionate peep at the finish, which he regarded as exceedingly clever, he sealed the letter, took from the inner pocket of his coat a huge portemonnaie and was about to affix a stamp to the envelope when he stopped reflectively and, with a soft whistle permitted his chair to settle back upon its four legs.

"Gee whiz!" he ejaculated in a hoarse whisper. Then, raising his voice, he called:

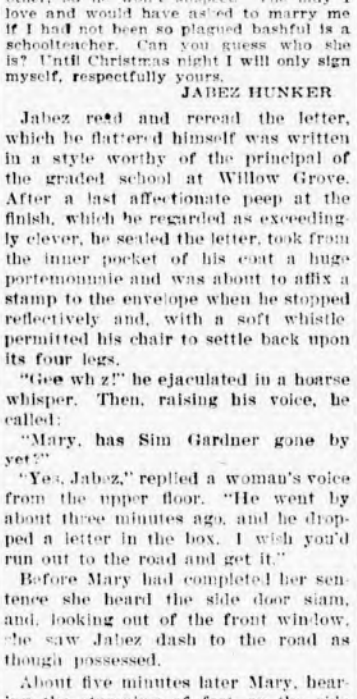

"Mary, has Sim Gardner gone by yet?"

"Yes, Jabez," replied a woman's voice from the upper floor. "He went by about three minutes ago, and he dropped a letter in the box. I wish you'd run out to the road and get it."

Before Mary had completed her sentence she heard the side door slam, and, looking out of the front window, she saw Jabez dash to the road as though possessed.

About five minutes later Mary, hearing the stamping of feet on the side stoop, rushed to the mirror, gave her hair a few perfunctory pats and ran downstairs. She opened the door only to be almost knocked down by Jabez, who was just entering and was blowing like a porpoise.

"What's the matter with you, Jabez? You look like you had the most important matter in the world on your mind." Mary observed, somewhat nettled, for she rather resented the disappointment of not finding a visitor at the door and seemed inclined to hold Jabez responsible.

JABEZ DASHED UP THE ROAD AS THOUGH POSSESSED.

"So I have, Mary. Sit down," Jabez almost peremptorily commanded. "I want to ask your advice about something."

Mary had begun to sit, for even to his sister he was the greatest man in the little section of very poor farming country over whose destinies in part he ruled as justice of the peace for more than twenty-five years.

"Mary," Jabez began after a contemplative and impressive pause, "you know Amanda Givens?"

Mary breathed a deep sigh of relief before she replied. She had judged from Jabez's manner that he must contemplate putting a mortgage on the farm or doing something equally serious. At last she managed to say, with a shade of her usual assertiveness:

"Certainly I know her, and I know what you are going to say. You want her to marry you, and you haven't got the spunk to ask her."

It was Jabez's turn to look surprised. "How—how did you guess it?"

Mary laughed for a full minute. "How did I guess it? There wasn't any guess about it. I'll bet Bossy knows it and would tell you if she wasn't a cow."

"Well, I don't see anything so funny about it." Jabez paused and meditatively scratched his short side whiskers, the only hirsute adornment he permitted upon his judicial countenance. "Do you—think—I stand any show?" Then, as Mary appeared to be suspiciously ready with her answer, he continued: "You know, she gets $8 a week teaching our district school in winter and $6 in summer. These self supporting women ain't usually in a very big hurry to marry."

"Hurry!" snorted Mary. "I don't call it being in a hurry when a woman gets to the age of thirty-seven. You are one of the most prominent men in this part of the country. You can support a woman all right, and I believe you'll make a good husband if you'll only shave off those things you call 'Burnsides' and don't try to interfere with my running of this house when you bring a wife home. Take my advice—don't ask her unless you mean it, for I believe she'll snap you up so quick it'll take your breath away. Who wouldn't marry into the Hunker family, anyway? It's the oldest family around these parts."

"You may be right," Jabez retorted wickedly, "but take your own case, for instance. Nobody seems to have been particularly anxious to get into the Hunker family in that direction."

"Oh, I've had my chances, and lots of 'em that you knew nothing about. But you asked my advice. You've got it, and I'm going back to my work."

"Hold on a minute, Mary. I didn't have the spunk to ask her. What you said was true, so I wrote her a letter"—and then, as Mary looked anxious—"which I ain't going to let you see. There's something in it about Christmas, and, as that is tomorrow, she couldn't get it in time unless the rural carrier took it with him when he went along today. I ran after him awhile ago, but the confounded snow is so heavy that I couldn't catch him and couldn't even make him hear me. So the letter is still in my pocket. I was thinking of taking it to her myself this afternoon."

"Then you would be a nice loon, Jabez. Why don't you mail the letter tomorrow and let it go at that?"

"That won't do," doggedly retorted Jabez. "She must get it by tomorrow morning, so she can"—

Mary impatiently arose, while Jabez, resting his elbows on his knees and dropping his head, began again to caress his "Burnsides."

After a few moments he called out to Mary, "I'm goin' over to Miss Givens', but I'll be back before dark."

He clapped on his cap, coat and tippet and within five minutes was trudging along the road in the direction of the Givenses' farm, two miles distant.

As Jabez was about to turn into the gate leading into the Givens dooryard he stepped behind a large butternut tree and put his hand in his pocket. He thought he would once more read the letter. It was important. In his cooler moments it might seem a little impetuous and undignified, and if there was one thing upon which Jabez prided himself it was his dignity. As his hand reached to the innermost recesses of the capacious inner pocket of his buffalo overcoat he gave such a start that the snow banked on his shoulders came tumbling down his length, like a shower of downy white feathers. The letter was not there. He retired a little farther down the road and made a more careful examination, but the missing epistle could not be found.

Deciding that he must have left the precious missive upon the table at home and accepting that fact as an omen, Jabez continued to the Givens home, where he spent a most delightful two hours with Miss Amanda, who happened to be alone, the rest of the family having gone to the village to make the final Christmas purchases. A dozen times when Miss Amanda smiled graciously and, as Jabez thought, encouragingly he started to speak right out, but each time he thought her expression changed, and he refrained.

On his way home Jabez passed Adam Wheeler, a neighboring farmer, on his way to the village. He had come from the direction of Jabez's house and was, as always, whistling, even while his head was bowed to the awful snowstorm. He started when Jabez hailed him with a cheery "Hello, Ad. Hope you and the folks 'll have a merry Christmas tomorrow."

"Same to you, Jabez," he replied and passed on.

When Jabez reached home Mary was smiling mysteriously and bustling about in a manner unusual to such a careful housekeeper whose Christmas preparations, with the exception of the inevitable turkey, had all been completed the day before.

"What's the matter, Mary? You're busier than you were when I left," Jabez ventured in the hope of staving off questions about his visit and his letter to Miss Givens. Meanwhile Jabez was poking over the ashes and the clock shelf. Mary did not deign to answer his inquiry; its purpose was too obvious. Instead she turned questioner herself and asked somewhat petulantly: "Whatever are you rummaging over those things for? Don't you know I've just put things to rights?"

Jabez was getting warm. His face had assumed the hue of a beet. "Mary, have you seen a letter I left here—THAT letter?"

"I haven't seen any letter at all. You didn't leave any here. If your letter is gone, you'd better start out on the road and look for it."

Jabez replied not a word, but followed the advice. Back to the point where he had missed the letter he toiled through the snow, but he might have looked for the proverbial needle in the haystack with much better prospect of success. He returned home disconsolate.

The next afternoon, after his Christmas dinner, Jabez, being still moody and silent as the sphinx, giving attention to nothing in the house with the exception of his beloved side whiskers, announced to Mary that he was going to the village and would not be back until late at night. Mary appeared unduly disconcerted. She begged Jabez to remain with her. It was Christmas, she urged, and he, as the head of the house, should be there in case any visitors should drop in or in case any one should come to see him about law business. To the first objection Jabez replied that if there was one day in the year when people would stay at home it was Christmas, and if any one should come professionally he wouldn't see them anyway. Anyway, it was a holiday, and he intended to celebrate it in his own way. Mary was nonplused, and Jabez, after going to the barn and attending to the chores, returned to the house to prepare for his long walk. As he entered the kitchen he was startled to hear a moaning which came from the upper rooms. He found that Mary had been stricken with a sudden attack which she called intermittent fever. Jabez felt her head, which was cool as his own. Mary mentioned that that was a peculiarity of that particular ailment and of her particular self, and she also asserted that she often had had them during the day, and they always passed off during three or four hours. Jabez looked at his watch; it was 5 o'clock. Resignedly he took off his overcoat and descended to the kitchen, where he nervously watched the clock. It seemed as if the hour hand would never get around to that much desired 8.

At half past 7 Mary descended and, telling Jabez that Mrs. Gilmore, who lived two farms beyond, was going to run in with some delayed washing and adding that she felt so much better that he might leave at 8 o'clock, succeeded easily in banishing him to his "courtroom" upstairs for a half hour's reading. As Jabez left the room Mary lighted the large parlor lamp and placed it close against the front window. Almost immediately there was a sound of shuffling feet on the side stoop. Jabez heard it, but did not move until the sound of many merry voices reached him. Then he came downstairs and was astonished to find the kitchen filled with his neighbors and their wives. He realized that he was the victim of a Christmas surprise party—something, incidentally, of which he had never heard. He looked for the one face he wanted to see, but it was not there.

The evening passed as such evenings usually pass—with senseless games and still more senseless "wit." Jabez had several times suggested that the guests should go into the parlor, but each time the plan was opposed with seemingly unnecessary vehemence by his sister and James Givens, Miss Amanda's brother. At 10 o'clock James announced that the pleasures of the evening would be wound up with the real surprise part of the party. He and Mary disappeared into the parlor, whence they soon returned, standing guard, however, at the door leading into it from the hall, to say that each person as the name was called was to proceed into the parlor, where a present would be found in the center of the room. The person was then to pass out of the other parlor door into the little hall at the foot of the front steps, leading upstairs, where the wraps would be found. Several names were called, and then Mary and James Givens, looking excessively important, shouted in unison, "Jabez Hunker!"

Jabez entered the parlor with the air of a man bored to distraction, who felt that he must, as the host, go through a farce with which he had no sympathy. As the door closed behind him he saw in the middle of the room a tall thing covered with a white robe. In the uncertain light Jabez determined that he was being made the victim of a practical joke, and, as that would impinge upon his dignity, he half decided to return forthwith. But, as there was no one looking, he determined to investigate. He grasped the white sheet, pulled it toward him, and there stood revealed—Miss Amanda Givens.

For once Jabez's self possession deserted him. He tried to speak, but no words would come. It began to look as though he would beat an ignominious retreat. Miss Amanda saw that something must be done, and done quickly. With head downcast she observed coyly, "I received your letter."

Then Jabez found his voice. "How in thunder did that happen?"

Now it was Miss Amanda's turn to be surprised. "Why shouldn't it have happened? Ad Wheeler came along about ten minutes after you left and told me he had found in the snow a letter addressed to me. Of course"—and she averted her eyes and blushed—"I understood as soon as I read it that you had told him to say that."

"But I didn't." Jabez protested vehemently. "I lost the letter in the road. Well, anyway, you're here. You've kinder, as you might say, kept your promise, so I'll keep mine about not saying anything more to you about this until tomorrow."

Again Miss Amanda blushed, but this time she did not avert her eyes. "Oh," she said thoughtfully, "I shan't hold you to that promise."

GRUB STREET IN NEW YORK.

A Gastronomic Assignment and the Fate of an Epic.

A story is told of a poet who came to the metropolis with a completed epic. This found no acceptance, so after cursing the stupidity of the public and the publishers he took to writing "Sunday stuff." Soon the matter of fact attitude of the workers around him, with the practical view of the market he acquired, led him to doubt the literary value of the work he had done in the sentimental atmosphere of his native place.

Frequently a commission to write a column of humor a week came to him, and he cut his epic into short lengths, tacked a catchline on each fragment and eventually succeeded in printing it all as humor at a price many times larger than the historic one brought by "Paradise Lost."

Another newcomer brought unsalable plays and high notions of the austerity of the artistic vocation. Three months after his arrival he was delighted to get a commission to write the handbook a utilitarian publisher proposed to sell to visitors seeing the metropolis. This commission brought not only a fair payment for the manuscript on delivery, but involved a vital secondary consideration. The title of the work was "Where to Eat In New York," and its preparation made it necessary for the author to dine each evening for a month in a different cafe at the proprietor's expense.—James H. Collins in Atlantic.

Be a Man.

According to the order of nature, men being equal, their common vocation is the profession of humanity, and whoever is well educated to discharge the duty of a man cannot be badly prepared to fill any of those offices that have relation to him. It matters little to me whether my pupil be designed for the army, the pulpit or the bar. Nature has destined us to the offices of human life, antecedent to our destination concerning society. To live is the profession I would teach him. When I have done with him it is true he will be neither a soldier, a lawyer nor a divine. Let him first be a man. Fortune may remove him from one rank to another as she pleases. He will always be found in his place.—Rousseau.

Hats In Parliament.

A member of parliament must never stand up with his hat on even if he has only risen to speak to the man behind him. Coming in, going out or speechifying he is always hatless, and he is sometimes hatless when sitting down. Thus if the speaker mentions a bill the member is responsible for he lifts his hat. If his name is mentioned in a speech he lifts his hat. Even if he happens at those times to be bareheaded he must seize a hat, put it on, then lift it.

Necessary Limitations.

Physician—I would suggest a diet. Patient—Well, it will have to be something that agrees with the cook.—New York Sun.

ANCIENT EMBALMING.

Not Only People but Animals Were Mummified in Egypt.

Myrrh, which was fabulously supposed to be the tears of Myrrha, who was turned into a shrub, was a plant of handsome appearance, with spreading, fernlike foliage and large umbels of white flowers. It was found principally in Arabia and Abyssinia. In early times the perfume distilled from it was greatly in requisition for embalming.

Herodotus gives a detailed account of the ancient mode of embalming which is perhaps more instructive than pleasing. After the body had undergone much preparation, which, to spare your feelings, will not be described, it was filled with powdered myrrh, cassia and other perfumes. It was then steeped in natron, a strong solution of soda, for seventy days. After this it was wrapped in bands of fine perfumed linen, smeared with aromatic gums.

Not only people were thus embalmed, but the crocodiles of Lake Moeris, which, after their mummification, were decorated with ornaments and jewels and laid in one of the subterranean passages of the great labyrinth with much pomp and display. The sacred cat, ichneumon and other cherished animals devoutly worshiped by the Egyptians were embalmed with scrupulous and fanatical care. On days special to the memory of the dead the mummies were newly sprinkled with perfume, incense was offered before them and their heads anointed with fresh oil—in the same spirit as we lay new blooms upon the graves of our dead.

WHISTLER AS A TEACHER.

A Genius Who Showed Difficulty In Imparting His Knowledge.

Whistler was certainly a genius, but he showed some difficulty in imparting his knowledge. His criticisms were often foggy and uncertain, and he hardly ever found words in which to express himself. It was almost an impossibility to develop without becoming a slave and copying him in every way. With a majority of the students this was a dangerous method. If one came with a spark of originality it was extinguished immediately by the dominating personality of the master. He could see art only from his own standpoint, and he insisted on all of us using the same palette and the same brushes as himself and on our seeing all objects with his eyes. The result to an ordinary outsider was ridiculously monotonous.

I well remember a Frenchman who wanted to join the class coming to view some of the studies and then remarking, with an amused smile, "Vous avez beaucoup des petus Wheestlairs!" This was perfectly true of the majority, but there were a few matured men who hardly carried out Whistler's formulas as regards the palette and method, but who, owing to their more independent attitude, profited much by the criticisms.—Century.

Voting In Paris.

"In Paris only one-fifth of the voters go to the polls and cast their ballots," said an American who has lived in Paris as a business man for several years past. "This is not because they cannot vote, but because they do not care to. Everybody in the city is interested in politics, but when the time to vote comes few care to go to the polls. The man who wins is most often the man who promises everything. For instance, in my district last time a man was elected who promised to put a new shed on the market. I know of another deputy who was kept in office fifteen years because he promised to add an extra sardine to the daily rations of the soldiers. There are so many soldiers that that made a big difference. They did not get the sardine, but he continued to promise and kept office."—Washington Post.

Man and Art.

In ancient times there stood in the citadel of Athens three statues of Minerva. The first was of olive wood and, according to popular tradition, had fallen from heaven. The second was of bronze, commemorating the victory of Marathon, and the third of gold and ivory—a great miracle of art in the days of Pericles. And thus in the citadel of time stands man himself. In childhood, shaped of soft and delicate wood, just fallen from heaven; in manhood a statue of bronze, commemorating struggle and victory, and, lastly, in the maturity of age, perfectly shaped in gold and ivory—a miracle of art!

Temper.

Temper itself is not a bad quality. It is not to be destroyed, as we sometimes say. Without temper a bar of steel becomes like lead. A man without temper is weak and worthless. We are to learn self control. A strong person is one who has a strong temper under perfect mastery. There is a deep truth here—that our mistakes and our sins, if we repent of them, will help in the growth and upbuilding of our character.

Fair Proposition.

"Don't you throw off anything because of the big holes in these doughnuts?" asked the new wife of the baker.

"I'll tell you," he replied, scratching his chin. "Eat the doughnuts, and we'll make a liberal allowance when you return the holes."

A Sleep Inducer.

Hicks—Did you hear about Macklin? They called the Rev. Mr. Dulley to his bedside last evening. Wicks—Do you mean to say he is in a dying condition? Hicks—Oh, no; only a bad case of insomnia.

CUTTLEFISH FARMS.

Where the Queer Creatures Are Cultivated to Be Milked.

Does any one know that cuttlefish are cultivated on farms to be milked? These cuttlefish farms are located on the coasts of Great Britain, and the cuttlefish are kept in tanks or ponds to be milked of their ink. The pond or tank is connected with the sea by a pipe, and a thousand or more cuttles are kept in a single one.

They form a most curious sight as they move about, trailing their long arms and staring out of their bulging eyes. They are guarded by screens which prevent them from being scared, for if they are suddenly frightened they will squirt their milk into the water, and it would therefore be lost. This fluid or milk is very valuable, and a cuttle will yield about $3 worth a year. It is secreted in a bag which can be opened and closed at will, the cuttle ejecting the fluid to darken the water so that it may escape unseen when attacked.

The best cuttlefish are procured in China, where for some reason or other they produce the best quality of milk. When the farmer considers it opportune to milk the cuttles he proceeds by opening the sluices of the pond and gently agitating the water. The cuttles then swim around the pond, and as soon as one passes through the sluice is closed. The cuttle passes down a small channel into a basin or metal receptacle, and as soon as it is securely there the water is drained off. It is then frightened and at once squirts the fluid from the bag. When it is exhausted it is lifted out, the milk is collected and the basin prepared for another.

MODERN CIVILIZATION.

Its Complexity, Hurry and Worry Shortening Our Lives.

Not long ago while traveling I chanced to stop at a village on the river Rhine, where I found an astonishing number of old people. There were a dozen over a hundred years of age and many from eighty years old up to the century mark, yet straight and vigorous. One woman nearly a hundred years old was earning her living by picking hops. Her grandchildren were middle aged. It was quite wonderful. But there was no mystery about it. It was merely the effect of a simple life spent largely in the fields, with plain diet, consisting of a few vegetables and fruits, little meat, and native beer and wine for beverages.

Nothing can be more obvious than that the very complexity of our modern civilization is shortening our lives. But of all the evils that afflict us the worst and most destructive are hurry and worry. Hurry drives the body machine beyond its capacity, while worry racks it inwardly. Of the two worry is probably the worse. This might indeed be called the age of worry. Because of the intense nervous strain to which we are subjected we do vastly more worrying than did our forbears. The average man of today is continually surrounded and pursued by phantom troubles, which, though few of them ever materialize into realities, haunt him continually, ruining his peace of mind and injuring his health.—Reader Magazine.

Getting Married.

I don't know myself what getting married feels like, but it cannot be much more exciting than watching other people getting married. Indeed, I always get something like palpitation of the heart just before the priest utters the final fateful words, "I declare you man and wife." Half a second before you were still free. Half a second after you were bound for the term of your natural life. Half a second before you had only to dash the book from the priest's hands and put your hands over his mouth, and, though thus giddily swinging on to the brink of the precipice, you are saved. Half a second after—

All the king's horses and all the king's men
Cannot make you a bachelor again.

It is the knife edge moment betwixt time and eternity.—From Le Gallienne's "His Quest of the Golden Girl."

The Name "Fife."

The origin of the name Fife is not known. One historian tries to show that it comes from the Celtic word veach, a Pict, and means that the district was inhabited by Picts, but that is obviously absurd, as Fife was not specially the home of any of the Pictish nations. The tradition that finds greatest favor is related by a monk, who states that the first known possessor of the district which has since grown into the kingdom of Fife was one Fifus Duffus, a famous chieftain whose date is lost in the mists of antiquity.

He Cheapened Pens.

Sir Josiah Mason was, according to his biography, walking in Bull street, Birmingham, in the year 1828 when he saw some steel pens, price 3s. 6d. each. Josiah was a hard up maker of split rings. No sooner had he seen the pens than he went home, made some better than those in the shop, sent them up to London and got a large order by return. At thirty years of age Mason's capital was 30 shillings. At sixty he had given away £400,000.

Hard Luck.

"Why does Baron Hoffman look so dejected lately?"

"Haven't you heard? He married a rich widow not long ago, and now a banker has absconded with all her money."—Meggendorfer Blatter.

In Egypt the cat was sacred to the moon, and when a cat died its master shaved off his eyebrows in sign of mourning.

To glance at it one would hardly realize that in gathering the facts for the legal advertisement in this paper, "Petition for Partition, John W. Johnson, Esq., and Judge E. F. Johnson, put in 25 year's work, that is to say, the job was undertaken 25 years ago, worked on continuously, and only lately finished, but such is the fact. To hunt up the 100 or more people interested in the Bacon estate, scattered all over creation, and do the necessary business with them, was a great undertaking. It will be noticed that the name of only one claimant is set down as "unknown," and this single item is what renders the advertisement necessary.—[Woburn Journal.

Mrs. John Raynolds of Washington street moved into her new house on Lincoln street this week.

The demoralized train service on the Boston & Albany Railroad is said to be due to the process of "milking" by the New York Central, by whom it is leased. The superintendent says it is due to frozen switches, fogs, inability of the engines to steam well because of the cold and finally that the train men are not able to see as well in the dark as they do in daylight. On that strictly New England road the Boston & Maine, there is no such quibbling and trains continue to arrive and depart on time, winter and summer. There is cause for thankfulness that Winchester is on the line of the Boston & Maine.

Parisians' Bread.

There is no city in the world where so much bread is consumed as in Paris. It is estimated that every inhabitant eats one pound a day on the average. Even in past centuries the French—especially Parisians—had a horror of stale bread. And, as in those days people manufactured their own bread, they had a curious way of making it palatable. Strange as it may seem, the bread they prepared—large round or square slabs—was used as a dish on which the meat was carved and bore the name of "tranchoirs," or "tailloirs." The juice of the meat having penetrated into the bread imparted a pleasant taste and prevented it from becoming dry.

High Priced Copy.

During the siege of Kimberley the editor of the only daily paper there was often hard put to find enough news. One day in a club room he found Cecil Rhodes reading a fairly new paper from Cape Town. He borrowed it and rushed to his own office, where it soon reappeared as a special edition, selling like hot cakes. That same evening he met Rhodes, who inquired, "Where's my Cape Town paper?" "Oh, I cut it up for the printers," was the reply. "Please don't do that again," said Rhodes mildly. "That paper came through my native runners and cost me $1,000."

DONT'S

DON'T buy Glasses over a counter and select them for yourself. You may select a pair that aids your vision for the time being, yet may prove most injurious.
DON'T buy cheap Glasses; such lenses are imperfectly ground and unlike.
DON'T read in bed or on a moving train.
DON'T read without your Glasses or with some one's else.
DON'T continue wearing your old Glasses when you feel that they are not just right.
Its So Easy to Have Them Right.
